"Now I am satisfied with just ordinary creature comforts, and when my children and grandchildren ask me what I want for a birthday or Christmas present I am hard put to think of anything I really wish for. I have the home I love, food I like, my chair by the fire, my books, my old friends, the pleasures that I still enjoy, and I am content. And when I read of the women who are doing great things in public life and giving grand parties I thank Heaven it is they and not I.

"Then I've quit borrowing trouble. I've learned to trust life and know that it never quite let you down. There is always a tomorrow and the sun rises after the blackest night.

"That is the secret of happiness that takes years of living to find out. Youth does not know it. It doesn't know that what Fate takes from you with one hand it gives back with the other. It doesn't know that nothing lasts, neither joy nor sorrow, and that if no pleasure is quite as keen as we thought it would be, neither is any trouble so bitter.

"It is youth that suffers. Not age. It is youth that is filled with despair. Not age. It is youth that beats upon its breast and cries out that this is the end of things if it is balked in its ambitions or desires. We old ones take our disappointments calmly because we know from long experience that if we can't do what we want to do at the moment, something better comes along after a bit, and we have seen so often that the thing we had set our hearts upon would have been our undoing if we had got it.

"Then by the time you are 70 you have acquired a philosophy of life. You have learned how to take it and like it, as the slang phrase goes, no matter what it brings up. You have learned how to make the best of things and you have quit kicking against the obstacles which only bruise your own shins and get you nowhere. You have learned how to get along with people, how to walk around their angles instead of bumping into them. You have learned to take the things you enjoy and leave the balance. And you have learned, most of all, to find your happiness in yourself.

"And age furnishes you with the great and unassailable alibi. It gives you the best excuse coming and going that has ever been devised for doing what you want to do and leaving undone what you don't want to do. I, for instance, am too old to play nursemaid to my grandchildren, but I am young enough to belong to clubs and go to parties. And so when I think of the advantages I enjoy, I wonder that anybody should pity age. It has so many more privileges than youth."

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am going with a man who tells me he loves me and some day wants to marry me, but says we have lots of time to marry in. He is 36 and I am 34. Do you think that there is no hurry about us marrying?

MISS S.

ANSWER:

I think a man of 36 who is still dilly-dallying about marriage and putting it off never intends to marry at all and that there is no use in your waiting for him. You don't want to arrive at the altar on crutches.

How'd You Like Hubby in Color

NEW YORK, July 25 → (CP). — Now, girls, you can buy smarter and more colorful sports clothes for your husbands this summer. The new tricks in shirts, slacks and sandals will make you both take notice.

Color is the big news. Men are going to wear more of it this summer than ever before, says the director of one of New York's leading men's sports wear shops. The foremost shades are grey-green, blue, luggage tan, red rust and natural beige.

This is also the first year when the European idea of shirt and slacks has been adopted by men in the East, though it formerly found favor in California. The summer's costumes for country wear and golf combine a shirt and slacks made of linen, homespun cotton or acetate suiting in one of the new colors. (Some men like to contrast them.)

Some men also like to wear one of the new summer mufflers—a scarf of foulard or terry cloth—tucked inside the open neck of the shirt. The news in casual country coats is a collarless jacket of the cardigan type made of tropical acetate mixed suiting or gabardine in a soft neutral color.

The 1938 sports shoes for men are a story in themselves. First come the slippers—a cross between a moccasin and a house shoe, inspired in design by Swedish shoes and carried out in soft leathers. They are said to spell comfort in big letters and country smartness in Italics. Then come the heavy-soled shoes that are a big fashion note this year.

Sailing clothes include slacks and shorts in faded blue denim. The smarest swimming trunks are machine-knitted of wool and reversible —one side being blue, for instance, and the other grey.

Shorts of gabardine or flannel, worn with a short-sleeved, knit lisle shirt are the thing for tennis, badminton or squash.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Everything worthwhile costs something, altho' there may be no label on it. A home costs something. First of all, the house and furnishings mean a big outlay. Then there is love, forbearance, helpfulness, and sacrifice—things that make a house a home . . . Nor should we think only of our own home; are we not responsible also for the well-being of the homes of others?"—V.A.

Dear Friends:

Yes, everything we value costs something, not always in money, not alone in service, but the cost is there, and we must pay it else we lose it. There is much talk of falling in love, but how very little talk of building love up.

So many think that loving or liking a person is enough. But they do nothing about having a person love them. Some also think a nice home is enough, keeping it clean is all that is expected of them. But, if there is nothing of themselves given, just this liking or loving, the thing is empty and not worth any price.

Why build for a house if you don't build for happiness. A chair is just a chair, furniture can be seen in many stores, but when mutual love binds these things all together, then you have a home. We say of someone, that she should be happy, she has such a lovely house, but if love, and forbearance, and understanding, and sacrifice for each other's good is not there, there's nothing to it.

Love is not merely words. So many will say, "I love you," then proceed to show you it is themselves they love. It isn't you, it's what you can do for them they love. They want you where they can find you when they need help, but make sure they are not where you can find them, if you need anything.

The thing has to work both ways. If you are friendly to someone you will try to please them; if you value them, you will pay the price of kindness, of forbearance, of listening to their troubles as you want them to listen to yours.

You may think you are getting by without paying the price, but generally what you get for nothing is worth just that, and no more. You must be interested in others, if you want them interested in you. You must pay the price of being careful of their feelings if you want your own not to be hurt.

Don't forget, either, you can spend more time trying to avoid paying the price, than you would in paying it. We all think anyone is a poor sport, a cheap person, when they let others pay the cheque all the time. We have no use for such a person.

How little use then, is there, for the ones who will not pay the price of human relationship, who want everything, but who give nothing. We want full value from others, in appreciation for what we do, and we also should be prepared to pay full value for what others do for us.

Not that I would have things on a dollar and cents basis. There are things that no money could buy, that is what I mean. The more you take without giving, the less the other fellow has, and if you fool him with empty words, he will shut himself away from giving at all.

So, if you love a person," say it with flowers." Not just the ones from a garden or hothouse, but the actions which flower from your love of them. If they give pleasure to you, don't be a piker, but give pleasure to them.

What is there gerater than love, and what is so often made a travesty and a mockery of than this same love? How prodigal some are with the love that is given them, using it for their comfort and benefit, and how miserly about returning some for the comfort of others.

Henry Ward Beecher tells us: "Love cannot endure indifference. It needs to be wanted. Like a lamp, it needs to be fed out of the oil of another's heart, or its flame burns low." So, if you want love in any form, pay the price in love from yourself.

Your friend, ROBERTA.

Helpful Hints For Housewives

Blueing should be added to the last rinsing water and thoroughly dissolved before putting in the washed clothes. Avoid using too much. Thin fabrics need less blueing than heavy materials.

✧ ✧ ✧

Garments made of materials which are not thoroughly colorfast should be rolled in dry towels before tubbing, with additional towels spread inside to prevent layers of the material touching and colors running into each other. Iron as soon as sufficiently dry.

✧ ✧ ✧

Garments hold their shape better when pressed along the weave of the fabric, rather than across the weave. Press completely dry. Clothing put away even slightly damp is apt to be wrinkled and lack freshness when put on.

✧ ✧ ✧

Denmark will encourage the eating of more citrus fruits.

Do This If You're NERVOUS

Don't take chances on harmful opiates and products which you know nothing about. Use common sense. Get more fresh air, more sleep and take a reliable, time-proven medicine like famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots—let it help Nature tone up your system and thus calm jangly nerves, lessen distress from female functional disorders and make life worth living.

Economical Towels Not Cheapest

Since towels are required to stand much hard wear and frequent launderings, it's real economy to buy best quality. When purchasing Turkish towels, look for merchandise that has a firm tightly woven salvage and smooth, well-finished hems; the basic weave should be close and firm; the pile soft, thick and even. Never iron Turkish towels; wrinkles will shake out. Loose ends or uneven threads should be clipped off evenly, never pulled.

Needlepoint Art Is Being Revived

TORONTO, Ont., July 25. — The needlepoint display at the Canadian National Exhibition will this year be staged in the east end of the Women's Building instead of the western section, where it has previously been arranged. In the belief that fewer pieces can be displayed to better advantage, the exhibits will be confined to a limited number of choice pieces.

Mrs. Paul Matthews, daughter-in-law of the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, is among those to contribute to the loan exhibit—her piece being a stool of intricate design made by herself. Mrs. Herbert Bruce, wife of the former Lieutenat-Governor, and an ardent devotee of the needlepointcraft, whose Chippendale chairs and bellrope elicited much admiration in former displays, is also loaning a piece. Mrs. Richard Southam who will lend one of the finest wall panels, about 200 years old, of Oriental design, in fruit and flower patterns, featuring a large "cockatoo." A Louis XVI. chair and a fender bench in petit point are other loans. An old piece is a beautiful fire screen depicting a Biblical scene.

A chair used when King Edward VII. visited Canada as Prince of Wales will be among the outstanding pieces in the needlepoint and petit-point display. It bears the British coat-of-arms.

The loan exhibit and the annual C.N.E. competition have done much to revive this ancient craft which was considered a major accomplishment in grandmother's day, but which had lain dormant for several decades.

A "must" from an autumn style angle is the crisscross sash enfolding the bodice and encircling the waistline. It is nice for introducing color into the dark dress and for adusting a fitted line to suit a wearer's figure.

A Threat To All Of Us

Vancouver Island has a forest fire to which the word tremendous has been applied and there is reason to believe the word is properly used.

As serious as the fire itself is the plain admission by Premier Pattullo that wreckers had attacked the fire fighting equipment kept in readiness for dealing with such a situation. Lines of hose had been deliberately cut and pumps had been so injured that they would not work when the emergency arose. A body of traitors could not strike at a country with more deadly effect.

The Premier in his statement is content to say that "malign influences are at work in our midst." There may be good and sufficient reasons at the moment why he should muffle his words and be content with the use of a general statement.

If there are malign influences at work —and there are—then it is something which concerns the entire Dominion and every province in it. If there are people within our borders who would wreck the fire fighting equipment in British Columbia forests then they would do the same in any other province where timber grows. Every ounce of energy we possess must be pressed into service to run to earth these "malign influences." They constitute a distinct and an open threat to the entire people of the Dominion.

Padlocking a Man's Home

The province of Quebec now has a case on its hands which shows in a plain enough way what happens under the operation of its "padlock law." That law was passed by the Legislature of the province to provide what it claimed would be an effective weapon for combatting communism. Under it any building which is used for printing literature for the communists, or where they are holding meetings or carrying on propaganda can have a padlock placed on it. A good many appeals were made to the Federal Government to have the Act revoked, but a statement made by the Minister of Justice indicated Ottawa intended to leave the situation alone. The general argument of the Minister was that if Quebec decided to combat communism that way then it should be allowed to do so.

F. X. Lessard of Quebec City is a carpenter, 40 years old; has a wife and two children. There was found in his home copies of a French language paper which was banned several months ago because it was a communist publication. We have not seen it stated that Lessard is a member or officer of a communist organization, but even if he were that would not be considered a crime in British territory. His house was padlocked and his wife and children were evicted. When Lessard returned home from his work in the evening he removed the padlock and entered the premises on which he is said to have a lease which has several months to run. Officers were waiting for him to do something like that and he was promptly arrested.

Apart from what the Quebec Legislature may or may not think about such a law there is the underlying principle of British law which cannot well be ignored and under that law a law-abiding man's house is regarded as his castle into which not even the King himself could enter without permission. That at least is the theory of law. We cannot but think that the provincial authorities in Quebec are off on a detour, not only from the standpoint of British law as it looks upon a man's home but from the broader view of having taken the wrong way to combat communism. The authorities are undoubtedly causing the man Lessard a great deal of inconvenience, but they are actually making a martyr out of him. No leader of a communist group would ask for any better ammunition for present and future use than the Quebec authorities are providing right now.

A Story That Shrinks

There has been no lack of reading matter regarding the will of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, nor has there been scarcity of news dealing with W. Perkins Bull, K.C., at whose home in Toronto Mrs. Sidley lived, and who was named as one of the beneficiaries under the will.

We read that Mr. Bull has been questioned long hours by the officers of the inheritance tax division of the Ontario government.

The one most notable thing is the shrinkage which seems to have fallen upon the figures used in these various stories. When the first reports were issued Mr. Bull was said to have inherited $3,000,000. In the earlier stages that was considered a conservative estimate because the sum mentioned was often enough stated to have exceeded $4,000,000.

The report from Racine, Wis., where the will has been probated, says Mr. Bull has been left $850,000. That we admit is a goodly sum but it is just about 25 per cent. of the amount first named.

The first reports had it that the estate was worth $9,000,000, but the report from Racine, Wis., places the figure at $2,300,000, and that is also about 25 per cent. of the first-named valuation.

Some of the old-time editors used to have a little sign nailed on the wall of the room where reporters turned out their copy, and there were but three words in it—"Get It Right." After having followed the story of the Sidley millions and the extent to which W. Perkins Bull, K.C., participated in them it does seem there is need for that old sign to be dusted off and placed once more where it can be readily seen.

Science Cuts Two Ways

London makes plans on the assumption that the city is liable to experience air raids. There is no way of computing the amount of money which has been spent and which will be spent for bomb proof stations, for masks, for the carrying out of drills and all such preparations. It is related that the plans have extended to the London Zoo.

In case the dangerous beasts there were released by reason of an explosion it is planned they will be shot because it would be highly dangerous to have them running at large. The damage they could do would not be comparable to that wrought by a modern bomb, but present plans are they must be shot. Venomous serpents will be killed on the sounding of an air raid alarm, that is unless they happen to be the valuable specimens, in which case they will be stored in metal boxes and taken to the cellar. Of course these serpents are not so poisonous on a large scale as a gas attack, but people do not like to have them loose.

There have been a number of incidents in recent years which show what the air raid can do. That is why London prepares, although it must be difficult enough to safeguard everything. People could be attending a church service when a raid came and if a bomb were well placed there would be few of them left. A surgeon and his helpers might be in the midst of a critical operation, and if the hospital were struck or the power and lights interrupted there would be a crisis right away. Old folk who could not move readily from one place to another would likely have difficulty in reaching what might be designated as a place of safety.

The London Zoo has taken years to create; men have gone to the corners of the earth to make it possible; the great hospitals of that city represent centuries of service and good works; they indicate advancement in the fight against disease. Science has had a good deal to do with creating a number of the useful and highly necessary places in London, and science has also been much to the front in devising planes and bombs which can destroy them. We can come to no other conclusion than that the war-maker is the world's greatest enemy.

No Love There

The visit of the Royal couple from Britain to the French capital emphasized something which has been known for a long time—that is, the friendly feeling between the two countries. The real problem in Europe is the feeling between France and Germany. It is not good today; it has not been good for years, and we are moved to doubt if it will improve beyond the state of armed neutrality. It is something which smoulders like the feeling between the North and the South in United States. Those who travel in Germany and France are bound to encounter it.

It became acute during the Franco-Prussian wars and it was never healed. It was made greater by reason of the war of 1914-18. The German explains it this way: "We had France defeated; we could have gone in and taken Paris and dictated our own terms. That is what we desired to do more thany anything else, defeat France, but in the end we found that France, through the aid of her allies, was in the position of dictating terms to Germany."

Even if they have changed the form of government in Germany we do not believe it is possible that they could have changed the minds of the people on that point, and it is doubtful if there has ever been an official desire to do so.

The Grasshoppers Come?

It had been estimated that United States will have an exportable wheat surplus of 400,000,000 bushels this year, and those who are in the business of making predictions place the Canadian surplus at 300,000,000 bushels. It is not a serious matter to add those figures together and find a total of 700,000,000 bushels, and it is known that is as much wheat as can be used the world over in a year.

There have been plenty of wires coming from the West telling Ottawa that the Canadian Wheat Board should at once set the price for 1938 at 87 1-2 cents because at present it looks as though the delivery price were going to be around 70 cents. It is argued in Calgary that a low price in the West would set a low price for the world, but that argument is not good enough. It would mean, if true, that Canada could name a high price for wheat and the world would adopt it. That is too good to be true. Liverpool generally has the last word to say in world prices for wheat.

One cannot but wonder how it is that certain press reports seek to make grasshoppers operate in the West to an extent which would be ruinous when as a matter of plain fact there has not yet been a serious infestation. Certainly a serious attack by grasshoppers would send up the price of grain and it would affect the outlook and confidence of many people in what is taking place in our own country. Sending out reports which are plainly false about disaster overtaking our wheat lands may be one smart effort employed by those who want to drive up the price of wheat or who want to see the price set at a figure higher than circumstances warrant.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Ontario Conservatives will have an election this fall anyway. They have to chose a new leader.

People used to make more use of things they had in the house than they do now. Remember the time when a napkin ring used to do service as an egg cup?

Hon. M. F. Hepburn when in Edmonton the other day told a reporter he was a Liberal, but not an admirer of Hon. Mackenzie King. That must be the Mr. Hepburn who is premier of Ontario.

That story of Corrigan's about starting out for California and landing in Ireland sounds somewhat like the report given by a husband who returns home at three in the morning.

The fact that Corrigan had no desire to try and make a return flight across the Atlantic has much to do with explaining how he managed his initial trip.

HANDICAPPED

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Wee Angus' hound is not well trained, a thing that often gets explained, he don't act like he should; his brains may be in place all right, but lots of times he's none too bright, and don't act none too good.

¶ When friends or neighbors come to call, they don't ask for the hound at all, they bother not with him; Wee Angus though will show up then, no matter where he's been or when, and call his hound dog in.

¶ Wee Angus seems to take some pride, in calling of his hound aside, to show the things he'll do; for he stands up on his hind legs, and sort of yowls a while and begs, a trick not very new.

¶ The trouble with the hound is plain, and most times he will do the same, he sort of sags his knees; he spoils his tricks before he's done, sometimes before he's well begun, he stops to scratch his fleas.

¶ Wee Angus has another trick, the hound will go and fetch a stick, I've often seen it done; but when there's company around, that hound just squats upon the ground, more scratching is begun.

¶ Wee Angus gets annoyed I know, when he tries hard to stage his show, the hound's tricks never please; he's got dog soap and powder too, he says the hound's tricks can't go through — till he's chased out the fleas.

Army Worm Was Beaten On Farm Near Port Hope

The manner in which an invasion of the army worm on a farm near Port Hope was handled with apparent success is told by Dr. J. Reynolds in a newspaper article. Dr. Reynolds, now interested in dairy farming and a frequent visitor in this city and district, was formerly president of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph.

I AM WRITING THIS not from hearsay, nor from newspaper reports. On my son's farm near Port Hope there has been an invasion of the army worm. For the past week little has been done on that farm but fighting this loathsome pest.

The invasion was first seen at mid-afternoon on Sunday, July 10, during the usual Sunday inspection. We were passing a field of ensilage corn, and noticed that the crop looked ragged and unthrifty. Close examination revealed the army worm, with which we had both become acquainted twenty-four years ago at Guelph. It was apparent that unless something was done at once the corn crop was doomed. Further inspection found the worms in a barley field close by. They were stripping the leaves and eating even the beards on the heads of barley. An oatfield just west was found to be badly infested.

Some specimens were gathered and bottled, and we drove to Bowmanville, to consult Mr. Summers, our Agricultural representative. Like all "Reps", Ed was at once on the job. In the early evening he came to the farm, and together we decided that the worms on the corn must be dealt with immediately. Fortunately, we had in stock some arsenate and a bag of hydrated lime. These were mixed, and the poison put into small jute bags. Five of us, including Mr. Summers, Stanley Mead, our efficient farm helper, and his brother-in-law, each armed with a bag, shook the poison through the mesh hill of corn in that patch. It was 11 o'clock when we returned to the house. As it happened, it was bright moonlight. This dose sufficed to "liquidate" the worms that had invaded the corn.

During this week we have followed two methods in fighting the pest—poisoning and trapping. When the worms are actually feeding, as in the corn, a plain poison is sufficient. When they are on the ground and on the march, a poison bait is needed. Bran, molasses and paris green, thoroughly mixed, and scattered on the ground where they are moving makes them curl up and die. The oatfield and the barley field were treated with poison bait.

We found that the south side of the oatfield only was infested. To keep them there we dug a trench getween the two parts of the field —a trench 18 inches deep, 1 foot wide and 600 feet long, with smooth perpendicular sides. Here and there along the trench a deeper hole was dug. Also trenches were dug between the oats and the barley, and between the barley and the corn.

ON WEDNESDAY evening I examined the "trap" through the oatfield. Thousands upon thousands of the crawly creatures had fallen into the trap in their attempt to find fresh fields and pastures new. The hole at the east end of the trap was two inches deep with them. Of course, they were trying to climb out of the trap. Up an inch or two they would reach, strike a loose crumb, and tumble back to the bottom. To make assurance doubly sure, I sprinkled poison bait along the whole length of the trench. Next morning they were still there, and every larva was dead.

It seems now that the plague in our fields is pretty well abated, although we do not intend to relax our vigilance.

Do not imagine that with our small farm force alone we have been able to do all this work of poisoning and trapping in these few days. The farm has had hundreds of evening visitors, curious to see the army worm in action, and the means taken to fight them. We have had other visitors, neighbors, who came with pick and shovel to help dig the traps and to scatter the poison bait in the fields. On Monday evening twenty men helped to sow the bait. On Tuesday thirty neighbors turned out to dig the trap through the oatfield. That sort of neighborliness is a real factor in the life of this rural community. The only reward they looked for, or would accept was a cup of tea and a bite to eat, and a word of thanks.

Flocks of starlings have been hovering over the infested fields all the week, and have helped considerably in abating the plague.

Science, too, has come to our aid, as it comes to the aid of every farmer in Canada who seeks that aid. A. W. Baker, Professor of Entomology at Guelph, visited the farm on Monday and gave directions for the attack on the invading horde.

Without some knowledge of the life history and habits of our insect enemies, we should be helpless. We should be obliged to echo the words of the prophet Joel:

The land is as the Garden of Eden before them,
And behind them a desolate wilderness.

QUEBEC OLD-FASHIONED.

(Windsor Star)

DISCUSSING FASCISM in Canada, the current issue of the magazine Life, in addition to devoting several pages to pretty pictures of Adrien Arcand and all the lads, declares the movement has raised a commanding voice "only in French-speaking Quebec, with one of the lowest standards of living in the Dominion." A lot depends, of course, on what one accepts as a standard of living.

If it is evidence of backwardness for a people to retain its faith in the face of an age that is constantly becoming more godless, to reject divorce and race suicide, to raise large families, to regard the home as the keystone of civilization, to have a crime record far below most other parts of the world, then Quebec indeed has a "loy standard of living."

• Each Family In U.S. Owes $1,275.

(New York Times)

THE $4,000,000,000 deficit which the President stated was probably for the Federal Government's 1938-39 financial year promises to carry our national debt over the $40,000,000,000 mark for the first time in our history.

Before the war the national debt had stood for there decades at only a little above $1,000,000,000, its high point in our entire pre-war history having been the then stupendous figure of $2,678,000,000 in 1865, at the end of the Civil War.

The World War expenditures carried it over $25,000,000,000 in mid-1919, after which it gradually fell during the booming "new era" days to slightly more than $16,000,000,000 in 1930.

Thereafter, as the depression settled, down over the world, and our government embarked anl lorge-scale relief and new economic policies, the debt rose by leaps and bounds, with the result that the national debt in 1939 will probably be around two and one-half times as large as in 1930—an increase of more than $24,000,000,000 in nine years, utterly without precedent in peace times.

For the average family this means a debt of approximately $1,275 for which the family's wage-earner is ultimately responsible, in addition to and beyond any private debts that he may have. And he must pay interest on it in the form of taxes—in addition to the usual taxes for the ordinary running expenses of his government.

State and local governments also have a large indebtedness which adds considerably to the foregoing. Estimated at nearly $17,000,000,000 in 1929, this non-Federal government debt has probably not increased a great deal in the last few years, when the main burden of relief has been taken over by the Federal Government.

Taxes Greater Than Dividends

(Detroit Free Press)

AMONG THE reasons why people are less anxious than they once were to put up money to finance industry, taxation holds an increasingly prominent place.

The purpose which some 6,000,000 investors had in buying the stock of 150 of the largest corporations in this country recently surveyed by the American Federation of Investors, was to make a profit in the form of dividens.

When the Federal and State Governments step in and take larger and larger cuts out of corporate earnings, there is less and less left to be distributed among the stockholders.

As a result the incentive to invest is gradually destroyed.

And that is one of the big reasons why industry in this country has bogged down.

The survey referred to shows that the corporation surveyed paid out in taxes last year $2.62 for every share of common stock, while the holders of that stock received an average of only $1.95 per share in dividends.

Several of these corporations are located in Michigan.

The worst part of the tax situation is not its present burden, but the fact that there is no indication of intention on the part of the Federal Government to change its policy of steadily increasing that burden.

The taxes paid by the Chrysler Corporation, for example, were more than 13 times as large in 1937 as in 1932.

What is the use of the Government trying to stimulate business by artificial means, when it refuses to see that it is taxing business to death?

The existing public debt has to betaken care of through taxes but vast savings could be made in the operating costs of the Government which would enable the taxes, now leveled to finance extravagance and waste, to be reduced.

A large amount of the money now spent for relief, for example, could be saved, without distressing the deserving needy.

Carrying taxation to the point where it dries up its own source by deterring investment in industry is the counsel of folly, which cannot go on without inviting calamity.

A SMALL AFFAIR.

(Montreal Star)

The politician was very pleased with himself—although, actually, he had very little reason to be! His self-satisfaction annoyed many of his friends, and one of them decided to take a rise out of him one day.

"Ah, hallo," said the friend, slapping the budding M.P. on the back. "I knew you when your name was unknown."

"Sir," came the reply, "I'll have you know that my ancestors came over with William the Conqueror."

"And I remember you when you hadn't a shirt to your back," persisted the friend.

"And I've seen you rolling about quite incapable of standing on your feet," the other went on.

"I am a teetotoler, sir," said the politician in a rage. "And you will hear from my solicitors!"

"Don't take offence, old chap," laughed the friend. "You see, I was present at your christening."

FOOD FOR TOURISTS.

(Halifax Chronicle)

TOURIST OFFICIALS of the provincial government have been urging Nova Scotians to feature Nova Scotian foods rather than to attempt to please visitors by offering Virginia ham, Southern fried chicken, or corn pone. The visitor can get his usual American dishes at home, but a good Nova Scotian fish chowder, some of our fresh strawberries, or, later in the Summer, a deep apple pie with biscuit crust, will give him an impression of this province he will long remember.

NO IRON FOR JAPAN.

(Brandon Sun)

THE AUSTRALIAN federal government has placed an embargo on the export of iron ore. The reason is this fear that Australia's iron resources as developed hitherto, will not be more than sufficient to supply Commonwealth needs. Local consumption is now about 2,000,000 tons a year, and it is rising rapidly. Action was taken upon the granting of leases by the Western Australia state government for mining iron deposits at Yampi Sound, on the northwest coast of Australia. The lessee was an English company, which was using Japanese capital and proposed to export the ore to Japan. Exporters of ore from South Australia to other countries will come under the embargo also.

Night Prowlers Ransack Bull's Garage

TORONTO, July 25 (CP).—Night-raiders on a mysterious errand, invaded the large garage of William Perkins Bull, K.C., at the rear of his residence, 3 Meredith Crescent, some time during Saturday night or the early hours of Sunday morning, searching every niche and corner of the large-two-story structure.

Evidence of the intensity of the search was given by the fact that every box and container in the garage was thoroughly ransacked and the contents left in disorder.

The garage housed three cars, and in each of these the pockets were emptied of their contents. So far as could be learned last night nothing had been stolen, giving strength to the belief that the mysterious intruders were no mere sneak thieves bent on obtaining petty plunder.

Discovered Sunday

The garage, which sits back among the trees in the rear of the stately Bull residence, was unlocked during the night. The invasion was discovered early Sunday morning by one of the gardeners.

Members of the household immediately took stock, but could find nothing missing, despite the disorder.

Mr. Bull himself was spending the week-end at his farm near Brampton, and it is thought that the marauders, being aware of his departure from the city have taken advantage of his absence to carry out their mission.

Although at a late hour last night no information had been given by the police in connection with the bold raid, it was stated from the Bull farm at Brampton that a complaint would be filed.

The police of Belmont Street station, in which division the incident took place, said they could take no action until a formal complain had been received from Mr. Bull.

No Sound Heard.

No suggestion as to the possible objective of the marauders was forthcoming from the Bull farm last night. No sound was heard during the night either by neighbors or members of the household.

It would have been difficult to approach the building without passing close to the Bull residence or the neighboring houses, and in the quiet seclusion of Meredith Crescent, any but the most cautious intruder would risk being discovered during such a wholesale and painstaking search.

In further developments of the case, ex-Mayor W. J. Stewart, O.B.E. said last night he was concerned only with the manner in which his firm had looked after the body of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley after she had died at the home of Mr. Bull, 3 Meredith Crescent, in the early morning of July 6.

Cared for Body.

"I know nothing of the controversy which is being carried on between the two families," said Mr. Stewart. "I know only that my firm cared for the body of Mrs. Sidley to the best of our ability. We were called in by the son of Mrs. Sidley about 9 o'clock of the morning she died and asked to take charge of the body. An autopsy was requested after that and the body was taken to the Banting Institute where the autopsy was performed under the direction of Dr. W. L. Robinson, Professor of Pathology at the University of Toronto.

"After the autopsy considerable time was required for the preperation of the body," Mr. Stewart said. "At the earliest opportunity and in the evening of the day she died, the body was ready for the family and close friends to view.

"The family was anxious to have the body leave Toronto the same day," Mr. Stewart continued. "Unless it was impossible to finish our services, members of the family did not want to wait until the second day. Mr. Bull and others who knew Mrs. Sidley viewed the body at our premises prior to shipment and expressed their satisfaction. We made every effort to comply with the personal request of Mr. Sidley."

Goodnight Story

Turning down the corner of the path in the zoo, Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned-about names, came face to face with the polar bear. Fortunately, he wkas in his cage, which was quite large and had rocks and a pool in it. He was shaggy, with enormous paws, and he was covered with white fur which hung all over him.

"Well," he grumbled, peering darkly at the two shadows on the other side of his cage, "what do you want?"

"We—we'd like to ask you a favor," Hanid said. She couldn't help feeling a little nervous.

"A favor? No one ever asks me any favors."

"Why don't they?" Knarf wanted to know.

"Because," roared the polar bear, "they know I never give any favors. Go away. I don't like people standing

"I'm going to tell him what we want," Knarf whispered to Hanid. "He's not as bad as he looks. I'm going to go inside his cage."

Hanid tried to hold Knarf back, but, sure enough, he pulled away from her and slipped between the bars of the cage. When the polar bear saw him come in he made a lunge for him. But Knarf, who was as quick as a flash (you just watch your own shadow some time and see how swiftly it can dart up the side of a wall), scrambled on top of one of the rocks and sat there, just out of reach of the polar bear's claws. The bear just roared.

"I'm sure everybody must like you very much," Knarf said. "You really wouldn't hurt anybody even though you're so strong. You must be the strongest animal in the zoo."

The polar bear felt a litle better to hear this. "Yes," he answered in a pleasanter tone, "I'm much the strongest animal in this zoo. And I can beat anybody swimming. Now what was this you were saying about a favor? Hurry up and tell it to me before I change my mind about listening to it."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

CHAPTER 47

BILL BARON and the officers were riding in three cars, and by agreement they kept close together. They could be seen from the ranch house area about a mile before they entered the big gate.

When they drove up, Bill knew instantly that the smugglers had been warned. He saw two carrying peculiar bundles—burlap sacks wrapped around what he knew to be rifles—and hastening toward automobiles.

"There's only one road out of here!" Bill spoke quickly to the border patrol man. "Turn that last car sideways, it'll block the road and bottle them up."

The smugglers quickly discovered that, too. Their leader shouted something, and those near him hastened back to the store room, at the rear of Ellen's house.

"There they are! Some of them at least!" Bill indicated, keeping his voice subdued. "They've got wise to us, by George! We didn't get here any too soon. But for God's sake let's hold off shooting, Mr. McIntyre! They ought to know they're trapped. They'll surrender."

Officer McIntyre shook his head, doubtfully. Bill Baron, he realized was not experienced at dealing with smugglers of narcotics and of alien men.

"We'll hope," the officer agreed.

So far, their arrival and the running of the smugglers had gone unnoticed by the majority of the fiesta crowd. For one thing it was now past seven o'clock and although not yet dark, twilight had set in. And for two days there had been a certain amount of constant movement and milling around outside anyway, in the normal process of making merry.

"Oyez, usted!" Bill called in Spanish to one hastening man. "Wait a minute, please."

Three others followed. So far the officers had made no belligerent move, no show of guns or force There were several hundred people, scattered over an acre or so of ground. It wouldn't do to burst in and risk a gun battle.

"Look!" he exclaimed. "Two of them are already skipping! On foot!"

"Let them go," McIntyre ordered. "That'll be simply a couple of the aliens. We want the smugglers themselves—with the evidence to convict them. Baron, where's that leader you recognized? You see him?"

"I'll gamble he's already in the storeroom. If they were warned, they would all stick together. They'll nearly all be in there, I bet."

"But they'll be two or three to our one, with their aliens!" McIntyre cried. "They'll try to fight their way out, Baron, as sure as the devil!"

"I'll talk with them," Bill suddenly decided.

In that instant he saw old Buckshot Brown squatting beside a rock beyond the storehouse. And Buckshot was waving and motioning toward the house—obviously a warning.

Nevertheless, Bill reasoned that a bold move might be the best one. Moving, then, as if he didn't know or suspect that anything was amiss, and showing no gun, he stepped away from the officers.

"Edge back behind the cars, men," he suggested in low tone, as he started away. "ust in case." He knew the cars would be some protection from bullets.

He ambled toward the storage house and had moved to within 50 feet of it when he saw a quick motion inside a dust-dimmed window. He realized his danger and halted at once.

"You gentlemen know what's up," he said distinctly, in Spanish, loud enough to be heard inside. "You can help avoid bloodshed. Somebody will be killed. The American border patrol is here. I ask you to surrender quietly, and not disturb the fiesta or endanger innocent people. It can only be harder on you later, if you do resist."

The answer came at once.

Crack! A gun inside marked at him.

As if the shot had been an electric button touching off a salvo, the officers' own guns responded then. Those border patrolmen were experienced at this game. They had known precisely what to expect.

Bill had not been hit, but he dropped flat to the ground. Unquestionably that saved his life, for the smugglers turned their attention to the patrol attack.

Of course the roar of the guns was heard in the front area and commanded instant attention and alarm. But McIntyre had anticipated that.

He had crouched behind the foremost car, and he dashed away now—exposing himself dangerously—and herded the fiesta crowd back to the front of Ellen's main ranch home. That put them out of line of the shooting.

"YOU—you men there — take charge here at once and keep all these people away from the rear of the house!" McIntyre roared his command at a little knot of amazed ranchers. "The border patrol is in charge. There are smugglers out rear. Keep these people back until the fighting is all over."

There were cries of alarm, men running, asking questions, cursing. Curious women hurried up, gripped with unkown fear.

But under McIntyre's guidance the group was kept under control, except for a few sundry cowboys and others who had not been in the main area. They came running, some of them acquiring guns as if from thin air because a borderland cowboy still clings to his pistols.

McIntyre hurried to them, signaling and calling to each in turn. His official manner and his patrol uniform enabled him to command respect. Crisply he informed them what was happening, ordered the armed ones to join in the attack on the smugglers who had converted the DD storage house into a virtual fort.

On the whole, the rapid work there was miraculous. But for Officer McIntyre's level head and cool, deliberate actions, all sorts of tragedies might have resulted within those first five minutes. But ranch men, such as he had instantly deputized, seldom get stampeded.

On the other hand, no one had yet had an opportunity to inform or warn those inside Ellen's home. Events outside had moved with great rapidity.

Bill still lay prone, motionless, with bullets flying both ways above him. His face was turned toward the officers' car, and he also could see the rear of the main house. He saw at least one officer throw up his arms and fall back, dead or badly wounded. He heard Buckshot Brown's rifle crack a time or two, then heard Buckshot shouting in high tone.

Of course, the girl was curious—and alarmed. She had done a normal thing when she heard shooting. She was mistress of the rancho. She was the hostess. Other women inside, including the Mexican servants, had paled with fear at the noise of guns and a few in the front rooms had not even heard it yet or had not realized what it was. But Ellen had dashed outside.

Because the shooting seemed centered in the storage house, she unconsciously started toward it—which was the worst possible thing she could do!

Buckshot Brown yelled.

Bill Baron arose quickly, ran shouting to her side; and in the same instant saw old Buckshot coming.

Then Bill picked up Ellen Dale—and carried her bodily as he had carried her one other night months before.

His first impulse was to go back to her kitchen door, but the small ranch pickup truck had been parked to one side there, and it was nearer. Even as bullets nipped at them he plunged for the truck, literally threw Ellen inside and jumped in after.

She had been numbed with fear during that 10 seconds or so. But as they both lay flat on the truck floor now, in order to be shielded by the low metal sides, she clung near him and choked out a query.

He gave halting, sketchy explanation.

"Sm-smugglers!" he gasped, breathing hard. "They—they were all over! Aliens! Everywhere, Ellen! Posing—as guests! In the storeroom, now. Border patrol."

He paused to breathe, and to put a protective arm over her back.

"Bill! . . . Bill!" She was incoherent in her anxiety.

"Lie still, Ellen! Flat. The patrol—they'll —scrap it out. It's awful—your fiesta . . . lie down. Flat."

He ceased talking, and Ellen sensed the wetness creeping between them. She knew it was his blood. New terror seized her, benumbed her.

COURTENAY, B. C., July 25 (CP).—Hope that raging forest fires on Vancouver Island had at last been checked after two weeks of ravaging timberland, was expressed today as reports from fire-fighting lines indicated the 100,000-acre fire was "standing still" on the east coast at least.

British Columbia police said the wind that had fanned flames had dropped and that for the first time in many days the fighters were holding their own. Fresh winds might send the huge blaze on the rampage again however.

Biggest blaze in the history of Vancouver Island, the fire was still roaring to the westward, over Constitution Hill toward Forbidden Plateau and Mountain Top parkland.

Four naval vessels stood by to evacuate residents of half a dozen towns in the path of the flames to the westward, the Canadian destroyers Fraser and St. Laurent and the minesweeper Armentiers were joined off the coast yesterday by the British cruiser York, flagship of the West Indies squadron, on a cruise through British Columbia waters.

Logging locomotives were ready to evacuate the 300 residents of Bevan should it become necessary. Other towns in possible danger were Courtenay, Cumberland, Campbellton, and Campbell River.

Canada's Airlines To Eliminate Risk

On an air tour of Western Canada, the Transport Minister arrived here last night from Winnipeg, to add a 360-mile second leg to the 1,240-mile hop from Ottawa to Winnipeg Saturday.

From Prince Albert he will turn south again to Saskatoon, then on to Swift Current and back to Regina, where he will board a night plane for Vancouver. He will spend four days there, and then return to Port Arthur, Ont., for a brief holiday before returning to Ottawa.

Trans-Canada Airways would take delivery of six more Lockheed 12-passenger planes next month in readiness for the start of mail and express service over Western Canada routes in the Fall, Mr. Howe said. Passenger flying would be delayed until all possible risk had been eliminated.

Several companies will search for oil in New Zealand.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, July 26.

The lunar transits operating on this day point to rather lively conditions, with much stirring about in pursuit of out-of-the-ordinary activities. There may be journeys and changes, and while business seems to be under favorable auspices, yet progress may be postponed because of a death or other bereavement or sorrow.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may have a rather lively and probably eventful year, with new business and general affairs progressing, but these may be held up by a sorrow, bereavement or loss. Change and a journey seem likely, in which strangers or new plans may probably have important bearing on the future.

A child born on this day should be versatile, fond of new things, places and persons, although serious, steady and dependable.

35,000 Young Reds Parade For Stalin

MOSCOW, July 25 — (AP) — Thirty-five thousand of the young and strong of Soviet Russia marched before their leader, Joseph Stalin, Sunday in the annual physical culture pageant in Red Square.

The girls, young men, even children, told in pantomine and with huge floats of the arduous duties of Red Soldiers and Border Guards, of the Nation's guns, tanks and airplanes, and of agricultural fertility.

A dance depicted Soviet fighters vanquishing German and Polish dragons trying to scale a Russian wall, and a children's brigade sang a militant tune, "if war comes tomorrow."

Bronzed and appearing hearty, Stalin seemed to enjoy it all as he received the salutes of the marchers. Hundreds of Georgian girls, attired in red and gold, prostrated themselves before him and one group swept by with a great oriental carpet which was spread before the leader and sprinkled with flowers.

Dog Intelligence Stirs Live Controversy

TORONTO, July 25—There seems some difference of opinion about dogs' vocabularies.

The average pet dog has a vocabularly of 60 words and some have been known to understand two hundred and fifty, according to Dr. Wilfred J. Funk in an interview with the Associated Press. But, says Mrs. R. McColl, Toronto breeder and owner, dogs do not understand words as such; they understand rather inflection, expression, rhythm.

Then along comes Carl Emsley, owner of Hans, the Toronto wonder dog, who will perform at the Canadian National Exhibition, who says dogs do understand not only words but conversation.

"We'll not be mentioning Hans's name at all, but he will know from what we are talking about that it has to do with him," said Mr. Emsley last night.

And then he tells how Hans three or four months ago was rough with a little visitor. And every time, he says, that reference is made to the incident casually in conversation, Hans hangs his head in shame and slinks into a corner.

Watch Inflection.

"We have dogs here that understand, I think more than 60 words, but most of their understanding is, in my opinion, the inflection given the words," said Mrs. McColl, who is the Canadian Kennel Club representative in the Canadian National Exhibition Association. "When you speak to a dog it is usually a command or an appeal. And it seems to me that if you said 'good dog' in exactly the same tone as 'lie down' when you are commanding, the dog usually will lie down."

"Now we've Tommy Wheeler's dog here, and if I tell it to go upstairs it will. But if I tell it that it is time to go to the kennels it will run away and try to hide," continued Mrs. McColl. "But I don't think the dog actually understands the words, but rather just the rhythm of the phrase and expression."

She mentioned that in running greyhounds, if one man yells, "Come on, Pete," all the dogs make an extra spurt regardless of whether their names are Pete, Prince or Penelope, or the different words the different owners usually used to encourage the individual dogs. All the dogs caught the inflection of the encouragement.

"But dogs are very intelligent," things is to hear the other dogs tell a noisy one to keep quiet at night. Yes, if one begins to cut up the others will snap and snarl till they get him quieted."

On the other hand, Mr. Emsley point out that no matter what words are used Hans understands the gist of conversation. When some one questions whether a visitor who has just left has "taken anything," or if "something is missing," or anything like that, Hans will rush out of the house in chase of the visitor or will scratch at the door to get out, he said.

Mentality of Baby.

Dr. Funk suggests the vocabulary of the average pet dog is about that of a baby a year and half old. Mr. Emsley places his dog's vocabulary and intelligence higher.

"I'm not sure what a 2-year-old child will do, but if I place something out of Hans's reach he will push a chair over and get up and get the thing," said Mr. Emsley. "And if I put something in a trunk he knows enough to try to lift the lid."

Another dog fancier said his dog who loved to chase field mice understood the word "mice," no matter when or in what tone it was uttered. When mice got in the family piano the word had to be spelled to protect the piano from being devastated by the pet's attack. And "sweater" always sent the dog into spasms of ecstasy since the owner usually asked, "Where's my sweater?" before setting out for a tramp with his pet.

In picking 10 words best known by dogs, Dr. Funk listed some alternates: 1, talk, speak or bark; 2, quiet or hush; 3, wait or stop; 4, heel, down, or sit; 5, up, or stand; 6, good-bye or by-by; 7, quick; 8, bed; 9, eat; 10, siccum.

Two Barns Burned In Tweed District

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, July 25. — Smouldering ashes of two barns, smashed windows in churches, and levelled fields of grain bore evidence of the destructive effects of two of the most severe electrical storms to pass over the district in some time.

In the vicinity of the Village of Ivanhoe hail did considerable damage to standing crops, and in many places the crops were completely destroyed.

The barn on the property of Angus Farrell, in the 4th Concession of the Township of Rawdon, was completely destroyed early on Friday evening when struck by lightning. Flames quickly demolished the frame structure that contained in the vicinity of fifty loads of hay. The building was not covered by insurance.

The barn and contents of James Sprackett of Gilmour were also destroyed when lightning struck. The building with part of the season's crop was totally destroyed, but the loss is covered by insurance.

Mrs. Malcolm Moffatt, Oshaaw, sustained a fractured hip and body bruises, while five other passengers were badly shaken up when the automobile in which they were riding failed to negotiate a curve immediately south of Holloway and crashed into a tree shortly after midnight on Friday. Mrs. Moffatt was removed to the Belleville General Hospital.

The car was driven by Malcolm Moffatt, Oshawa, and heading for Clear Lake on a fishing trip. A severe electric storm was in progress at the time, with sharp lightning and torrents of rain fall. As Mr. Moffatt was not familiar with Highway No. 37, he failed to observe the sharp curve in the road and crashed over a ten-foot embankment into a large tree. The car was badly damaged, the top, body and fenders being demolished.

The driver and four others, Miss Letta Lewis, Eddie Leveque, Jack Davidson and Keith Goodman, all of Oshawa, escaped with minor cuts and bruises, although Mr. Moffatt later complained of a fractured ankle.

Padlock Law Ousts Quebec Family

QUEBEC, July 25—(CP)—F. X. Lessard, his wife and family were temporary guests at a friend's home today, their own house closed by police in the first application of Quebec's padlock law in this city.

Provincial officers, unperturbed when 10-year-old Gerard Lessard sang "The Young Guard" and his mother joined in which the "Internationale," evicted the French Canadian family yesterday, 24 hours after warning Mrs. Lessard the house would be padlocked because of her husband's communistic activities.

"The struggle has only started here," Mrs. Lessard told newspapermen as police escorted her and two of her children Gerard and seven-year-old Eduardine, from their tall brick home. Mr. Lessard was "away at work," according to his wife, and a third child, Adrien, 12, was in the country.

"It's I, look what they're doing," the blue-eyed spectacled woman shouted to a crowd as she reached the front door. Then she sped up the street with her children while the officers returned to the building to seal up the front and back doors.

Five factories and several other buildings were destroyed during a dust storm in Tokachi Province in Japan.

Nazis Pay Tribute To Hanged Heroes

KLAGENFURT, Germany, July 25 (CP)—Rudolf Hess, Chancellor Hitler's general representative, paid tribute yesterday in a memorial ceremony to 13 Austrian Nazis "who gave their lives for a great ideal—Greater Germany."

The 13 were men hanged in Vienna for their roles in the unsuccessful Nazi putsch of four years ago Sunday when Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was killed. Their families and many Nazis who took part in the uprising were in the throng as the roll call of the "Thirteen Heroes" rang out.

The "Nazi martyrs" were honored in the presence of 24,000 storm troopers and massed flags. Back of the main platform was the picture of a thick-barred prison symbolizing, speakers said, "the former martyred Austria."

In his speech Hess alluded to "small States consciously threatening peace and playing a criminal game against the peace of Europe."

"But we are confident these manoeuvres will not break the peace," Hess said. "We believe in that higher justice which will not permit a new war to break out, since a new war would be of incalculable import and would signify the collapse of all the countries of Europe.

"Be that as it may, Germany has taken the necessary precautions so that its peace shall not be dependent only on the desires of others. Its peace is guaranteed by an army stronger than ever with Hitler—we emphasize this—Hitler, at its head. Hitler is animated by good will but he will never capitulate, just as the victims whom we honor today did not capitulate."

TORONTO, July 25.—With registration figures already threatening to top all expectation, the week of the Canadian Corps Re-union opens to-night with the official opening of the French Village, a bit of war-time France that has been set up in the east and west wings of the Coliseum in the Exhibition Ground.

The village will open at 7 p.m. and from then until midnight and after, the public will be able to wander among the quaint Old World buildings, shops and barns and houses and estaminets that became familiar to Canada's fighting men when they lived and fought in France.

The village will be open to the public until Friday night, when it will be closed to all but registered participants in the Reunion. To-night's opening will be conducted by Mayor Ralph Day, while the village will be turned over to the troops Friday night in a ceremony in the hands of an unnamed member of the Corps, who, with goatee, shugging shoulders and thick French accent, will impersonate a war-time characer known as the "Mayor of Boully-Grenais."

Organizataion Speeds Up.

After the months of quet preparation, the work of the Reunion staff, under General Manager Major T. M. Medland, is being stepped up to a feverish pace. The headquarters were moved Saturday from 12 Adelaide Street East to the Royal Winter Fair offices in the Coliseum. Registrations will continue to be taken at the Adelaide Street offices.

Rebels Stalled In Swoop Upon Valencia

HENDAYE, France, July 25. — (AP).—The Spanish insurgents asserated to-day that their quick offensive in Estremadura province, southwest of Madrid, had wiped out the government's deepest wedge into insurgent territory.

The five day campaign, originally started as a feint to draw government troops away from the eastern front, was understood to have surprised even insurgent commanders with the measure of its success.

Reports from Burgos said the armies of Generals Gonsalo Queipo De Llana and Jose Saliquet had captured 3,125 square miles of territory in the Estremadura drive—an area with a population of more than 400,000 and 23 important towns.

General Joe Miaja, Government leader, was believed to have pulled out so many veterans as reinforcements for the eastern front that Queipo De Llana and Saliquet were finding but scant resistance in the Arid Valley that flanks the Guadiana River.

The Poorhouse of Spain.

Although Estremadura Province has been known as "the poorhouse of Spain" geologists report that rich untapped mineral wealth lies under its surface.

Estremadura also has been of immense strategic importance to the Government as spearhead of its south-western front, which at one time reached almost to the Portuguese border and threatened to split insurgent-held territory.

Meanwhile, Government militiamen were fighting the insurgent drive on Valencia almost to a standstill in what observers generally considered the main theatre of operations.

Miaja moved division after division into the Espadan mountains north of Sagunto, in an effort to keep the Teruel-Mediterranean road open and thus delay the final advance on Valencia.

BAD FOR SWIMMERS

SAN FRANCISCO—(CP).—Automobile driving is bad for swimmers, says Duke Pao Kahanamoku, famous Hawaiian swimmer. He believes pushing the clutch and brake pedals bunches the swimming muscles of the legs.

FOR A COOLER, easier washday—get the New Rinso! Instead of scrubbing your strength away over a washboard... instead of sweltering in a hot kitchen... just soak your clothes in the rich Rinso suds. Without hard scrubbing or boiling, Rinso's active suds soak out dirt—get clothes at least 5 shades whiter than ordinary soaps. Washable colours come bright as sunlight. Rinso's suds are faster-acting, too; actually soak clothes amazingly clean in as little as 10 minutes. Yet Rinso is safe for overnight soaking. Clothes washed this gentle "no-scrub" way last 2 or 3 times longer.

Rinso is recommended by the makers of 26 famous Canadian washers. Grand for dishes and all cleaning. The New Rinso is kind as ever to hands. Economical, a little goes a long way.

England Makes Dismal Showing In 4th Contest

LEEDS, England, July 25 (CP Cable)—Australia went into the lead in the five-game test cricket series with England today winning the fourth contest by five wickets. The first two matches were drawn and the third abandoned on account of rain.

Needing only 105 runs for victory after England's batsmen had been skittled out for a second-innings total of 123, the Aussies hit up 107 for the loss of five wickets. Evenly matched on first-innings play, the invaders compiled 242 runs, 19 more than their opponents.

It was Australia's 57th triumph since the series started in 1876. England has been successful 54 times while 31 matches ended in stalemates.

The fifth and final match, scheduled to be played in London Aug. 20, will be fought to a finish.

On a wicket that has favored bowlers since start of the match Friday the Mother County's first innings netted only 223, Australia replying with 242.

W. J. O'Reilly and L. Fleetwood-Smith, the touring spin bowlers brought about the collapse today, O'Reilly capturing five wickets for 56 runs and his victorian colleague four for 34. The last nine wickets fell in an hour for only 50 runs.

It was England's smallest total on a home wicket since 1921. In that year at Nottingham the Englishmen were dismissed for a first innings' total of 112, Australia subsequently winning by 10 wickets.

LEEDS, Eng., July 25—(CP Cable)—Score-card in the fourth England-Australia cricket test match follows:

Gananoque Beggars Give Police Trouble

GANANOQUE, Ont., July 25. — (CP).—Chief of Police Reginald Morrison has had considerable difficulty with transients begging on the streets. "The other day," said the Chief, "I saw a fellow asking people for money so I took him to the station, and when he turned out his pockets he had $1.60 in change." The man was taken to Brockville and is now doing five days.

The Chief claims that citizens are greatly bothered by men calling at their homes insisting upon being given a lunch and sometimes they become impertinent when they do not get it.

Dripping water at every step a local man came into the police station Sunday afternoon and reported that he had been resting on the bank of the Otonabee and had rolled down the bank into the river. He was decidedly wet and the police in order to prevent a pneumonia case hustled him home in a police car.

AGAIN ADJOURNED

Although Crown Attorney McElderry was all ready to go ahead with charges of reckless and drunken driving against George Perrin in police court this morning, the accused who was represented by W. B. Gordon asked for another adjournment, about the sixth in the case so far. It goes over until Tuesday of next week.

CROWD AT PONTYPOOL

Pontypool was getting its share of visitors at the week-end. On Sunday afternoon there were scores of cars parked at the tanks and the open bathing beach was being liberally patronized. There were a large number of people from Toronto there and taking a course in sun tan appeared to be the favorite occupation.

Gordon, who appeared for the woman stating that it was a family matter. "Too many in-laws," asked Magistrate Gee, "or was it an example of what somebody in another case called too many outlaws?"

A TRIPLE CLASH

Three cars were involved in a traffic clash on Hunter Street between George and Water Streets this morning when a truck driven east on Hunter Street by Garnet Cox, collided with a car owned by M. P. Young of Ennismore as the latter was pulling out from the curb. The Young car was driven against a parked car owned by F. E. Lattimer. No one was hurt but all three cars were damaged.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Three persons narrowly escaped injury on Saturday evening at the Twin Hills between Burleigh Falls and Haultain, when the car in which they were driving left the highway and landed upside down on the side of the road. The sight of the car with its four wheels up in the air attracted the attention of motorists on Sunday morning, who after close inspection of the wreck could hardly believe anyone could escape unhurt in such a catastrophe. The car was proceeding down the hill when the accident occurred.

TRUTH.

"Truth," was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Peterborough on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "Teach me thy way, O Lord; I will walk in thy truth unite thy heart to fear thy name." (Psalms 86:11). Selections from the Bible included the following from John 3: 31, 33, "He that cometh from above is above all: he that is of the earth is earthly, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all. He that hath received his testimony hath set to his seal that God is true." Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook included the following from page 95: "Lulled by stupefying illusions the world is asleep in the cradle of infancy, dreaming away the hours. Material sense does not unfold the facts of existence; but spiritual sense lifts human consciousness into eternal Truth."

This is the second year they have been busily employed picking berries in season. When berries are plentiful they pick as high as 108 boxes each per day from the ten-acre patch. Farmers Advised To Check Crops For Army Worms

Farmers of Peterborough county are requested by F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative, to inspect their fields of oats for evidence of invasion from the west by the multitudinous army worm.

"An entymologist from the Department called on me Sunday afternoon, and told me this pest had spread more widely than was anticipated in the counties of Ontario, Durham, Victoria and Northumberland," Mr. Paterson said. "In some cases farmers took it for granted that their fields were all right, and didn't bother to look through them? Then when they did examine the grain the army worm had made considerable headway.

I have had no reports of a serious condition anywhere in our district, but it would be well for farmers to look through their grain at once and make sure that they are not infested."

Mr. Paterson said the army worm threat would pass in another week as the worms change to another stage of their metamorphosis. Control by using poison bait is a simple matter, especially in the early stage of the appearance of the army worm, Mr. Paterson added.

Grasshopper Damage Said Exaggerated

"Reports which were first published in Toronto papers, and which were also carried on the wires reaching a number of other papers telling about the grasshopper plague in the West are not according to fact and information," said H. Webb of Toronto when speaking to an Examiner representative.

Mr. Webb with his wife was visiting at McCracken's Landing. He is closely in touch with the operations of the Wheat Board. "When those reports were first published in the Toronto morning paper on Friday saying that grasshoppers by the millions were operating in Saskatchewan and naming the course they were likely to take through the province it was decided at once to find out what the situation was. The story made it look serious enough, and mentioned that the yield was liable to be reduced as much as one-third. We telephoned direct to Winnipeg and asked that inquiries be made in the districts mentioned, and the replies received indicated the situation was entirely favorable and the grasshopper trouble was not greater in any place than could be described as normal."

Lands 35-Pounder

NORTH BAY, Ont., July 25. — (CP).—As far as the Sage family is concerned, it's Mrs. M. Sage and not her husband who is the No. 1 fisherman. Mrs. Sage landed a 35-pound, 50-inch "muskie" while fishing with her husband here.

Lakefield Park's Tourist Camp Crowded

Reeve C. S. Tanner estimated today that Lakefield's tourist camp on the west side of the river opposite the village accommodated a crowd of three hundred persons over the week-end.

"We had quite a colony of Ohio people and there were others from Michigan, New York, Ontario and other places," Mr. Tanner said today. "I think it would be safe to say that there were more boats on Katchawanooka Lake Sunday than on any other stretch of water the same size in the whole Kawartha district, and I think most of them were getting fish. The people of Lakefield are just wakening up to the fact that it is getting a reputation as a summer town. The tourist camp has proved far more popular than was expected when it was started.

If the village would put in a sewerage system there would be nothing to stop us from building up a big tourist business for three or four months of the year."

Cellar Excavated In Sixteen Hours

Lioni & Company of Toronto, excavation contractors, completed their job of taking out the basement for the Bell Tepehone Company this morning and were on their way home at 10.30 o'clock. They had taken out 1,800 cubic yards of earth in sixteen hours. Arriving here Friday afternoon they were ready to bite into the ground when they wheeled their shovel on to the Hunter street lot. A long Saturday left only the corner of the cellar to be finished this morning, and the departure of the crew was carried out with the same dispatch of their arrival. And as an example of their methods they even swept the sidewalk after the big machine had passed over it.

Seven Days For Earl Way Drunken Driver

Earl Way, eighteen-year-old Foxboro truck driver, convicted before Magistrate E. A. Gee in police court this morning of drunken driving on Highways 7 and 30 at Havelock on the night of July 9, was sentenced to seven days in the county jail. As the car he was driving was not his own it was not impounded.

On a second charge of reckless driving Way pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and $4.75 costs.

He was defended by W. B. Gordon while the prosecution was in charge of Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry K.C.

Provincial Traffic Officer J. H. Hatch of Marmora testified to seeing Way making the turn from Highway 7 into Highway 30 in such a manner that his car slewed around. The officer pursued the car and testified that when he drew up alongside, sounded his horn twice and pointed to the right curb, Way swung his car to the left and the officer had to put on his brakes and swing over to avoid a collision.

Officer Hatch told of bringing the car back to Wellman's garage and of the arrest of the accused whom he described as intoxicated. He swore that Way's breath smelled of liquor, his speech was thick and he staggered when he got out of the car.

To Mr. Gordon he said he had not called a doctor to examine Way because in his case he did not think it was necessary.

Traffic officer Gordon E. Broughton who was with Officer Hatch at the time testified to the manner in which Way had turned off one highway into the other and corroborated Hatch's evidence as to the condition of the driver. Way, he said, was intoxicated.

Nelson Wellman, garage operator at Havelock also swore that Way was intoxicated when he saw him after Officer Hatch had brought him back to the garage. He said that when Way swung around from Highway 7 to 30 he cut the corner so sharply that he narrowly missed hitting the stop sign.

"Would you say he was in a suitable condition to drive a car" asked the Crown Attorney.

"No," replied the witness.

Claims Only One Drink

Going into the box in his own behalf Way testified that he had had only one glass of beer in the City Hotel at Belleville before he and his companions started out for a dance at Oak Lake. Not finding anything doing there they had gone on to Crow Lake but there was no dance there either and they proceeded on toward Trent River. Way explained that he had turned sharply off No. 7 because he was at the turn before his attention was drawn to it. He declared that he never heard the traffic officer's horn or seen him until one of his companions in the rumble seat told him an officer was there.

He repeated that he had only one drink of beer and was quite sober.

Jimmy Ross of Canifton, owner of the car and Carl Wright of Belleville who were with Way corroborated his story as to having only one glass of beer and as to the incidents before and after the arrest. Ross admitted having three glasses of beer and Wright two.

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater of Foxboro and R. Coulter who lives in the same district testified that Way's reputation for sobriety was good in the community.

Magistrate Gee said that on the evidence of the only independent witness, Mr. Wellman, and having regard to all the circumstances the only conclusion he could arrive at was that the accused had been intoxicated when driving on the night of July 9th and a conviction would have to be registered.

Pro Bike Riders In Racing Meet

Canada's only three professional riders will be seen in action in Peterborough on Civic Holiday when the Kawartha Motorcycle club and the Lion's Club hold their monster racing meet at the Exhibition grounds.

Word has been received that the three riders, Harold Bain, Dy Henry, and Johnny Millet of Toronto, will compete in a special race at the meet. These three men, who recently completed a racing tour through England and who are considered to be this country's outstanding riders, will give crowds plenty of thrills. On the straight-away of the track they will reach speeds of 70 and 80 miles an hour, will race so close together on the turns that they will seem to be touching. Their appearance here is expected to give the meet a highlight in thrills. The machines, special racers, burn alcohol and benzine in place of gasoline, cannot be used for normal runs.

Another race in which residents of this city will be especially interested has just been added to the program. It is open to Peterborough riders only and should see keen competition between motorcycle enthusiasts in this city. Entries are pouring in and the meet will probably be even better than that held last year.

It has been reported in London that Marshal Vassily Bleucher, commander of the Soviet Far Eastern army, has a million men under him who are now within striking distance of the Manchukuo frontier. More are reported as rushing to the scene of frequent border clashes with Japanese. Over 250 planes are flying to the spot, also, the report added.

Six Persons Hurt In Weekend Traffic Accident

Automobiles, bicycles and a motorcycle all figured in half a dozen traffic accidents in the city and district over the week-end in which six persons received minor injuries.

William McIntyre, 22, of 30 Lafayette Avenue had his left ankle sprained and suffered bruises early Sunday morning when the motorcycle in which he was riding came into collision with a car driven by Harvey Elliott, 17, of 117 Robinson Street. The accident happened on McKellar Street, North Monaghan, at a driveway leading into Chief Newhall's residence just as McIntyre was making a turn. His machine was damaged to the extent of $25 while minor damage was done to the car.

Two small children Marion and Carl Searles of 430 Sheridan received cuts on the face and head Saturday afternoon when they were knocked down at the intersection of Hunter Street by a Bicycle ridden by W. Butcher. The two youngsters were walking hand-in-hand and passed from behind a parked car in front of the bicycle, according to the rider.

Ankle Dislocated

When the car in which she was riding left the Lakefield road and turned over in the ditch Saturday night, Mrs. Fred Griffin had her ankle dislocated. The car driven by Fred Griffin, contained seven people, including three Griffin children and two friends, but all the others fortunately escaped injury. The driver said he was blinded by the lights of a car he was passing.

Cars driven by Ken Johnston, 68 Lee Street and Herbert Selgman, 485 Mark Street, collided on the Lakefield Road Saturday night, several miles this side of Lakefield and the latter was slightly injured. The cars were considerably damaged.

George Avery, R. R. 2, Little Britain, had a narrow escape from serious injury on Highway No. 7 Saturday afternoon when his car was forced off the road by another machine passing on the wrong side and turned completely over in the ditch. The accident happened a few miles west of Norwood and Avery escaped uninjured.

Daniel Ryan, 18, is in St. Joseph's hospital with head injuries, sustained when he fell from his bicycle on George street near Townsend street on Saturday night. Ryan, it is said, made a wide turn to avoid a passing car and his wheel struck the curb, throwing him off and he lit on his head. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital last night for an X-ray examination.

Trout and Bass Bite Freely In Gold Lake

"We could have filled a boat with small mouth black bass," J. B. O'Dette told the Examiner today regarding the fishing in Gold Lake where he and his brother John O'Dette of Chicago spent last week.

"Bass and trout are plentiful in that lake, and we had some every day cooked up nearly every way we could think of," Mr. O'Dette added. His brother John left Peterborough forty-nine years ago and retired from the contracting business in Chicago twelve years ago. Accompanied by his wife he intends to spend several months on a vacation centering around Peterborough. He had visited the city of his birth a few times during the long period of nearly half a century since he first left Peterborough for Chicago.

J. B. O'Dette said that the way into Gold Lake, where he stayed at a hunting lodge, was by way of Ketchecum Lake, and he added that he could guarantee the best fishing in those waters for any person who was content to catch fighting bass and trout.

Warkworth Woman Observes 90th Birthday Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, July 25.—Thursday, July 21, was the ninetieth birthday of Mrs. Austin Arkils, who lives with Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Arkils about a mile south of Warkworth. Her maiden name was Sally Tucker and she was one of a family of thirteen children and is the last surviving member of three generations. She was born at Centreton and has lived in Haldimand township nearly all her life, the last few years she has lived in Cramahe and Percy townships.

She was married at the age of fifteen and a half years. In the early days she made clothing from home-spun, cooked over a fireplace, later using an old-fashioned high oven stove, beds and lounges were rope laced. She states that she has done all kinds of work indoors and out but she always got a lot of pleasure in her spare time in making wreaths of hair, paper and oak some of which may be seen today. She could also braid straw such as the farmers straw hats are made from today.

Mrs. Arkils is the mother of five children, two of whom are living. They are Mrs. Elizabeth Gillespie, Grafton and Lewis G. Arkils. She has lived with the latter since her husband's death sixteen years ago.

Her high ideals, generosity, friendliness and happiness have been a charming part of her life. She has eighteen grandchildren, thirty great grandchildren and one great-great grandchild the latter being Jacqueline Archer, Grafton.

Although her hearing is affected and her activities are limited on account of a heart condition, still she is very remarkable.

CHOPPY WATERS FORCE POSTPONMENT ONTARIO CANOE TESTS

Thunderstorms Delay Trials Of The Western Division Off Toronto Breakwater

Successful Meetings Held At Montreal And Gananoque

TORONTO, July 25.—(CP). — A fervent wish for less wind and a calm surface on Lake Ontario was voiced to-day by Canadian Canoe Association officials, for once the Association's western division completes its qualifying trials at Toronto the stage will be set for the Dominion regatta on the Cataraqui river at Kingston, Ont., Aug. 6.

Eastern division trials were run off at Montreal Saturday without difficulty. Northern divisional trials at Gananoque also were favored by good weather and no trouble was encountered. But at Toronto, thunder storms licked Lake Ontario into foamy waves and forced postponement of western's divisional preliminaries that lead to the Dominion fnials.

The Lachine, Que., Racing Canoe Club topped the eastern division at Montreal, piling up 43 points to win its fifth successive aggregate championship this year. Lachine paddlers competed in every race of the 14-race program. Cartierville was second with 31 points; Grand Trunk third with 16; St. Lambert fourth with eight; Otterburn fifth with three; Chateauguay next with two and Excel Boating Club last with one point.

Carleton Gets Honors.

Victory in the final event of the northern division program, the one-mile war canoe race, gave Carleton Place aggregate honors and the divisional championship at Gananoque. Carleton Place scored 28 points. Other clubs: Ottawa, New Edinburgh, 25; Gananoque, 23; Brantford Beach, 19; Ottawa Rideaus, 16; Ottawa Britannias, 1.

Choppy water on the Boulevard Club course at Toronto forced western division paddlers to postpone their regatta until Sunday. Rough water permitted the racing of only three final events Sunday and the program again was called off. Last night, officials said the paddlers might have to race "all this week" before completing the trials.

W. Williamson of the Balmy Beach Club won the double blade singles race in the western division regetta before the program was cancelled. The first three in each event qualify for the Canadian championships and accompanying Williamson to Kingston will be W. Russell, Toronto Canoe Club, and H. Mercer, Kitchener, second and third, respectively, in the double blade singles.

Russell won the junior singles event, crossing the line ahead of N. Lane, Balmy Beach, and H. Rice, Boulevard Club, second and third. The only other race completed, the junior war canoe event was won by a crew from the Boulevard Club. A Balmy Beach club crew was second, only other qualifying position.

At Gananoque, Ottawa New Edinburghs led Gananoque and Carleton Place by two points after 13 of the 14 events had been completed Saturday. But Carleton Place nosed out the Ottawa Paddlers in the big-boat event to win the necessary points and the championship.

Wins Senior Singles

Ray Delaney, Gananoque, won the featured senior singles in four minutes, 53.6 seconds. The intermediate singles and junior singles, other leading races, were won by J. Hamilton of Carleton Place. J. Silver of New Edinburgh was the outstanding double-blade performer, winning the singles and teaming with R. Ogilvie to take the doubles. He also was in the crew which placed third in the double-blade fours, won by Gananoque.

The eastern-division paddlers supplied some of the best racing seen so far this season on the Richelieu River course. Lachine won 12 positions in the Dominion finals and will be certain to make a strong bid for the singles titles with Henry Cruise. Cruise won the senior singles event at the Montreal regatta Saturday in the fast time of 4:36 4-5.

Winnipeg, winner of the aggregate title in last year's Canadian championships at Ottawa, again will have a strong entry in the finals. A 16-man team was announced last night for the eastern trip. The team will be under the managership of Harold Harriman.

Winnipeg's lineup and position:

Double blade singles—Doug Groff, Jack McDowell.

Junior singles—George Gould.

Intermediate singles—Gould.

Intermediate tandem — Douglas Dott.

Senior tandem—Lundy Lyle, Groff.

Senior singles—Groff, Wilf Batty.

Senior fours—Groff, McDowell, Henry Dadson, Lyle.

Double blade tandem—Bob Groff, Doug Groff.

Other members of the team are Fred Menzies and Gord Leckie. Winnipeg also will have entries in the mile and half-mile war canoe races.

New Lightweight

NEW YORK, July 25 (AP). — The grapevine says Mickey Cochrane will clean house over the winter.... And a lot of the current Detroit Tigers will be wagging their tails in some other bailiewick next year.... The boom is on for Ernie Lombardi as most valuable player in the National League this season.

Dizzy Dean is serving up a screwball as the clutch pitch in his comeback....If you're in mouring for the Giants, don't forget they were six games back last August 1....And wound up in the World Series anyway.

The Yankees, worried about that pitching staff for the current western trip, have recalled Joe Vance, who's been on a hot streak in Kansas City, and returned Joe Beggs to Newark....Vance tossed his third straight win on Saturday.

Line of the week comes from Si Burick of the Dayton News....They call 'em the Reeling Reds when they lose, says Si, and the Rampant Reds when they're hot....Why not the "Pennant" Reds to make it easier all around?

Peterboro C.C. Falls To Toc H By Sixteen Runs

On Saturday the Peterborough Club went to Toronto to play Toc H. and lost a game they should have won by 16 runs. There was a heavy thunderstorm in Toronto in the afternoon and the game was held up for two periods of about three-quarters of an hour each and it was past 8 when the last Peterborough wicket fell.

Toc H. batted first and quickly lost three good wickets for 15. Bowden and Warren then put on 27 and when Bowden was bowled by Williams the total was 42, the remaining wickets soon fell to Dyer and Williams and the total was 61.

The local men now lost Kelly Stuart and Chambers for 12, but Dyer and Williams made a stand which produced 25 runs. Five wickets were down for 42 and the remaining 5 only added 3 runs. With the score at 45 for 7, Dyer who had been batting steadily and well was foolishly run out and the last chance of winning the game was thrown away. Following is full score and analysis:

Cricket Notes

Whitaker's were scheduled to play Lindsay at the Oval on Saturday. They were in attendance, with wickets pitched, but the Lindsay team failed to put in an appearance.

As previously stated in these notes the local executive was approached a couple of weeks ago as to playing a semi-final game in the county championship here on Civic Holiday. The opposing teams would have been Lincoln County and Carleton County with headquarters at St. Catharines and Ottawa, respectively.

The Oval was engaged for that day by Whitaker's for their match against St. Edmund's, and on Thursday evening they finally decided that this match would be played. So the ground is not available for the county match. The championship committee was at once notified by wire of this decision; and it was suggested that the Trinity College School Ground at Port Hope would be a convenient ground for the match.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

IT WAS A CASE OF TOO much Lefty McNally Saturday for the semi-pro ballsters from Buffalo at Riverside. And the Petes copped a 4-1 chuckle before a goodly gathering of customers. A nice exhibition it was, too, even if the visitors didn't look any hotter than Oshawa GM-men. They have four or five former pro players in the lineup, but on the down-grade, and the amateurs are just about our own class. In fact the team was hardly of any higher rating then senior amateur in Ontario. Good but not brilliant. And of course the Buffalo boys had to motor from their home here and—as they were late—go on without a warmup. But they found McNally tough. Said so afterward, and wondered where he learned his stuff.

* * * * * *

THE BLOND SOUTHPAW for the Petes was in top form and hurled a lovely game. Limited the visitors to two singles while he fanned 11 and walked four. He was really burning them in from the second inning on, with the odd sharp hook to fool 'em. On Lefty depends a major portion of our chances against Oshawa in the loop playoffs during August, but if he twirls against the Motor Citizens like he did against the Yankee crew Saturday we won't worry. He needs lots of work on the mound and will pitch one of the games next weekend against the House of David pros.

The Hits Mftg. Co.

LOCAL LINEUP WAS shaken up considerably and the Petes showed a real reversal in form over their last appearance here. Played snappy ball in the field—despite two errors—and hit in more timely style than usual. Cadd led the batters with a triple and single while Kearns and Whatley banged out doubles—and Cy's drove in two runs. And Chuck Kearns in centre, after not looking too good against Oshawa, played a swelegant tussle deep in the garden to rob his rivals of two or three hits. Bob Doll is back in the lineup once more and will be a big help with his chatter, his steady fielding and potent bat. He celebrated his return with a sharp single to left. Murphy and Clark switched positions for this game. Starr wasn't on hand or he would have seen action. A nice number all around.

IN RIVERSIDE PARK on Saturday eve, Danforth Aces defeated Keene gals by a 13-10 count i nan exhibition softball scrap. Dozens and dozens of hits it seemed with quite a few errors, also. A fair-sized gathering, counting those on the bridge, viewed proceedings. They used O. Small for a pitcher and she went fair, whilst Marilyn McCarthy and Bea McDowell saw service for the locals—the latter being bingled hard. We are a bit fascinated by the name of the visitors' rightfielder, J. Coveyduck—of all things!

Lo, The Leather-Pushers

A PEACHY PUG SHOW is slated for the Lindsay rink tomorrow eve at 9.30, our time, when the local Riverview A. C. puts on a card. They promise to stage a swelegant show this time as they hope to run 'em regularly up Scugogville way henceforth. No punches pulled. After the show in Lakefield last week, it was discovered the Len Minicola had a sore eye from his main joust with Nick Orlando, and Jack O'Neill was suffering a swollen jaw from stopping some of Dutch McIlmoyle's whistling rights. So a few changes in the proposed Lindsay lineup were necessary. The promoters up and got two good Toronto rasslers and a pugilist to strut their stuff with local talent. The card should draw some fans from here.

* * * * * *

THIS IS HOW IT WILL line up: Nick Orlando, local lightweight, vs. Young Jackie of Toronto in a return bout, the main event of five two-minute rounds; Norm Bowler vs. Harry Low, local middles, in the semi-final; Joe Taman, 126, with opponent yet to be named; Mal Packenham, 135, vs. Bill Joiner; Buddy Redmond, 82, vs. Ray Smith; and Jerry Lessor, 80, vs. Frank Vasey. The rasslin' match is two out of three falls, or one hour limit, between Red Garner and Bert Crothhall of Toronto, middles.

O, Where Were The O's?

OMEMEE MEN SOFTBALLERS were not on hand Saturday night at the Bowl for their game with Westclox, so we suppose it means a default. Last postponed fray is listed for tonight when Omemee and Motorists mix at the Bowl. There will be an executive meeting right afterward to decide on the remaining tilts of the schedule and the playoffs. It's a tight race now with the O's having a good chance, Motorists being second right on the heels of the Clockmen—provided that game Saturday went to Westclox by default. Can't find out for certain but will know sometime today. The race will be over ere long and playoffs started so that the winner will be set for O. S. A. playdowns.

JUST TO SHOW HOW HARD it is to figure basefall, Toronto Webbers lost a 7-1 exhibition game here to the Petes a month or so ago. Oshawa GM-men beat the locals regularly this summer. But now we find that on Saturday in Oshawa, the Webbers of Toronto copped a 12-1 exhibition win over the GM-men! While the Petes were beating a semi-pro squad. Funny, eh? Kelly pitched five-hit ball and had lots of hitting support, Wills and McGarry being pasted to a fare-the-well. A dozen hits off, 'em, including a homer and two singles in four for Dollery (who went hitless here). The Motor City men kicked the potato all over the patch for seven miscues. Only run they got was Matthew's homer. Petes open the loop playoffs in Oshawa on Aug. 6th.

Petherick Wins Second Game League Playoffs

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 25. — Petherick's Corners spoiled Seymour West's chances of capturing the Glover Trophy in two straight games by defeating them 10 to 4. It was the second game of the play-offs and their win on Saturday will force a third game to decide the winer on Tuesday evening. Don Barnum pitched what was said by all to be his best game of the season and won the cheers of the crowd when he struck out seven players in the last three innings. B. Reddick as shortstop and Ken Oddie on first base both gave an exhibition which went a long way toward helping the Petherick's team to prolong the playoffs. It was a great comeback for the Corners who had been trailing the league all season and dropped the first game in the playdowns to Seymour West by a 9 to 1 score, which to many conceded ultimate championship to them in the next game.

Cliff Anderson, pitcher for the Seymour team fanned three and displayed his usual form, but the hard-hitting team from the Corners was equal to his best. Petherick's went to bat in the first inning and Reddick, D. Barnum, and L. Watson getting their second count of the game, and E. Ingram adding one more to run the total to four to put them four up on the game. The sixth inning was scoreless and Watson got his third run and Ingram his second in the final inning.

For Seymour West Ernie Wilkes completed the circuit in the second after a scoreless opener and Cliff Anderson and E. McCook each added ont in the third, while G. McCulloch's double and two errors brought him in to complete the scoring for the losers and end the game after three scoreless innings with the score standing at 10 to 4.

Harlow Cutting, a junior member here, won the blind holes, playing almost perfect golf, his score on was 31-6-25 on the 9 blind holes, while his gross on the mound was the lowest posted for the day.

J. G. Wharry and D. W. Barman proved to be the best putters both having 13 each for the 9 holes. Others were:

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

A week from to-day (weather permitting) our club will stage one of the biggest events, as far as tournaments are concerned, that has ever been attempted since coming to the new greens in 1930. It is an event that we hope will not only bring a large number of strangers to our city, but will firmly establish the fact that our club is one of the outstanding centres for lawn bowling in the Province of Ontario. This tournament will bring the east to meet the west and the north to meet old-time opponents from all along the lakeshore front. It will create an atmosphere of health, friendship, and pleasure. It will welcome the stranger from distant cities, throwing wide its friendly portals, making him the honored guest, and his sojourn a time of gladness.

While the tournament is being sponsored by our club, yet its success can only be assured by the cooperation of sister lawn bowling clubs. And to those who have already made their entries we say "Thank you,' 'and to those who anticipate sending in entries we say to you "Thank you," and to our local boys the appreciation of the committee is likewise extended. The support we have so far been favored with extends as far west as Windsor, on the east to Kingston, Uxbridge on the north, and from clubs all along Lake Ontario; but especially do we appreciate the support we are receiving from the clubs in the Trent Valley district. Theirs has been most encouraging and timely.

The entry list closes to-morrow (Tuesday) night; the draw will be made on Wednesday and published on Thursday or Friday in leading papers throughout the province. It is not yet too late to make your entry. 'Phone or write E. L. Sackville, Barrie Building.

Our mixed tournament is set for 7.30 to-night.

A Baseball Problem

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., July 25.—(AP)—Irked when a property owner kept the two baseballs he recovered from his garden, a boys' team picketed his house. "This man is unfair to the kids of this neighborhood," read the signs, printed with red crayon on placards. Now juvenile officer Riley Nelson has the baseballs and the signs and says he is looking for a rule book on which to base a decision.

O.S.A. Upholds Suspension Ball Players

TORONTO, July 25 (CP).—The Ontario Amateur Softball Association decided Saturday to uphold the Ontario Baseball Association's suspension of seven players also playing softball in Kingston in a league affiliated with the O.A.S.A.

The executive of the O.A.S.A. decided, however, it would back a plea by the Kingston amateur softball association to Secretary William Snyder of the O.B.A. for reinstatement of the seven athletes. It suggested to Kingston delegates that the suspended players made immediate individual application for reinstatement, and the O.A.S.A. would ask the O.B.A. to give the matter favorable consideration.

The seven softball payers are S. Scrutton, B. Webber, Vin McQuaide, Bon Boneham, Bob Elliott, B. White and L. Boone. They were suspended along with the rest of the Kingston senior team of the Central Ontario Baseball Association by the parent O.B.A., which ruled the Ponies were using ineligible men in league competition.

Snyder and A. L. Irwin, secretary of the Ontario Sports Federation, had the O.A.S.A. to concur in the suspension. President Ernie Simpson of the K.A.S.A. said concurrence meant that the intermediate softball playoffs in Kingston, which were to have started Monday, "would have to be postponed for a week at least."

Somerville Set To Defend Title

LONDON, Ont., July 25—(CP).—Quebec's provincial championship team of four set out to-day in defence of the Canadian team championship, and the Willingdon Cup won by the Eastern Province in 1937.

Six quartets were arrayed against the defenders, every province being represented except Nova Scotia. One combination squad represents Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Along with the team title to-day a new Dominion championship will be settled among seven juniors, representing their respective provinces. Both competitions are 36 holes medal play.

The two medal affairs serve as a prelude to the Canadian amateur championship that starts Tuesday at match play. Whether Sandy Somerville, playing over his home course, retains his crowd and wins his seventh Canadian title will be decided by Saturday evening.

Although scores of aspirants went through practice rounds at the Hunt and Country Club yesterday, Sandy rested after a final tuneup Saturday that showed his game at its peak, a 32 for the first nine that included a five on the par four ninth.

Two-Hit Game By Lefty Defeats Pros

Behind two-hit pitching by Lefty McNally, the Petes defeated the Buffalo Fro-Joys, a semi-pro team, here Saturday by a 4-1 score. It was an exhibition ball game in Riverside and some 800 fans witnessed a neat contest. The Petes took a 2-0 lead in the second inning and were never headed. Rain threatened throughout the tilt but did not fall.

Lefty McNally was in superb form and southpawed his fast ball by 11 batters in a fine performance, limiting the visitors—who were late arriving—to two singles and four walks. The one run scored by Buffalo was unearned. McNally had good control, a blazing fast ball and a sharp hook which amazed the semi-pros. Ed Holtz twirled for the losers and went fair but did not look like an International League hurler. He allowed eight hits and two walks while fanning four.

Cliff Cadd led the locals at bat with a triple and single in four times up. Kearns and Whatley hit doubles, the latter driving in two of the runs. Lamendola and Graeber were the only Buffalo boys to get a hit. Some good fielding was shown with defensive features supplied by Cadd, Kearns, and Graeber.

Petes Get Two

A single by Lamendola was wasted with two out in the first for Buffalo and the Petes failed to threaten in their half. Three of the visitors were fanned in a row in the second, but the Petes got two runs. Doll singled and took second on an out. He moved to third on Cadd's single, the latter taking second on an infield out. Whatley's whistling double to the score-board sent both across the plate. There were two walks off McNally in the third but no damage done, and a double by Kearns and a walk to Murphy didn't help the Petes.

A two-base error led Mecca in position to steal third in the fourth but he died there. The Petes got a hit through Burton, but it did no good. After retiring Buffalo easily in the fifth, the locals got a run when Kearns walked, took second on a sacrifice, third on Murphy's hit and home on an out. Buffalo got a run in the sixth with two out. An error let Mecca reach first. He stole second and came home on Graeber's timely hit. The Petes got it back when Cadd tripled to the left field wall and came home on an out. Not a Buffalo runner reached first the last three innings, and the Petes went back in order in their two last turns at bat.

Toronto Girls Defeat Keene

Danforth Aces defeated the Keene squad by an 13-10 score in an exhibition girls' softball game Saturday night in Riverside Park. A good crowd of fans saw a heavy-hitting affair, with some loose fielding figuring in the scoring. It was a return tilt, Keene having won from the Aces in Toronto a week before. O. Small twirled for the winners, allowing 12 hits as she fanned five and walked one. M. Carthy for Keene pitched three heats, giving four hits and a walk as she struck out one. Bea McDowell finished it up allowing 15 bingles and no walks, while whiffing two. None of the twirlers had brilliant backing by their mates.

R. Hatfield led the Aces at bat with a triple, double and two singles, as J. Coveyduck and K. Richards got three hits apiece. For Keen, G Nelson belted out three bingles, and M. McCarthy got a homer and double, with M. Miller hitting two singles. Some neat fielding was shown by E. Young, H. Aikens and B. Nichols of Toronto; and D. Warner, D. Cocks, and G. Nelson of Keene. Giantmen Out In Flag Race For National?

NEW YORK, July 25—(CP)—Applying to baseball the old boxing theory that a hungry fighter is the one to back when everything else looks even, it appears Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs will do the real scrapping in the remainder of the National League pennant race.

The Pirates are sitting at the banquet table for the first time in more than a decade. Chicago hasn't tasted championship fare since 1935 while New York Giants may be a trifle surfeited after two straight years of feasting. They may not realize it, but they're no longer pennant hungry.

The difference has been showing up lately in the tough games, such as those two 15-inning affairs yesterday at Chicago and Pittsburgh.

The Cubs had just enough extra vigor to beat out the Giants 5-4 in one of them after tying the count in the ninth. The Pirates did the same thing against Boston Bees by the same score in the first half of a doubleheader, then went on to win the six-inning nightcap, 4-2.

Pirates Increase Lead.

As a result, Pittsburgh increased its lead over New York to four games—six in the losing column — while the Cubs trailed the Giants by only 1½ game.

Stan Hack and Bill Lee were the big factors in Chicago's triumph, the 11th and 13th home games against eastern teams. Lee bested Carl Hubbell in a relief pitching duel, giving four hits over the last seven innings. Hack scored the tying run in the ninth and doubled home Billy Jurges with the winning counter.

For Pittsburgh it was Jim Tobin, Gus Suhr and Johnny Rizzo. After Bob Klinger had been knocked out, Tobin blanked the Bees with five hits for eleven frames until successive doubles by Suhr and Rizzo broke up the game in the 15th. Three runs in the first and Ed Brandt's elbowing settled the second game.

Games Rained Out.

Since the Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox were rained out, the rest of yesterday's program decided little. New York Yankees maintained their one-game American League lead over Cleveland when two hits off Thornton Lee and a couple of Chicago errors brought a 2-0 victory over the White sox before Chicago cut loose against Johnny Murphy in the eighth inning of the nightcap to win 8-3.

Detroit Tigers won a doubleheader from Philadelphia, taking the first game 7-6 on a six-run fifth inning marked by Hank Greenberg's homer with the bases full and the second 7-3.

Three other doubleheaders resulted in even splits. The St. Louis Browns beat out Washington 4-2 then took an 11-1 drubbing. Cincinnati's four runs in the eighth beat the Phillies 7-5, but Johnny Vander Meer's wildness gave Philadelphia the second game 5-1. The St. Louis Cardinals edged out Brooklyn 5-4 then were in turn edged out themselves 3-2.

All Saturday's American League games were rained out. In the National League Diz Dean hung a 3-1 defeat on New York Giants for the Cubs in one half of a double bill and the Cubs won the other half 7-4. Brooklyn beat St. Louis 4-3 and Cincinnati won 10-9 from Philadelphia while Pittsburgh lost to Boston 4-2.

Award For Dominion Golf Title

Junior golfers in the Dominion will meet this week at the London Hunt Club, to compete for the honor of being the first Junior Golf Champion of Canada. The competition is limited to those juniors who have come through elimination trials in their respective provinces to become Provincial Junior Champions. The final winner will have the custody of the Buckingham Cup, shown ABOVE, for one year. This trophy, which was donated to the Royal Canadian Golf Association by Charles H. Sclater, of Hamilton, has nine fluted pillars, each surmounted by an enamelled crest of the coat-of-arms of each province. These pillars encircle a larger central pillar, which in turn, is surmounted by a crest of the Dominion coat-of-arms.

Brintons Hold Undefeated Soccer Record

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, July 25. — Brinton football team of Peterborough maintained their unbeaten league record at Deloro on Saturday afternoon, defeating the Smelters 2-1.

Deloro kicked off and play for the first ten minutes was of an even character. Then Brown of the homesters was ordered off the field for the entire game for talking back to the referee and Deloro faced their opponents with ten men. Shortly afterwards Newt Downer obtained possession and placed the ball past O'Neill on a second kick that halted the play for a while and on resumption Deloro played pluckily, carrying attacks into the visitors' territory. A goal by Brooks was disallowed for being offside. The first half ended with the score, Brintons 1, Deloro 0.

Brintons showed marked superiority in the second half. Eventually Newt Downer accepted a pass from his brother George and sent in a low grounder. O'Neill made a good attempt to save but failed to hold a greasy ball. End to end play ensued for about ten minutes without either team showing to much advantage. Both defences were stubborn as throughout the whole period of play. O'Neill made a good save as Cairk sent in a hot shot from half way. Art Downer accidentally handled as Bradley sent in a high lob shot, and Cousins, taking the penalty kick, scored.

For the remainder of the game Deloro were hard pressed in preventing further scoring on the part of Brintons. It was a big day for Newt of the Downer quartette. The advent of a fourth child in his family that morning was celebrated in the afternoon wit hhis obtaining the aggregate score of his team.

The teams fielded as follows:

Brintons— Goal, Adams; backs, Art Downer, Asa Downer; halfbacks, Castle, Jones, McLeod; forwards, Cairk, Richardson, Newt Downer, Leether, George Downer.

Deloro — Goal, C. Neill; backs, Cousins, J. Hart; half-backs, N. O'Neill, Townson, Sproul; forwards, W. Hart, Bradley, Brooks, Brown, Gray; sub, Elliott.

Referee—J. Hanlon, Peterborough.

Raffensberger Holding Wings In 2nd Place

TORONTO, July 25—(CP)—Rochester Red Wings aren't likely to beat out Newark for the International League pennant; they may have plenty of trouble staying where they are—in second place 11½ games behind the Bears — but as long as they can come up with a pitcher like Ken Raffensberger the season won't be wholly disappointing.

Raffensberger, a young left hander, came up this season from Cambridge of the Eastern Shore League, where he won 18 and lost six last year. He marked up his 10th victory for the Red Wings and his sixth in a row as a starting hurler when Rochester walloped Toronto 11-5 in the first game.

The Wings didn't do so well in the nightcap when Babe Davis held them to one hit in the last four innings and Toronto made five blows good for a 5-4 victory. They remained a half game ahead of Buffalo's third-place Bisons, who won the opener from Montreal, 7-3, but lost the second game 4-3. Newark also broke even,beating the Baltimore Orioles 11-5 then taking a six-hit, 2-0 shutout from Johnny Wittig. The Syracuse-Jersey City twin bill was rained out.

TORONTO, July 25. —(CP). — Johnny Jones' boys from Stratford garnered what little glory developed during a dull amateur baseball session Saturday when they defeated London, 1-0, in the only game played in the Inter-County Senior Circuit.

Rain which fell throughout the contest finally forced a halt to the affair before London could complete its half of the ninth inning. The tying run was on base at the time.

At Brantford, Alerts and Strathroy managed to reach the third inning before being chased from the diamond by a downpour.

Nats' victory sliced the Londoners' lead to one full game, with the latter nine having two games in hand.

Port Colborne and Niagara Falls were returned winners in the Niagara district games, Sailors edging out an 8-6, 10-inning decision over Merritton and the Cataract crew routing Welland 11-1.

Homer Breaks Up Game.

Schoolboy Mussel was the whole show in Falls' victory, the big hurler yielding only two hits while striking out seven.

Jimmy Simpson's Dominion Foundries retained their flawless record when they defeated Eastwoods, 4-1, in a Hamilton and District League fixture. Tommy Bonk, fleet flycatcher, featured for the winners with a three-for-three batting mark. Dominions have yet to be beaten this season.

Aside from actual warfare, other news concerning the baseballers came from an executive meeting of the Ontario Softball Association. The meeting concurred in the suspension by the O.B.A. of seven members of the Kingston Ponies, all of whom play softball. The Kingston team was suspendel last month for using ineligible players.

WINS SKATING WAGER

SYDNEY, Australia — (CP). — Keith Wheeler, who wagered $40 he could roller-skate 220 miles from Sydney to Newcastle, won his bet when he completed the distance in 47 hours. Wheeler undertook to do the journey in less than 50 skating hours.

Letters Read Bethany W.I.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BETHANY, July 25—The Women's branch of the W.I. at Bethany held their regular monthly meeting on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. F. W. Reynolds.

Letters read by the secretary regarding an appeal made from Saskatchewan requesting a larger share of wearables be sent for family use.

This was dealt with and remains open for a period until more information is forthcoming and another bale may be sent later. Mrs. Simpson was to be given the order for making a much needed piano cover, installed in the town hall.

Letters regarding the coach sent out from Bowmanville and an outline of the requirements those who take up the studies. Discussion on information regarding more equipment for fire protection: engine suitable and water supply to be provided in convenient proximity to town hall as the equipment on hand is quite inadequate for quick work in case of fire.

Several more quilt blocks were brought to the meeting, still a number more required to complete the work. It was also decided to defer the picnic for the club until August.

The major item on the program was a most enjoyable and interesting address, on honey by Professor Jarvis at present resident of the village and engaged in apiary work.

A dainty lunch was served by the hostess, provided by the group in charge.

Looking Back
On This Date

JULY 25

Sir John Macdonald did not believe in what has come to be a habit with later Prime Ministers of referring delicate constitutional issues to the courts for decision. This is made evident by a letter he despatched on July 25, 1889, to Sir John Thompson, who had had to deal with a proposal by Hugh Graham of The Montreal Star, that the constitutionality of the Jesuits Estates Act of the Quebec Legislature (passed in 1888, fifty years ago) shouul be referred to the Supreme Court of Canada for review. Sir John had, from the first, taken the stand that the legislation, which provoked so great a storm amongst the ultra-Protestant section of Ontario particularly, was wholly within provincial jurisdiction, and, therefore, not a matter for review by either the Dominion Government or the courts.

The Prime Minister was emphatic: "I call your attention to the grave danger of the practice of summary application for advice to the Supreme Court being resorted to. It would quickly grow, and a Dominion Government, careless or ignorant or constitutional principles might on every question of public interest, for popularity or some sinister purpose, freely use the power of reference. A Mercier Government would leave every question to the Supreme Court, if it thought the courts below were adverse to its wishes. And it would be an inducement to pack the Supreme Court with its partisans, imitating in that respect the Government of the United States. The courts below would gradually be ousted of their jurisdiction, and a new Star Chamber erected. I don't think this at all an imaginary danger."

Sir John was not always as jealous of provincial rights as in the Jesuits estates case. He had fought the Mowat ministry tooth and nail and lost all along the line, and had come to the conclusion that the less a Cabinet had to do with the courts the better. The duty of a government was to govern, take the responsibility for its acts and accept the consequences and not evade an issue by use of the courts.

One wonders what he would have said if he lived to our present custom, where troublesome issues are shelved until the judges have decided in the hope that something may turn up meantime to divert public attention from a contentious issue. At the same time, Sir John stood for reference of vital constitutional issues to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London, now the last link remaining of the "tutelage" which was abolished by the Ctatute of Westminster, when Canada "became a nation."

Eggs Are Strongest Feature Of Market

Fecent rains were "bad" not only for the little potatoes, but also for the little carrots and beets and a lot of other produce that has been coming to market in recent weeks, and reached just about full size Saturday. It is an ancient wheeze, true of every summer ,and notably realized in Saturday's plentiture of fruits and vegetables.

It is cherry time, too, in the district. Six quart baskets of Montmcrencies sold at 45 cents, and the supply was ample. And there were raspberries for everybody. Lowest quotations appeared to be three quart baskets for 25 cents. The quality was excellent. Local gardeners are suggesting that housekeepers who can afford to lay in a stock for two years should do so. The market is all on the side of the buyer, and beside the growers say there is a plant disease called mosaic that is quite general, and may have a diminishing effect on their output in the next year or two.

Vegetable marrows were new arrivals from the neighborhood. They were ten cents each or two for fifteen, and some one offered the advice that sliced marrow cooked in bacon fat is something to rave about. However, it wasn't mentioned in that menu the Parisian chefs prepared last week for King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Carrots and beets were five cents a bunch, potatoes 20 cents a peck, beans two quarters for fifteen cents, and one lot of butter beans were offered at five cents a quart size box. Big onions of the Dutch Sets variety were three bunches for ten cents, and Bert Arnott's tomatoes were quoted at six quart baskets for $1.00.

Honey was more plentiful, and the quality is splendid. One of the producers in Saturday's group was B. McManus, of R.R. No. 4, Lakefield. He sold clover honey at four quart tins for 55 cents. The average price was 15 cents a pound.

Butter was steady at 25 cents, eggs were firmer around 26 to 30 cents a dozen, most of the sales being around 28 cents. Chickens were 23 to 25 cents a pound and about 20 cents, some of them down to 18 cents. Gooseberries were ten cents a box, or three boxes for 25 cents.

One of the gardeners suggested Saturday that with all the vegetables and fruit available at present it might be possible to extend the market into Saturday afternoons for the benefit of those citizens who cannot come down town in the morning. "What we ought to have," he said, "is some attractive leader article the way the stores do to get more people than there are now coming to the farmers' market. The hours for selling are just about what they have always been, although the automobile has created a new condition that makes it much easier for the producer to reach the market. It is easier coming and going, and it might be practicable to try to educate buyers to the idea of Saturday afternoon selling as well as the morning."

Lad Is Strangled Eating Peanut

(Examiner Correspondence.)

COE HILL, July 25.—A sad accident occurred at Coe Hill last Tuesday when little Digby Edward Hardinge, infant son of Oscar Everard and Verna Mae Hardinge of that place while eating a peanut got a portion down into the larynx, and strangled on it.

He was immediately rushed to Bancroft where Dr. Anderson decided an operataion would be necesary, and not having at hand the necessary instruments for examination telephoned Drs. Morgan and Chant of Belleville, who arrived quickly by motor.

The little patient had lost much strength during the necessary delay and as Dr. Chant inserted the life-giving tube he passed away. Artificial respiration was tried but without success.

The bereaved parents committed the remains to the care of Mr. Towle, the undertaker at Bancroft, who placed them in a beautiful casket in which it was conveyed to Coe Hill preparatory to the funeral which took place in the Anglican church there on Tuesday, July 21.

The sympathy of the friends and neighbors was expressed partly in the overwhelming show of flowers and also in the many acts of kindness and assistance tendered to the parents and family both then and afterwards. There was not sufficient room in the house for the floral tokens that arrived.

The funeral service took place in St. Michael's church, where the rector, Rev. Mr. Redding delivered a most impressive sermon, the text of which was our Lord's utterance, "Except ye become as little children ye are not fit for the kingdom of God." The church was crowded and many were forced to remain outside.

Search Parties Find Aged Bancroft Man

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BANCROFT, July 25.—William Lee, eighty-year-old resident of Bancroft left his home about seven o'clock on Thursday evening to obtain his mail at the post office. The mail wasn't sorted when he reached the wicket so started for a walk and lost his way. After searching for him herself Mrs. Lee notified the police about nine o'clock.

The fire siren was sounded to get a crowd together, search parties were organized and after several hours of searching he was found wandering on the railroad track about two a.m. on Friday morning.

Boy Sped 204 Miles To Iron Lung

CALGARY, July 25—(CP).—Bill Mallett, 20-year-old infantile paralysis suffered, was pronounced in satisfactory condition here today after he had ben placed in an "iron lung," rushed 204 miles from Edmonton by truck.

Placing of Mallett in the mechanical lung late last night ended a seven-hour battle by an eight-men emergency squad administering artibrought to Calgary from his home at ficial respiration. Earlier he had been Keoma, 20 miles north of here.

"Gee, that feels good, I can breathe now," he said shortly after being placed in the iron lung. "It sure feels funny to talk."

The words were the first coherent ones he had uttered in 10 hours.

Mallett was the third paralysis victim admitted to the isolation hospital here. The other two came from Turner Valley, 45 miles southwest of Calgary, where all public meetings have been banned, theatres and all places of amusement closed in an effort to halt spread of the disease.

Open Verdict In 4th Scenic Road Death

GANANOQUE, Ont., July 25. —(CP).—No special warning was given workmen on the new scenic highway about a high voltage wire where they were working, although construction officials knew it was there, it was stated last night during an inquest at Lansdowne into the electrocution of Homer Botting July 14.

The jury returned an open verdict after it heard how Botting used a stick to lift the 4,600 volt wire over the end of the steam shovel on which he worked. It was stated in evidence if the boom had been lowered while the shovel was going under the wires, the accident would not have occurred.

Botting's death was the fourth in this job. Campbell Construction Company are building the new highway.

Millbrook W.A. Hears Address

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, July 25.—Mrs. M. McDowell was hostess for the July meeting of the Women's Missionary Auxiliary of St. Andrew's church, which met at her home, Main street south, on Wednesday with about thirty in attendance, and the president, Mrs. A. L. Siscoe, in the chair.

The president gave an appeal from the Neighborhood Association, of Toronto, for homes for city children who need a vacation in the country; Mrs. A. Coulter of Zion Line, has taken two of these children for a two weeks' vacation each year and will again in August of this season.

It was decided to hold the August meeting in conjunction with the Circle, the latter to provide the program; a quilting will precede the business gathering. The poem, "O, Still Small Voice," was read by Mrs. J. McKnight, as a consecration of the offering, and the guest speaker of the evening, Mrs. Stanley Gray of Campbellcroft, was then introduced by Mrs. Sisco.

Mrs. Gray gave a most inspiring address on "Readiness", illustrated from St. Paul's experiences after his conversion on the Damascus road "Again and again," he said, "I am ready," and we have to come into this experience before we can be right in the way of God's will".

During the social hour at the close the hostess, and her daughters, Misses Madeline, Marjorie and Beatrice, served refreshments, and they, with the speaker, were warmly thanked before the gathering dispersed.

Chamberlain Names Runciman To Job At Praha's Request

LONDON, July 26 (AP).—Prime Minister Chamberlain declared in the House of Commons today amid cheers: "Let no one imagine that thoug. we seek peace we are willing to sacrifice even for peace British honor and British vital interests."

The prime minister was defending his foreign policy in the last debate before three-months parliamentary recess.

"Our aim is not the less peaceable because no one can imagine we have reason to fear any foe," he declared.

Chamberlain said that the defences of the country became more formidable day by day and added:

"But while that tremendous power remained as a guarantee that we could defend ourselves if we were attacked, we were not unmindful of the fact that though it was good to have a giant's strength it was tyranous to use it."

During the debate the prime minister announced Viscount Runciman, former cabinet minister, had agreed to become investigator and mediator in the dispute between the Czechoslovak government and its autonomy-seeking Germanic and other minorities.

He said the former president of the board of trade would work independently of the British government in an effort to solve the problem which was distrubing Europe.

Buttress of Peace.

Referring to King George's visit to France last week, the Prime Minister said "the friendship of France and Great Britain was in itself a solid buttress for peace."

"That unity," he said, "was strengthened and confirmed by the conversations which took place between Lord Halifax (British Foreign Minister) and French Ministers in Paris."

He said there was no mystery about the conversations, adding that "there have been no new undertakings and no new commitments on either side—there was a general discussion of common interests."

Speaking of Spain, Mr. Chamberlain announced that insurgent authorities had agreed to a British proposal for investigation of bombings of British ships which appeared to the government deliberate.

He said the inquiry would be made by two naval officers, one to be named by Britain and the other by the insurgents.

If they agreed an attack was deli-

SUBURBAN East York township should augment its police force with about 200 volunteers, mostly ex-service men, Deputy Reeve John Doggett told the Township Council yesterday. "Three store holdups in four nights is no joke," he said. "People are getting nervous."

Deputy Reeve suggested volunteers patrol the township in pairs, one to stay at the scene and take notes if he sees anything suspicious and the other to hurry away to a telephone and advise police.

SUDBURY, Ont., July 26 (CP).—Jacob Isaac Glick was fined a total of $16,395 on 23 charges of illegally trafficing in and possessing beaver pelts and other furs. In default of payment the Sudbury fur dealer, found guilty yesterday by Magistrate Willard Cooper, must serve two years and six months less on day in reformatory.

A fine totalling $13,895 was imposed on Glick with the alternative of two years less on day in the reformatory on the charges of illegally exporting pelts. This fine was made up of 13,320 for the 444 beaver pelts seized at Rouyn, Que.; $540 for the $10 otter, seven marten and one fisher and $35 for the two mink, two cross foxes and 31 muskrats also seized there.

A fine of $1,900 with the alternative of one year in reformatory to be served concurrently was imposed for illegally purchasing 95 beaver pelts at Elsas, 200 miles north of here.

A fine of $600 with the alternative of six months in reformatory to be served consecutively was imposed for illegal possession of six beaver pelts at Gogama.

No Hint as to Paying

The crowded court room was given no immediate intimation whether Glick would pay the fines or serve the reformatory terms. No indication was made whether an appeal would be made.

Although the terms total more than two years it was understood here they may be served in a reformatory if Glick so elects.

Charges against J. B. Lacroix of acting as Glick's agent were dismissed, but he was fined $100 and costs with the alternative of 30 days in jail on the charge of buying five beaver pelts from John Davies. Lacroix pleaded guilty to the purchasing charge.

Soviet, Jap Troops Fight 5 Hrs.

Russians Driven Off After Firing 2 Border Villages

TOKYO, July 26 (AP).—A Red army detachment is reported today to have set fire to two Manchoukuo villages before being counter-attacked by Japanese-Manchoukuo forces. After exchanging fire for five hours, according to the report, the Soviet soldiers withdrew, leaving a number of men entrenched on an island in the middle of the river.

The incident occurred near the scene of another alleged border viodents reported in dispatches today lation July 21. The other two inciwere of a less serious nature.

Two messengers, after being held for eight days were handed over to Japanese authorities at Changlintien. They announced on their arrival that they had been given no reply to their representations concerning the Soviet occupation of Mt. Changfukeng. The Soviet police officer who brought them to the frontier said his instructions were merely to release them at the border and he knew nothing of any reply or other communication.

Meanwhile from the Possiet Bay region, scene of the dispute over the Soviet occupation of Mt. Changfuken, near the Korean Manchoukuo border, came the reports of two more alleged Soviet troop moves into what is claimed to be the territory of Manchoukuo.

In one instance the Red army men were said to have crossed the border south of Hunchun, retiring only when fired upon. In the second instance a stronger force of 20 infantrymen and 30 horsemen crossed again to a depth of 100 yards but were driven back.

Pitcairn Island Silent, Help Urged

NEW YORK, July 26—(AP).—Pitcairn Island to-day was reported isolated from the world—the isolation Fletcher Christian and his mutinous band from H.M.S. Bounty sought in 1789, but which now might threaten the island's food supply.

Two failures to establish wireless communication with the island plus the seeming disinclination of trading ships to call at the island, presumably because of false rumors of typhoid, have convinced Mrs. Dorothy Hall, housewife, that the wireless equipment on the island has failed.

Mrs. Hall, who has regularly communicated with the island, attempted to "speak" the station again this morning after a power failure yesterday. She succeeded in hearing the call letters of the island station, then silence.

"Pitcairn Island radio crippled. Urge you rush immediate aid, medicine and supplies, also investigate two-month trade boycott."

Asks Roosevelt Act.

In another cablegram she messaged President Roosevelt: "As a citizen of United States I appeal to you, Mr. President, to request immediate British Government aid for Pitcairn Island. Islanders have appealed through me for medicines and supplies. No ship traded there since May 27 because of false typhoid rumors. Radio equipment now disabled and islanders isolated from world."

Mrs. Hall, who operates wireless station in her suburban Queen's home, said two power failures presage the breakdown of the island's radio communication system.

Miss Emily McCoy, Bridgeport, Conn., relative of the nominal head of the island colony, was with Mrs. Hall again this morning during the attempt to learn more of the islanders' difficulties, but no success attended her vigil.

Pitcairn Island was settled by forebears of the present inhabitants in 1789. There the mutinous crew from H.M.S. Bounty and their polynesian mates obtained the seclusion they sought until 1808, when their hideout was discovered.

2nd Bomb Located In Arab Market

HAIFA, Palestine, July 26 (CP).—Five persons were killed today in the Palestine's racial conflict which took 47 lives in Haifa yesterday.

Greater loss of life was averted when police found a time bomb in the crowded Arab vegetable market of old Jerusalem in time to prevent an explosion.

The heavily-charged bomb was discovered by authorities at 15 minutes before it was set to explode. Police expressed belief the bomb was similar to the one which exploded in the Haifa market yesterday.

Three members of a terrorist band were slain in a battle with special constables whom they had attacked.

A Jewish father and his 14-year-old son were killed when they were ambushed near the Jewish settlement of Mishmar Hayarden on the banks of the Jordan river near the Syrian frontier.

High Explosive

At least 70 of these dynamite caps shown at BOTTOM in the hand of Constable Wallace Hendren of Lakefield are missing somewhere about that village, following their alleged theft by youngsters in the vicinity. Two of the caps shown here are those exploded by 13-year-old Russell Eagleton. One of them blew the thumb and four fingers from his right hand. At TOP Constable Hendren points to the lock on a warehouse owned by the Canada Cement Company, forced open during the weekend. Filled with high explosives, it was from this building that some 200 caps were stolen, more than half of them being found strewn about the neighborhood.

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., July 26 (CP). — Three systematic robbers, who cut Hydro and telephone wires before departing, tied up a wealthy Orangeville farmer and his two hired hands last night and made off with $300 taken from one of the farmer's two sisters.

The masked men, all armed, forced their way into John McBrien's home at gun point. They ransacked the house after tying up McBrien and his helpers, Charles McArthur and Albert Hall. Alice and Maria McBrien, the sisters, were upstairs at the time and hearing the commotion one of them attempted to hide the money under her bed but was interrupted by one of the bandits.

McArthur had $100 hidden upstairs which the bandits missed in their search. The holdup men also had piled furniture atop the three bound men.

McBrien told police the tallest of the three masked men repeatedly asked him: "Where is your safe?" He said he refused to reveal where any money was hidden in the house and the bandit grabbed him by the throat ad shock him.

Set Free In Half Hour

After half an hour of tugging at ropes which bound them, the three men freed themselves. It was then learned that the hydro lines and the telephone line had been cut. Going to a neighbor's house they telephoned Constable H. T. Hammer of the Provincial Police.

Constable Hammer immediately broadcast the occurrence of the robbery to the county and neighboring police. The robbery is believed to have taken place about 10:30, but it was much later than that before the police were notified. All roads were combed and motorists going or coming from summer resorts at midnight were stopped and questioned.

U.S. Rail Fares Up

WASHINGTON, July 26—(AP).—Railroads in the Eastern United States began charging more for passenger tickets to-day.

With Interstate Commerce Commission approval, they increased the fare from 2 to 2.5 cents a mile for an experimental period of 18 months. The carriers estimated the increase would net them $45,000,000.

The area in which the lines operate is bounded roughly by Lake Michigan, St. Louis, the Ohio River, Huntington, W. Va., and Norfolk, Va.

Glass In Wounds Add Mystery

BELLEVILLE, Ont., July 26 — (CP)—Investigation into the death of Sergt. Major H. W. Burkholder of Hamilton was pressed today at camp Petawawa, the training camp to which Burkholder's companions proceeded Saturday unaware he had fallen off the train and was dying beside the railway tracks. His body was found Sunday about nine hours after he died.

Death was due to bleeding from multiple cuts on the face, legs and groin, Dr. R. A. Flynn, who performed an autopsy, told the preliminary inquest conducted here yesterday by Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson. The inquest will be resumed Aug. 4 when comrades in the same railway coach as Burkholder will stop off here to give evidence en route back to Hamilton from training camp.

Provincial Police and Coroner Robertson have suggested foul play in Burkholder's death and declare they are mystified as to how he got off the moving train. There was evidence of glass in his cuts, but no window in the railway coach was broken, the coroner said.

A military funeral will be given Sergeant Burkholder at Hamilton.

Fascists Discover Italians Are Aryan

ROME, July 26—(AP).—Fascism was committed to a new racial concept to-day as an accepted party doctrine.

Achille Starace, party secretary, translated the idea of "race principles" into active politics with the declaration that "elaboration and discussion of Fascist race principles" would be the popular culture ministry's main task in 1939.

Starace spoke yesterday before a group of scholars responsible, under auspices of the ministry of popular culture, for a report published last Thursday, in which Italians were said of be of Aryan origin, and Jews were said "not to belong to the Italian race."

Japanese Cut Kiukiang Defence Line

Blast Way Into City After Delay Of Three Weeks

SHANGHAI, July 26.—(AP).—The Japanese command announced its army had at last opened a path for a major offensive against Hankow to-day by occupying Kiukiang and thereby breaking the principal Chinese defence line in the Yangtse Valley.

Kiukiang is 135 miles down the Yangtse river from Hankow, provisional Chinese capital. The Japanese had tried more than three weeks to force their entry into the city.

The Japanese entered it this morning, after Chinese defences began to crumble last night.

Chinese claim to the contray, the Japanese said General Chiang Kai-Shek's troops were retreating to the west and south-west, presumably hoping later to swing back to the north to form new defences for the capital.

While the army completed its occupation of Kiukiang, the Japanese announcement related, Japanese warships advanced slowly up the Yangtse and, with army and navy airforces, joined in shelling and bombing the retreating Chinese.

The Japanese said the fall of Kiukiang was the culmination of a forceful offensive begun last Saturday, when troops were landed on the west bank of Lake Poyang.

Capture of the city was said to have broken the Chinese defence line stretching from Kiukiang 90 miles southward along the west bank of Lake Poyang to Nanchang, the Chinese air base.

The Chinese positions in the Yangtse valley were wobbling, the Japanese asserted and "it is only a matter of time until their collapse."

Nine Poisoned; Stew Analyzed

MONTREAL, July 26.—(CP)—Police chemists examined today the ingredients of a chicken stew in an attempt to discover the cause of a sudden illness that sent a family of nine to hospital.

Anton Tkalcic, 38-year-old unemployed laborer, his wife, Josephine, 36, and their seven children, ranging in age from three weeks to 12 years, were recovering from the malady that struck them last night after they had eaten a stew made with a newly-killed chicken and homemade noodles.

Police were called to the Ville Emard home of the stricken family and the nine were removed to hospital after first-aid treatment.

William, one of the children, who suffered les sthan the others, ran out into the street and called neighbors after his father had gone to bed with severe stomach pains.

Mrs. Thacic was in bed unconscious when police arrived. The children were walking round the house. The eldest, Marie, is 12 years of age. The others are William, nine; Josephine, eight; Albert, seven; Romeo, six; Juliette, five and Denise, three weeks old.

U.A.W. Trial Court Guards Doubled

DETROIT, July 26.—(AP).— A reinforced guard was assigned to the offices of the United States' Automobile Workers' Union to-day to circumvent any invasion by "open trial" advocates such as delayed the trial of four suspended officers yesterday.

Homer Martin, union president and a central figure in an intra-union fight, ordered additional guards posted at the international offices while the executive board prepared to convene.

In tactics paralleling the union's once popular "sit-down" technique for pressing strike demands, supporters of the four disciplined union vice-presidents had taken possession of union offices yesterday. There was one fist fight, and police were summoned three times.

Charged by Martin with being "Communists" and "union wreckers," a crowd of demonstrators variously estimated at 50 to 75 had demanded an "open trial," or the privilege of seating "observers" in the trial room. The board, explaining that such permission would "discriminate" against other union members, rejected both requests.

Supporters of the four suspended officers — Vice-presidents Richard T. Frankenstein, Ed Hall, Wyndham Mortimer and Walter N. Wells—pushed through resolutions attacking Martin at a meeting last night of the Detroit District Council of the U.A.W.

Mimico, Ont., July 26.

H. HUGHES asked this Toronto suburb's town council last night to allow persons on relief to do one day's work in lieu of paying tax. Within two weeks police have summoned 60 residents for non-payment of the fee.

Mayor Amos Waites opposed Mr. Hughes' suggestion. "There are lots of persons working short time in factories who aren't getting any more than those on relief," he said. "We can't discriminate against their dogs."

Timber Worms Stripping Cavan Bush

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, July 26. — A horde of worms are stripping the trees in Edwin Moore's woods on the Eighth Line of Cavan. They commenced their devastations on Friday at the south side of the woods, leaving the trees completely bare of leaves, and on Sunday had almost reached the northerly limits.

They are there in millions, covering trees, fence posts, and ground. They seem to drop wit ha web-line formation. The pests are green and brown in color, and from one to two inches long.

The district agricultural representative, Mr. Summers, was ntified, and he visited the woods on Sunday morning.

Not Army Worms.

He said they were not the army worm, as was at first feared, but were a timber worm, and thought they would not likely touch the grain. However, samples were sent ot Ottawa for information as to the means of ridding the woods of them, and as soon as obtained, the work will commence on clearing away the menace to trees and crops.

It is noticed they first stripped the leaves from the maples and are now attacking the pines. The woods where they have passed over present the appearance of wintertime, with the sunlight shining through the bare limbs.

Gunning Sent To Trial For Murder

...rmer Sheds Tears ...s He Tells Story Of Finding Accused

ROCKVILLE, Ont., July 26.—(CP)—William Gunning, 21-year-old Kitley Township farmhand, was committed today for trial on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Miss Irene Mott July 8. Gunning was not represented by counsel and did not plead at preliminary hearing before Magistrate G. A. Wright.

Gunning, who appeared in overalls and minus socks, was silent when asked at conclusion of the hearing if he wished to say anything. After the hearing, the farmhand was returned to county jail.

Miss Mott, daughter of Gunning's employer, died July 8, three days after she and her mother were beaten severely. The two women were found unconscious by Frank R. Mott, Gunning's employer.

The first witness was Frank R. Mott, who said that he had employed Gunning for three months at $18 per month and that he had also worked for him on previous occasions. On the morning when his wife and daughter were attacked, Mott said he rose at 4.50 a.m. and called Gunning whom he saw under quilts in bed. Twice later, while he was milking the cows, he again called him and each time received an answer. On the fourth occasion, he noticed Gunning's shoes were missing and, presuming that he had left the house, went upstairs to see his wife and daughter, both of whom he found lying with head wounds.

Mrs. Mott's Story

Mr. Mott was followed on the stand by his wife, who left hospital here a week ago. She testified that it was daylight when she awakened and she heard the door of her daughter's room shoved open. She tried to get out of her bed as she heard Irene cry out. "That was the last I knew," she said, "as he came in and hit me." She did not see Gunning enter her room and did not know who struck her. "I realized what was going on and tried to get out of the bed and fell to the floor between the wall and bed.

I tried to crawl out and got to the foot of the bed when I was hit," she said. She remembered nothing until her husband came in and picked her up from the floor. Mrs. Mott said that they had had "plenty of trouble with Bill," as he is "ugly." She is crippled with rheumatism and required assistance in moving about.

Miss Minnie Strikefoot, a neighbor, told of hearing Mr. Mott call and went to the house in company with her mother, Mrs. Pearl Strikefoot, who also told of rendering as-

Starch-Magic Animal Holds Secret Of 2-Way Growth

WOODS HOLE, Mass., July 26.—(AP).—Discovery that one small, barely-visible water animal can make, in 26 days, more starch and fat than the whole United States could eat, was described today at the Marine Biological Laboratory, summer workshop of United States scientists.

The animal is Chilmonas, a flagellate, so termed from the fact that he swims by lashing with fine, hair-like arms called flagella. Scientists got interested in him because, unlike virtually all other living things, he is able to make starch and fat without light. Starch and fat are two of three essential foods. Protein is the other.

The amount Chilmonas can make, said Dr. S. O. Mast, of Johns Hopkins University, is theoretically prodigious.

"For example," Dr. Mast wrote in The Collecting Net, a scientific journal, "in one of our experiments, which was started with a single individual, and continued 25 days, if all the individuals had been cultured, there would have been at the end of the experiment enough to reach a total volume of 612,000,000,000 cubic meters. "The starch in this mass would have been approximately 19,000,000 cubic metre sand the lat 6,000,000,000 cubic metres.

"This is sufficient to supply every

Kingston, Jamaica, July 26.

AN OLD STATUE came to life in Montego Bay, outport summer resort 100 miles from here, when assistants in stores and business houses walked out at 6:00 p.m. Saturday. A "blue law" on Jamaican statute books provides shops employing assistants must close at that hour, but until Saturday, it was never enforced.

ST. LOUIS, July 26—AP)—This story has a sting in it. The Bee Brothers are farmers living near here. The name "bee" looms in large letters on the mail box. And the other day when Mr. Bee went to get the mail he found a big swarm of bees had taken over the box. An adjoining mail box was ignored by the bees.

Ship Engineer Shapes Ring For Arctic Sea Wedding

CAPE DORSET, N.W.T., July 26 (CP).—The Arctic patrol vessel Nascopie steamed away from this Baffin Island outpost today, leaving behind an exploratory expedition, a year's supplies and a bride and groom joined in marriage by a wedding ring fashioned from an engine-room fitting.

The Nascopie has seen other weddings in her years of battering from Arctic floes, but never a one as took place on her deck yesterday combining the prominent names of civilization with the rough-and-ready resourcefulness of the outposts.

Rt. Rev. Archibald Fleming, Anglican bishop of the Arctic, and better known throughout Canada as "Archibald of the Arctic," officiated at the marriage of Thomas Henry Manning, distinguished British explorer and scientist, and Ella Wallace Jackson of Halifax. John Buchan, son of the Governor-General of Canada, acted as best man.

But almost as important to the ceremony as Rev. Mr. Fleming himself was Chief Engineer Thomas of the Nascopie. It was a ring hammered out by Thomas that was used as the wedding ring of Mr. and Mrs. Manning.

Manning is leader of the British-Canadian Arctic exploration expedition which will spend the next two years engaged in scientific investigation on Baffin Island.

Million Dollar Blast Wrecks Japs' Mukden Arms Plant

Peiping, July 26.

ABOUT $1,000,000 worth of Japanese arms and munitions were destroyed during a series of explosions at an arsenal at Mukden, Manchoukuo, Saturday, it was stated in apparently well-founded reports reaching here today through a censorship.

Mukden was badly shaken by the blasts, which followed a fire at the arsenal, the reports said. Japanese authorities suspected incendiarism, they added. There have been several cases of suspected sabotage in Manchoukuo recently, chiefly in public utility plants from Tsitsihar to Mukden.

See Runciman Advisor To Czechs

Chamberlain Expert Expected To Aid With Nazis Problem

LONDON, July 26 (AP).—Premier Chamberlain prepared answers for parliament today in the last foreign affairs debate before a three-months recess, during which his government may seek settlement of the Sudeten-German problem in Czechoslovakia.

The premier was expected to announce appointment of Viscount Runciman, former member of Earl Baldwin's cabinet as president of the board of trade, as advisor to the Czechoslovak government in its negotiations with the autonomy seeking Sudeten minority.

Political circles emphasized that the duties of Runciman, if he were named, or of any other advisor would be "conciliatory" toward the parties concerned—the Czechoslovak government, the 3,500,000 Sudeten German population which wants an increased degree of self-government, and Germany which Chancellor Hitler has proclaimed the defender of German minorities everywhere.

Some quarters here believed the Czechoslovak government was prepared to "go the full limit" under British advice, so long as the sovereignty of the little republic was safeguarded.

The Czechoslovak premier, Dr. Milan Hodza, put the finishing touches today to his government's proposed nationality statute, by which it is hoped to satisfy the Sudeten-German autonomy demands.

As a Last Resort.

It was understood here the British advisory plan, said to have originated in conversations with France, would not be brought into operation unless the Sudetens rejected concessions offered to them, as appeared likely.

The Czechoslovak offer presumably would be submitted by the Sudetens to Chancellor Hitler before a final decision could be reached.

Interest was exhibited in Parliament over the connection between the Czechoslovakia matter and the assurances Germany gave to Great Britain last week, of her desire for peaceful settlement of all outstanding questions.

To a question in the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Chamberlain replied that "I think they (the assurance) were in reference to Czechoslovakia."

Casement's Judge Sir T. Harridge Dies

HOVE, England, July 26—(CP-Cable). — Sir Thomas Gardner Horridge, 80, one of the three Judges who tried Sir Roger Casement, the Irish revolutionist, died here today.

For 27 years Sir Thomas was a Justice of the King's Bench Division of the High Colrt. Prior to his retirement in May, 1937, he was the oldest High Court Judge in England.

It was in April, 1916, that Sr Roger Casement was captured in Ireland on landing from a German submarine. Previously he had been for some months in Germany where he was believed to have engaged in a treasonable plot. During his earlier career, Sir Roger had been in the British consular service and had won prominence through his efforts to aid the natives of the Congo Free State and Brazil.

Tried before Sir Thomas Horridge and two other Justices, Sir Roger was convicted of high treason June 29, 1926, and hanged August 3.

Dog Bites 2 Bathers, Rabies' Test Follows

TORONTO, July 26 (C.P.). — Ontario Government Laboratory experts were busy with their microscopes to-day examining for evidence of rabies the brain of a police dog which attacked two Toronto visitors to Minnow Lake, near Sudbury.

Harry Clark, owner of the dog which was destroyed on Sunday soon after it raced madly among crowds of bathers at the lake, biting Clark and Mary Jackson, a companion, as it ran, visited the Provincial Laboritories here yesterday for Pasteur treatment.

Doctors said chances of rabies infection were "very slight."

Among the many alarms received in Ontario from persons "bitten by a mad dog," only one in the past seven years had led to a rabies diagnosis, they said. Nevertheless, they always recommended treatment against the disease as a precautionary measure.

Miss Jackson, who returned here with Clark after the incident, has not yet applied for treatment. Though it will not be known until to-morrow whether the dog was afflicted, provincial authorities have ordered a search for her.

Retired Pastor Plans Two-Year Cruise

VICTORIA, July 26 (CP). — Two years of adventure lay ahead of Rev. John Antle, retired administrator of the Church of England's Columbia coast mission when he left Victoria yesterday for England with plans to return in a 40-foot sloop.

Mr. Antle, honorary sea chaplain of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, said he expected to set out from England in the little yacht Reverie before the end of August. First stop on his leisurely return to Victoria was to be Newfoundland.

After spending several months in that colony, he planned an extended cruise around the West Indies before passing through the Panama Canal and returning to Victoria two years from now. Once before, the elderly clergyman voyaged from England to Victoria in a small boat. That was in 1933 when he brought the motorship John Antle to Victoria for use in his mission work.

Pattulo Urges Bolstering Canada's Army

VICTORIA, July 26 (CP).—Joint construction by the Dominion and Provincial governments of various public works projects, and strenthening of SCanada's military forces were advocated last night by Premier T. D. Pattullo as methods of relieving British Columbia's unemployed problem.

The premier, in a province-wide radio address, said his government planned to "again review the whole problem of unemployment with the Ottawa government at a favorable opportunity this fall."

Mr. Pattullo said he had "always maintained and still maintains that primary responsibility for unemployment relief rests upon Dominion authority."

However, this did not relieve the province from co-operating, to the fullest extent in meeting the issue.

"We cannot expect Dominion authority to join with this province in work which is essentially of provincial character," he said, "but there are many works of immediate joint concern in which the Dominion can and should join, and which by reason of financial considerations can be carried out only by joint action with the Dominion government."

Among such projects he listed trans-Canada highway construction "both in southern and northern British Columbia," to be finished in five years, and construction of the British Columbia-Yukon-Alaska highway.

Better Army

Of his proposed increase in military forces, Mr. Pattullo said:

"In view of world conditions and the probabilities of the future so far as humanly determinable, I think that we should augment our defensive forces in Canada.

"Several thousand men could be added to our militia, where the training and discipline would build up our young manhood and where our youth could be taught useful trades. Similarly, our navy could perform comparable service.

"In the field of aviation many thousands of young men could advantageously enter that service. The augmentation of all three of these services would be of great value not only for protective purposes but to the benefit of the economic and social life of our country.

Manion Hailed Home To Fort William

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 26 (C.P.). — Conservative Leader R. J. Manion was among fellow-townsmen to-day busy receiving congratulations upon his election as Party Chief at the National Conservative Convention in Ottawa early this month.

On his arrival last night he was greeted by a crowd of several thousand who lined the station platform and route to his hotel to cheer the Leader who as a boy played hockey on Fort William teams, who left the city to win distinction on the battlefields of France and returned to represent it for 15 years in the House of Commons.

Mayor Chisholm M. Ross in an address of welcome said Dr. Manion pssessed the qualities of leadership necessary to meet the demands of his high office. Dr. Manion replied that his one aim was to serve Canada, perhaps leave it a little better, so that neither his family nor his city need be ashamed of his action.

Women Lost In Wilds Eye Lizard Hungrily

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M., July 26—(A.P.). — Undaunted by four days of wandering without food or water in Western New Mexico's Badlands, three hardy women tourists studied road maps of Grand Canyon and Yellowstone Park to-day. They'll continue their western trip, they agreed, but there'll "be no more side trips."

A 233-mile excursion to see the perpetual ice caves, a natural refrigerator eroded in the lava beds south of Grants, N.M., brought them four days and four nights of almost unendurable harships after they became lost.

The trio, Misses Laura and Irene Piedalue and Marie Antonette de Lafforest, said the only nourishment they had from Tuesday morning until they were rescued on Saturday was a few leaves, dried berries, twigs and flowers.

Miss Laura Piedalue, a New York social worker, admitted hungrily eyeing a lizard on the third day.

Fireman Is Drowned Off Dredge's Deck

WINDSOR, Ont., July 26 (CP).—Fred Blain, 48, of Tilbury, Ont., was downed early today when he slipped from the dock of the dredge boat E Zee Bee into the Detroit river at Barr Harbor, six miles east of Windsor.

Roland Renaud, 22, of Belle River, Ont., was fishing from the dock with Blain, when Blain slipped. Renaud dived in an attempt to rescue Blain, but Blain struggled so furiously Renaud was unable to get a grip.

Blain had worked for Peltier Dredgeing Co., as fireman for only a month. Company officials said he was the first man lost from their boats in more than 50 years operations.

1,500 Prisoners Taken In Surprise Attacks Along 93-Mile Catalonia Sector

HENDAYE, France, July 26 (AP).—A massed Spanish government army of 70,000 men surged across the broad Ebro River today in a general advance against insurgent lines along a 3-mile front in Southern Catalonia.

The insurgents admitted the militiamen had gained a foothold on the west bank of the stream in Asco-Mora de Ebro sector where three columns drove toward Gandesa, regional insurgent headquarters 14 miles west of the Ebro

Many insurgent units had been pulled out of the long-quiet area to aid the drive on Valencia to the south and the government's surprise offensive gave the insurgents a taste of the tactics they used so effectively in the Estremadura region in Southwestern Spain near the Portuguese frontier, where government lines had been weakened to defend Valencia.

The government reported the advance was general from the Ebro delta at Amposta, at the mouth of the Ebro, along the curving course of the stream to Mequinenza, about midway between Gandesa and Lerida.

Artillery Opens Port.

Throughout the week-end, the government reorganized its lines on the east bank of the river, planted heavy artillery in hills to the rear and brought up equipment for building pontoon bridges.

All was ready at dawn on Monday, when shells began raining on insurgent positions across the river. Engineers rushed hasty bridges across which infantry streamed to assume positions already plotted from information gleaned by raiding parties.

At many points the insurgents were taken so completely by surprise that the government troops crossed virtually without firing a shot. At other places the crossing was forced only after heavy fighting in which, said Barcelona despatches, 1,500 prisoners were taken.

individual in the United States with some 70 tons of starch and 20 tons of fat."

Increase by Division

There is no sex in these animals. The original "individual" in the experiment increased the population by dividing into two, the two into four, and so on. In 26 days, at the normal division rate, the number of Chilmonas would have been one followed by 26 zeros and multiplied by one and nine hundredths. In Grammar School words it would have been about one hundred billion trillions of animals.

The Chilmonas chemistry is the objective of the scientists. The little animal makes all this fat and starch out of carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen, oxygen, potassium, magnesium, sulphur and phosphorus. He does better with common calcium, but can get along without it.

Of more immediate practical importance than the dazzling food figures, the Johns Hopkins experiments have uncovered evidence that Chilmonas makes a queer substance which causes him to reproduce so enormously, but which also has the power to stop his wild growth.

It is a two-way chemical, which has not been isolated.

This mysterious substance, Dr. Mast wrote "is obviously of the greatest importance in all problems concerning growth (including cancer), reproduction and sensecence, and doubtless has important bearing on others."

Chatham Golfer Tops At London

LONDON, Ont., July 26—(CP)—Sonny Morse, Chatham shotmaker, scored a 7 and 6 victory over Jules Chartier of Laval-Sur-Le-Lac, Que., here today in the first 18-hole round in the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship.

Morse had a medal score of 34, one under par on the out nine. He had an approximate 4-3-3 against par 4-4-4 on the next three before the match ended. Chartier was in trouble from the start, losing the first five holes because of wild shooting. Morse birdied the third with a three when he lifted nicely from a sand trap and his ball rolled to the cup and dropped. Chartier was unsteady off the tees and had some trouble with his second shots.

Tells of Finding Gunning.

Frank E. Eaton of Frankville, testified that he went to his farm property, near the Mott home, every day during the week of July 4, staying there all day and performing chores about the place. The farm house was unoccupied and he said he took food with him. On the evening of July 8 he picked up some tools he had used in repairing a wagon and entered the kitchen to put them away. As he opened the door, he found Gunning confronting him. Eaton asked where he had been and told him the whole province of Ontario had been looking for him. Gunning intimated he had been hiding in a nearby swamp ad then enquired concerning the condition of Miss Mott.

When Gunning was informed that the girl was dead, Eaton said, he (Gunning) exclaimed, "What a mess I've got into. I'll be hanged."

Eaton, who wept as he gave his evidence, replied, "Yes, and what a home you've made up there. It will be the death of the old people over there." Gunning told him he had spoken to no one from July 4 and had sought out Eaton to obtain his advice. Eaton suggested that Gunning should surrender to police. He gave him some milk from the well where it was cooling and then Gunning accompanied him to the barn where he watched Eaton milk the cows.

Done Everything for Peace

Referring to the Sudeten German problem, Mr. Chamberlain said that "we have done everything to facilitate a peaceful solution."

He said Britain had impressed on both the Czechoslovak and German governments "our own sense of desirability of restraint."

"We have noted with satisfaction the efforts which the Czechoslovak government has made and we have been happy to receive assurances, recently renewed, from the German government of their own desire for a peaceful settlement."

Summing up, the prime minister said:

"If only we could find some peaceful solution of this Czechoslovak question, I should feel that the way was open again to further effort in a general appeasement—an appeasement which can not be attained until we can be satisfied that no major cause of difference or dispute remains unsettled."

sistance, while Dr. W. E. Throop, Frankville, called to the house, said that Miss Mott was suffering from a fractured skull toward the left eye and down the back of the head.

Mrs. Mott had a semi-circular wound about six inches long round the right ear, cut to the skull and on her right cheek a bruised wound which broke the flesh. The subsequent post-mortem performed by him and Dr. A. H. Judson, Brockville, disclosed that there had been two fractures of the skull in the case of Miss Mott, the brain substance being wounded to a depth of one and one-half inches. The wounds were apparently inflicted with some blunt instrument.

Didn't Know Why He Did It.

Gunning, in reply to Eaton's enquiries, repeatedly said he "did not know why I did it." Eaton testified that Guning said he went down stairs in the Mott home to put on his shoes and on the wall saw a hammer. He had take nthe hammer off the wall and gone upstairs, "and done it." About 11 o'clock that night, Eaton said, he took Gunning to his home in Frankville where Eaton fixed a bed for the farmhand in the loft of his barn. Gunning promised to remain there and Eaton felt he would. Next morning Eaton told his wife about Gunning being in the barn and Mrs. Eaton "carried on so it forced me to call the police." He furnished Gunning with material for shaving and Gunning had nearly finished shaving when the police arrived. Eaton added that, according to Gunning, he had spent a day under a barn on the unoccupied farm of Bruce Ireland and had stayed upstairs in the Eaton farmhouse until Eaton found him that evening.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, July 26 (C.P.). — July wheat crashed the five-cent allowable limit shortly after mid-session to-day. Sharp declines at Liverpool, favorable weather and conditions in Western Canada wheat belts and selling that found only light support were believed to have caused the sharp tumble. The close found quotations 5 to ⅞ cents lower with July at 94⅞c, October 75⅝c, November, 75¾c, and December 74⅛ to ¼ cents.

The drop culminated a two-days' decline in the July option. After remaining at levels over the dollar mark all last week, it showed weakness right from the start yesterday and continued its dive to-day.

The deferred months were stronger than July, although they, too, relapsed more than a cent.

Yesterday's Quotations.

Honoring Miss Hilda Phillips, an August bride-elect, Miss Florence Hutchinson and Mrs. Mary Hutchinson of Sheridan street, were joint hostesses to about thirty-five girl friends of the bird-elect recently. During the evening an amusing mock wedding ceremony was performed amid much merriment by Ena Morley, who took the part of the clergyman; Nellie Moore, the bride; Mary Thornton, the bridesmaid; Rose Puddick, the groom; and Queenie Hope, who represented the solitary guest. Games were also enjoyed, and the guest of honor was given a Peggy Parker breakfast set in cream and green, which was presented in a green and white basket. Delicious refreshments were later served by the hostesses.

Another delightfully - planned shower was given by Miss Phillips' C.G.I.T. Group. Pretty, colorful balloons containing verses telling where gifts were hidden floated around the rooms, and had to be captured and pricked with a pin before the presents could be found. Games and contests were played also, and dainty refreshments served.

Fashions

A darling sheer cotton print dress that will face torrid town days or accept luncheon, tea, bridge or informal evening "dates" in town or country. The very brief sleeves, slit up to the shoulder fall in capelets and vie with the vee neck to keep you cool no matter how the mercury soars. The flared skirt is gored for graceful swing. You can also make it of a sturdy cotton as a solid colored chambray or in a percale or pique print for active sports wear. Linen and washable silks would be lovely too. It costs such a small sum! It's so simple to sew, you'll cut it out and finish it to wear the same day. Style No. 2111 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inches bust. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 39-inch materials.

....At the same courts was noticed a suspender dress with a dark green cotton skirt and shoulder straps. The blouse of lighter green and white polka-dots was also of cotton.

....That large white hoops were printed on a dusky pink silk blouse with a full skirt that just missed being a dirndl. With it a dusky pink rough straw hat of generous proportions.

....Cotton was again the material in a shirtmaker dress of blue chambray...almost childlike in its simplicity, it had gathered yoke, slightly flared skirt, and neat little crocheted buttons.

DOROTHY DIX

About the Only Way to Escape From a Lazy Wife Is to Either Use Forceful Methods or to Abandon Them Entirely; There Is No Law Governing Them

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I want to ask you a very simple question. What can I do with a wife who is lazy and generally no-account, and who absolutely refuses to take care of her house or her children? I have been married for six years and we have two children. Married life for us has been a continuous warfare. I have to get my own breakfast in the morning while my wife sleeps. Every meal is an hour or more late. As a result I am losing my trade and perhaps my job. When we go to the theatre the play is nearly over when we get there. If we are invited out, we are always so late that our friends are dropping us. I neglect my business in trying to take care of the children. My wife does not put them to bed until nearly midnight and when I interfere she goes into tantrums. Nothing that I do pleases her. I am so miserable I would not live with her another day except for the children. What should I do?

G. F. E.

ANSWER:

If you consider that the problem of how to deal with a trifling wife is a simple question, please don't ask me a hard one. To my mind it is the most unguessable riddle in the world and I frankly admit that I do not know the answer to it.

It is a problem so great that even the law has not undertaken to solve it. We have edicts for dealing with the husband who fails to do his duty in the domestic relationship, but none for the wife who is a washout. A wife can get a divorce from a lazy, good-for-nothing husband who will not support her, but a man can't get a divorce from a wife who is too lazy and good-for-nothing to cook the food he provides and make him a comfortable home.

Why men put up with wives who simply lay down on their jobs and become parasites who suck the very lifeblood out of them is a mystery I have never been able to understand. Nor have I ever been able to understand why men do not get together and have a law passed that would make noncooking as good a reason for divorce as is nonsupport. So, after all, when I hear of a man who has to get his own breakfast and wash the baby's didies and wait for his dinner until his wife gets home from the movies with the delicatessen mess she has bought on the way home, my sympathy is tinged with a contempt one can't help having for a doormat.

It is human nature, especially is it woman nature, to trample over any one who hasn't backbone enough to stand up for his rights and who will meekly take any kind of treatment that is accorded him.

The only remedy for the indolent wife is force. If she knew that she was going to lose her job if she didn't keep her house clean, take care of her children and give her husband food, believe me, she would get busy with the vacuum cleaner, the baby book and the cookstove, for little as she likes domestic work she knows it is far easier and less exacting than pounding a typewriter or standing behind a counter. She knows she couldn't get by with the loafing in an office that she can do at home.

I doubt, however, if any treatment ever cures a lazy person or makes a dilatory one prompt. Maybe they have the hookworm. Maybe they have just an abnormal supply of selfishness and lack of consideration for other people. Anyway, I have never seen either a man or a woman who was born with a constitutional aversion to any form of labor galvanized into action. Nor have I ever seen a dilly-dallier speed up.

So I fear your chances of changing your wife are hopeless. She has no sense of fair play, or else she would recognize that marriage is a partnership and that it is just as much the duty of the wife to make the home as it is that the husband should make the living. She has not even any sense of responsibility for her children, because she is not willing to take the trouble to see that they get the proper food and rest. She has no love for you, or else she would try to make your happy and comfortable. There is literally nothing that the man with a trifling wife can do but to bear his affliction with what patience he may. No man is more entitled to the sympathy of the compassionate.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—What do you think of a young man who is healthy, husky and well educated, but who for some reason can't hold a position (probably because he has a rooted aversion to work), and who is always borrowing money from his sweetheart? The girl works steadily, but makes a very small salary. Personally, I think he is not fit to be a doormat. What do you think?

THE GIRL'S FRIEND.

ANSWER:

I agree with you. I don't think a man can get any lower than to become a parasite on a poor working girl and to use her love for him as the means of chiseling her out of her few hard-earned dollars.

He knows how hard she works, how little she gets, how she must deny herself the comforts of life to give him money. And, if he had any spark of manhood or chivalry in him, he would starve before he would take a cent from her. Yet there are plenty of cads like him, lazy loafers who never do a hand's turn of labor and who live by preying on women who love them. One of the oldest and commonest rackets in the world is borrowing money from women.

Why girls who have sense enough and know enough about business to hold down jobs fall for this sort of graft, only God, Who gave women more heart than brains, knows. They let men wheedle them out of their pay envelopes and their life savings with a few soft words and a little petting, and they don't even know that when a woman lends a man money she kisses it and him both good-by. For no other one thing kills a man's affection for a girl so quickly as to owe her money.

DOROTHY DIX.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Two extremes are to be avoided, as they beget faults: Self-complacency on the one hand, and self-depreciation on the other. Realize your own individuality, mental, moral and social. Use your faculties until you come to a fairly just self-estimate; know what you can do, and you will attain success."—Marden.

Dear Friends:

We have all met people who were a decided pain in the neck because of their idea of their own importance. What happens to them is so much more important than what happens to you or me. Their colds are wrose than ours, their homes are better in every way.

Their operation is much more severe, more hours under ether, more stitches, more darned everything. They seem to have a badly swollen ego, which makes everything that happens to them get magnified simply because it did happen to them.

And on the other hand, we have met those who seemed to be too humble, too self-deprecatory. They scoff and make little of any thing they do, any talent they have, any ability, and truly I do not know which type is the more aggravating.

We know the important ones are only fooling themselves, but the other kind are fooling themselves too. Agree with them and see how they react. Do a little belittling of them too when they start belittling themselves, and see how surprised they look.

We have to have a proper regard for ourselves. We must not put too high a valuation on ourselves, neither must we have too low a one, for each works in an opposite direction, and neither is good.

Just the other week a friend said something rather complimentary to me about my articles. Something she thought herself, and some things which had been said to her. And I said: "Oh yeah? I will have to get a larger sised hat."

And it was then she told me that that was one thing she did not like about me, my reaction to any praise. She did not like me to belittle myself or my work, and I can see her point.

Yet, it is a curious fact, that we can stand up to blame and censure, we can fight back and maybe win, win, but let anyone praise us, and we are all embarrassed so that we change the subject quickly, or get flippant as I did.

But, without a decent regard for ourselves as a person, a part of life, contributing our share of help and comfort, of sympathy and co-operation with the work of the world, unless we do we shall fail badly. After all, if we do not respect ourselves, who else will do so?

Some others we know might be cleverer in some respects, better looking, better mixers, more social, stronger physically, yet never forget we have our points too. So many go through life with a feeling of defeat, simply living because they do not have a true opinion of themselves.

You are your own measuring stick, and it depends on you to do it correctly, not making yourself taller than you are, neither making your stature shorter. How can you blame anyone for taking you at your own valuation?

Who should know your capabilities better than you? Who should know your shortcomings better than you either? It would not be a bad idea once in a while to "do unto yourself as you do unto others."

You give them the benefit of the doubt, you give them credit where it is due, you admire their abilities, you condone their shortcomings if they are not to bad. Then try some of that on yourself, and give yourself a build-up.

Don't be afraid, you will not get swelled head. You have tried the other, now try this.

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Be Sure! Don't Guess About Etiquette

Happy is the girl who knows her etiquette so well the right thing is second nature to her.

And what embarrassment's in store for the one who tries to guess her way! Over and over she betrays herself—in just leaving a room, for instance.

Chances are she'll never notice one of the men guests is about to open the door for her—as he should. No, she'll grab at the knob as he does—and he won't forgive her for making him look awkward, too.

If she knew her etiquette, of course she'd pause graciously, without thinking.

Then, what to say when an apology's called for? The girl with poise doesn't break into an emphatic "Pardon ME!" She says simply, "I'm sorry." Nor does she bound ahead of her escort down the steps. She follows him.

Be sure of your etiquette. Our 32-page booklet tells what's expected of you on all occasions; dining, dancing, visiting, travelling.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of ETIQUETTE FOR ALL OCCASIONS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME OF BOOKLET.

Yokes Are In Fashion For Fall

Yokes have importance in the design of clothes this midseason. Some of the most striking are deep ones for swing coats, of fur or contrasting fabric, extending over the shoulders so the sleeves are joined below the shoulder line. Others are merely back yokes to coats and jackets which have an inverted pleat down centre back, starting below the yoke; and still others are small, contrasting ones.

Some dresses have high necks in one with yokes seamed onto the actual bodice in a rounded or pointed line at front. This trend toward the yoke-at-top formula was much seen in the spring openings, but is more in evidence for fall, affecting skirts for smooth hips as well as coats and dresses.

White Flatters Your Sun Tan

Thin black and navy dresses look cool on hot summer streets. But black and navy aren't flattering to suntanned complexions. If you are several shades darker than you were when you bought your dark sheers, put white collars and cuffs on them. White against a coat of suntan is lovely. &

Who Is Attacking China?

There was a meeting of representatives of seven nations, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Luxembourg, Norway, The Netherlands and Sweden, and the conclusion reached at the gathering was that the seven nations should utter a protest against being bound by the League of Nations to participate in sanctions. That is, if the League were to give notice that these nations were not to supply war materials to certain belligerents they would not desire to be bound by any such notice; they would insist on deciding the case individually.

And that of course would put the whole matter back where it was before the League of Nations came into existence. And even since the League came into existence its ability to enforce sanctions has been only partially successful.

There is a case in point at the moment. The Bank of Japan has within recent days formed a foreign exchange revolving fund of some $90,000,000. This fund was created by being taken from the gold reserve of the bank and indicates the extent to which Japan is being driven by financial pressure. But that is not the point.

This fund has been created to sustain foreign credit abroad so that Japan can be at liberty to go ahead and secure foreign raw materials. She can purchase raw cotton or war materials—anything which is for sale from any nation which will sell to her. So it is plain enough there have been no sanctions made operative against Japan. If Japan had not been able to go into the markets of the world and purchase anything she wanted for war purposes, she would have long ago had to abandon the conquest of China.

So it is small wonder that these seven smaller nations have decided they do not want to be ruled by the League of Nations regarding what they shall do about making sales to other nations.

It all sifts down to this—the nations of the world continue to be shocked by what Japan has been and is doing in China; many of them raise funds to help the destitute and sick in the war area; they denounce Japan for the course that country has followed. And after having done so they continue to sell goods to Japan so that the war against China may be continued. If that were not the case then it would be of no purpose at all for the Bank of Japan to raid its gold reserves to create foreign credit.

Value Of a Personal Item

A lady had some visitors in her home but she did not want any mention of it made in the paper. She did not like publicity in any way; it seemed to her it was a little too much like parading the affairs of the home before the whole community. If some person had come to visit at her home then it was purely a family affair and not something in which the public would be interested.

There are some people who look at the thing that way, but there are others who do not. Here is a little actual experience: "When I had visitors at my home I made sure there was a notice in the paper saying who they were and where they were staying. They had lived here a number of years before and there were people in the city whom I knew they would like to meet again and who were as much interested in them as I was. That little item in the paper did exactly what I hoped for. People knew at once our friends and their friends were here and knew where they were staying. The result was they met a great many people whom they were delighted to see and the visitors had a much better time than if we had tried to look after them ourselves."

Now then—don't you think the second lady had a broader and a more useful view than the first one?

Kitchener's Hollyhock

There appears to be quite a contest in several places regarding the height to which hollyhocks are growing this year. So far it looks as though the Kitchener Record had produced the greatest bit of photographic evidence. It carries a picture which shows a man with a kitchen table, a chair and a couple of ladders trying to get up to the top of a hollyhock. By the time he had completed taking measurements it was noticed the hollyhock had grown another half foot.

Plans are now being made to loop this giant stalk across the roof of the house. There are times when at night with the breeze blowing in the right direction that the top of the plant comes in the upstairs window and tickles the people who are trying to get to sleep. A couple of days after it was noticed that the draft in the kitchen range was none too good and investigation showed that the hollyhock had reached up there and was leaning on the top of the smokestack taking a rest until it rained or some person put some water on the roots. Some of the children in the house have a new game which they play by clinging to this famous hollyhock and they find themselves being lifted up in the air. The trick is to drop off in time. We award the Kitchener hollyhock first place.

Another Smart Man

Something in the paper today which indicates another man in Toronto was not as smart as he considered himself to be. This smart man decided to steal an automobile. He was not going to bother with an old model, but decided to take a brand new car.

The first thing one would think about would be that the car would be easily recognized were it driven in the city. The smart man thought of that and he had a paint job put on the machine. Likewise he put on a different sort of bumpers, so the man who owned the car or the police were looking for it would never recognize it as the stolen car. He also put on another set of markers.

That not being considered sufficient, the smart man changed the headlights, and added a number of accessories. Going inside he even changed the gear-shift lever and put a different sort of top on it.

It seems that he changed the car so much that a couple of detectives whose business it is to be on the look-out for stolen cars were attracted by the look of the thing. It did not run true to type, and when they investigated and started looking at numbers they found it was the car which had been stolen, after which it was simple enough to arrest the men and charge him with theft. No doubt he was convinced he was smart, but he just naturally falls into that too large class of people who are not smart enough.

Most Hymns Are Old

Perhaps few people have considered the age of some of the best-known hymns which they sing in church services. In many places of worship "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God Almighty" is used each Sunday. The words were written by R. Heber, who lived from 1783 to 1826. H. Bonar was a writer of many hymns now used but he died in 1889; and most of his work was done a number of years previously. J. Conder, another hymn writer of note, lived from 1789 to 1855.

"O Worship the King All Glorious Above" is well known and it is widely used — written by R. Grant, 1785-1838. The hymn which begins "When all Thy mercies O my God my rising soul surveys," was written by J. Addison, and he died 219 years ago.

That very substantial hymn, "The God of Abraham Praise," written by T. Olivers, was the produce of a writer who has been dead for 139 years, and W. Cowper's hymn, "God Moves in a Mysterious Way," is in the same class and was probably written more than 150 years ago.

In many church hymnals is the number, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," and perhaps few ever thought that E. Perronet who wrote it lived from 1726 to 1792.

Others with much age to their credit are:

"Joy to the World, the Lord is Come," by I. Watts, whose life span was 1674-1748. That old Christmas song "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," was written by N. Tate about the year 1700. "Jesus, Thou Joy of Loving Hearts," was a translation from medieval Latin made by R. Palmer who lived from 1808 to 1887. When the original was written is not known.

There are many who have sung that hymn, "O Happy Day That Fixed My Choice" without pausing to think it was written by P. Doddridge about the year 1725. "Give to the Wind Thy Fears" by P. Gerhardt was a product of the year 1650, while that much-used hymn "Abide With Me" by H. F. Lyte was written about the year 1847.

The claim has been made that it is difficult for modern hymn writers to gain sufficient recognition so their work will be incorporated in the regular hymn books used in our churches. There have been many written in recent years, often enough published in separate books used by evangelists, but the experience is that the casualty list among such hymns has been too high. They do not seem to possess sufficient significance to warrant long life and much use. We believe it correct enough to state that 85 per cent. of the hymns in the books of the various denominations today were written on an average of a century ago. Many of those which are most used will have at least two centuries of service to their credit.

A Wheezing Hen

We noticed where a correspondent writing news from a rural centre said there was some discussion about what happened to a Plymouth Rock hen. Farm life seems to be changing that way and the people in rural sections are talking more about poultry than they used to because it has become more of a business. Some years ago the poultry on the average farm used to be taken for granted. People set eggs from their own flock and didn't worry a great deal whether the hens laid every day or not.

But in this most recent case the Plymouth Rock hen has died. We take it that in some distant way she would have been related to the speckled hens that used to live on Lot 4, Concession 10. This hen had wheezed for a few days and used to go around with her head thrown back a bit and the neighbors were having a discussion about what should have been done to treat such a hen so she might have had a chance to keep on living.

Just what had been done was not stated by the correspondent. It may be the experts of today have means of curing things of which the people on the Tenth Concession had never heard. But if symptoms and treatment are the same today as they used to be we know well enough what would have been done with a hen that wheezed and held her head back. Grandfather wasn't what one could call high jinks on poultry and the hired man got most of his knowledge from reading government bulletins. But both were agreed for once about a hen that acted that way. She had bronchitis and the thing was infectious. If she wasn't taken out of the flock at once and killed then the chances were other birds would be soon wheezing and holding back their heads. It was always contended it was worse coming on fall or winter than at any other time because then the poultry family would be living closer together. Whether our advice and knowledge is any use today we do not know, but a wheezing hen used to mean bronchitis and that was one of the catchin' diseases, for which the chopping block in the woodyard assisted by the axe and some person to wield it constituted the only known cure. We hope there have been some advances made since then but that was the method moved by grandfather and seconded by the hired man.

Watch For Army Worm

F. C. Paterson, district representative of the Department of Agriculture in Peterborough county, asks farmers to check their fields regularly and carefully so they will be quickly aware of any invasion of the army worm. It is altogether likely farmers have been doing this, but urging them to keep on doing it is good policy.

The manner in which this county has so far escaped is indeed remarkable and it may be we will get along in safety as the time for the army worm to disappear for the season is not far off.

Right now is the season when an attack by these pests can do much damage, but it is possible to cut the damage down to a fair limit if the attack is found in time. The method of mixing paris green with bran mash and cheap molasses is well enough known to farmers and if help is needed then the district representative is ready and willing to give it. The crops around here look splendid, so it is good custom to keep an eye wide open for the first sign of the army worm.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It has been ruled in Toronto that it is not an offence to walk in a bathing suit provided you do not walk too far. Once again it is proved possible to have law without common sense.

There is a discussion in Toronto as to how much dogs understand. If their understanding is well advanced we wonder what they must think at times of the people who own them.

The Conservatives from Porcupine are exceptionally bright. In the Timmins Daily Press they are quoted as predicting the election of Cecil Frost as provincial president—and doing it before the election took place.

Scientists claim that a bone found beside the Mississippi River indicates that pleistocene man lived in Minnesota during the great ice age. They have not yet discovered however what political party he supported.

A man in Mitchell, Ont., says he has made a carburetor for a car which shows 51 miles to a gallon of gas. He is still experimenting, and if he wants a car to which to attach such a thing we know where he can get one.

UNCLE JED

(By A. R. K.)

¶ My Uncle Jed has changed his ways, he says as how he finds it pays, he comes to town lots more; he says his wife feels better too, and hasn't got the work to do, like what she had before.

¶ Jed says his relatives and friends, were visitors who knew no ends, he'd see them down the lane; they picked on Sunday all the time, and figured everything was fine, in car lots too they came.

¶ He said when it come Sunday night, the kitchen table was a sight, with stacks of dishes there; he and the missus started then, and washed and dried till nigh on ten, the pantry too was bare.

¶ When they got done with eating there, they always had some fresh affair, so they would have to go; the baking done on Saturday, just seemed to melt and go away, for many days 'twas so.

¶ So Sunday Jed drives into town, and goes to church and sits him down, his wife packs up some stuff; late afternoon they start for home, just when cows start to moo and moan, they get there soon enough.

¶ Jed likes his relatives and friends, at Christmas little gifts he sends, thinks friendship is sublime; when Sunday guests drove down the lane, he said it struck him that they came—too many at a time.

Few Have Ever Seen A Wolf

(By J. W. Curran in Hunting and Fishing in Canada)

TO BE A SUCCESSFUL wolf hunter you must first locate a wolf and be able to figure out what the animal is going to do, or is likely to do.

The classic example of a successful wolf battle occurred when the Dominion Government's 3,500 herd of reindeer were being brought from Alaska to the MacKenzie River delta, where they were finally landed to provide food for the Eskimos.

The herders knew all about the wolf and his habits and on one occasion the herd was attacked by a large number of wolves. The pack displayed the high intelligence characteristic of these animals. The records show that while one part of the pack made a feint frontal attack the much larger flanking party was deployed to take advantage of the expected stampede, but the herders understood thoroughly what would happen. They practically ignored the frontal attack and set themselves for the push on the flank. So well were their plans made they were actually able to kill some of the pack with clubs, probably when they ran out of ammunition. Not a single one of the herd was lost on this occasion.

A wolf is so elusive that little is known about his actual conduct. This has given rise to fantastic stories of his habits. He jumps for the throats of deer on the run. . . . He never crosses a snow shoe track. . . . He trails men for miles. . . . He springs traps set to catch him. These imaginative stories can hardly be born of anything else than a desire to elaborate the theory that lupus is always on the lookout for a human being to eat. Also foundationless, in all probability, are the detailed stories we read of fierce fights between pack leaders for power over combined packs. As a matter of fact, a pack of wolves is generally, if not always, Pa, Ma and the kids, say from five to eight in all. The wolf has no desire to kill his alleged rival so far as the writer has observed. In a fight he follows the dog in merely wishing to show the other fellow a thing or two. Perhaps, the beaten foe is grievously wounded and may even die subsequently, but itis against wolf nature (in Algoma, at least,) to make death the penalty of losing.

The wolf is not naturally a particularly savage animal. The bad reputation he bears comes from his exasperating exploits in search of food. Experience shows that he is capable of some wary affection if he is fed regularly and shown he need not fear man. Man just imagines a lot of things about a wolf, and no story is so fantastic but that it receives a credulous hearing. "Safety first" as carried out by an alert and watchful animal is the wolf's supreme motive and food comes a long way after safety. So lupus is a night prowler, a past master in camouflage and reconnaissance.

Few people ever see a wolf even if the woods be full of them. The wolf will fix all that. He will sit in concealment and watch his pursuer until he thinks it time to move. To get sight of one of these elusive animals a good knowledge of their habits, the patience of Job, and a great deal of hard work is necessary. The Successful hunter will need his quarry's silence, watchfulness and adroitness. When lupus is ever seen in the open he just feels foolish. Thus he is no danger to anyone not even a baby.

THE NEAREST ANY of these ever came to an "attack" was that of the northern trapper who in a heavy, evening snow storm had the experience of seeing a wolf jump for him and turn in mid-air to make off. May it not be assumed the wolf thought the man was a deer and didn't discover his mistake until he was half way off the rock he had jumped from?

The writer has come suddenly on a wolf feeding on a deer carcass half covered by snow and which was abandoned on the instant. The same wolf was killed not far away. It's stomach was empty and the emaciated animal was plainly starving. Algoma's experience is that wolves will leave a hunted area as quickly as possible. They do not range far, and Bob Beck, who has had years of experience as a hunter and trapper, says they cover the same ground over and over again following the same course. He has killed many using this theory. No amateur ever got a shot at a wolf except by accident. The wolf lives and increases because he knows how to take care of himself and "As cunning as a fox" is a wellknown saying. The fox is a fool compared to a wolf.

NEW HIGH IN FAGS.

(Toronto Star)

CANADA'S CONSUMPTION of cigarettes, which showed a decrease during the depression, is again on the rise and has reached new levels. Canadians consumed 6,848,693,442 factory-made "fags" in 1937, in addition to those which were smoked by people who roll their own. This compares with 5,858,935,609 the previous year, an increase of nearly one billion.

The consumption in 1927 was less than 3,400,000,000. It has more than doubled in ten years.

It was just over 1,300,000,000 in 1917. It has increased more than fivefold in 20 years.

It was under 200,000,000 in 1907. It is now 35 times what it was 30 years ago, although in that time the population has not quite doubled.

There are in Canada today perhaps 7,700,000 people of over 14 years of age. Many of them do not smoke at all, but the 1937 consumption of 6,848,693,442 cigarettes works out at nearly 900 apiece for smokers and non-smokers alike.

• Senior Men Get All the Work

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

SENATOR JAMES MURDOCK, erstwhile high official of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, takes sharp issue with Sir Edward Beatty's statement that unification of the two railways could be brought about without sacrificing the interests of employees.

Probably what is bothering Senator Murdock is the seniority system which is a basic consideration in the brotherhoods. There is little, if any, sharing of the work among railway labor. If there are two trains in operation and one is taken off, it does not mean that the crew of each train gets 15 or 16 days of work per month. It means that the crew gets all the work and the junior crew gets none, unless the senior crew resigns, is pensioned, gets sick or is suspended for cause. Once in a while, a senior man may take a voluntary layoff which gives the junior man a chance. But if the senior desires to work 31 days per month, he does so.

This present condition means that a pre-requisite to a sensible solution of Canada's railway problem should be revision of brotherhood rules so that seniors would not be able to corral all the work, and leave the juniors hopelessly on the spare list and on relief.

In return for such concessions, the railway companies might reasonably make some guarantees to junior men —some assurance that, say, in the next five years their earnings would not be less than their earnings in the last five years. At the end of such five years, under unification, pensioning and death and resignation would probably take up the slack and all railway men would be getting something like a full month's work, with perhaps one day off in seven.

From 1903 to 1931, six Canadian chartered bank absorbed 26 other chartered banks. From 1930 to 1936, nearly 700 branch banks were closed. Yet one has not heard that branch managers or clerks have suffered. The banks undoubtedly were overstaffed, but by pensioning senior men a little ahead and refraining from hiring new men, the personnel problem has been virtually solved, by the process of time, in the comparatively short space of five or six years.

The same could be true of the railway personnel problem if brotherhood rules and demands were not overly rigid.

• England and France Were Enemies

(By Frank Woodley in Family Herald and Weekly Star)

I THINK, HOWEVER, that we would be missing the point if we dismissed the matter simply by saying that a nation which once was our foe now is our ally; history has a more important lesson that that.

Why were England and France such bitter enemies for so long, and why now are they friends?

Because of the greed and ambition first of one, then of the other, and now of another.

When William, Duke of Normandy, defeated Harold at Hastings in 1066, and made himself King of England, France was only a collection of dukes and lords, of whom in theory the King was the chief; actually, however, the King of France's authority ran but a little way out of his capital.

Every noble sought to increase his own power, and across the Channel the Kings of England were seized with the desire to make themselves paramount in Europe by winning for themselves the Kingdom of France. So were fought a long series of wars in which England strove to make this dream come true.

English archers covered themselves with glory, a French King was taken captive to London, English sovereigns proudly quartered the Lilies of France on their shields: but all their efforts were brought to nought by the courage of the inspired and valiant Maid: when Joan of Arc made possible the coronation of Charles VII at Rheims in 1431, she definitely put an end to all English hopes of conquering France.

Of course the English did not recognize this defeat as final, and further campaigns were fought, but the prize had been snatched from their grasp.

As the years passed the French Kings succeeded in extending the power and authority of the Crown, until at last all France was unified under its rule. Then the Kings of France endeavored to make themselves paramount in Europe.

In these efforts, however, they were opposed by England (later Britain) who could not allow any nation to attain a dominating position in Europe. These attempts reached their peak under Napoleon, and were finally defeated at Waterloo in 1815.

The centuries of warfare, however, had left a legacy of hatred and distrust between the two nations, which was not allayed until Edward VII exercised his diplomatic talents, and created the Bonne Entente.

RUSH TO THE RESCUE.

(Guelph Mercury)

A STORY ARRIVES from India of a building that caught fire and got out of control of the local volunteers. There being no telephone in the village, a letter was sent by urgent post to the state fire brigade. Receipt of the latter was acknowledged almost immediately. It was marked "for disposal" and forwarded to the state ruler. It arrived on this gentleman's desk a fortnight or so later. He saw that it was marked "Urgent," opened it at once studied it, decided it was worthy of response, and dispatched the state apparatus forthwith.

The firemen found, on arrival, that the old building was gone and a structure of an entirely different nature was already rising on the old site.

This is the kind of story that ought to send a number of the best known gentlemen in the world of diplomacy into gales of laughter. Geneva should be reduced by its merriment to a state of positive helplessness.

DEAD SET ON A LOVER.

(The People, London)

THOMAS CARLEY and Lily Page saved up for two years, denying themselves the smallest luxuries, to get married.

A little flat in Fourth-avenue, Manor Park, E., was found and furnished, and three weeks ago the young couple, having put up the banns, went to pay for it.

On the way a pickpocket on the bus on which they traveled found Tom's wallet and £60 of savings vanished.

Relatives came to the rescue, and last night the eve of the wedding, Tom set out for the bride's house with £42 (the expenses for the wedding and the honeymoon) in his pocket.

Within a few yards of the house two men stole up behind him, struck him down, and grabbed the wallet.

Once more relatives helped, and the wedding will take place — but there will be no honeymoon.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THESE WORDS spake Jesus, and lifted up his eyes to heaven, and said, Father, the hour is come; glorify thy Son, that thy Son also may glorify thee, . . . And now, O Father, glorify thou me with thine own self with the glory which I had with thee before the world was.

I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gavest them me; and they have kept thy word. . . . And now come I, to thee; and these things I speak in the world, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themselves.

I have given them thy word; and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth. As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world.

And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth.—John xvii: 1, 5, 6, 13-19.

Deal With Italy Is Denied On Spanish War

LONDON, July 26 (C.P.).—Prime Minister Chamberlain told the House of Commons yesterday that Great Britain and Italy never had reached an uderstanding on what was meant by a "Spanish settlement," which was made a prior condition to operation of the Anglo-Italian agreement.

The statement was made in reply to questions from Labor members who sought to learn, before Parliament adjourns on Friday, about the Prime Minister's plans for putting the London-Rome Pact into force.

The Prime Minister said there had been "confidential exchanges of views' between the two Governments on the question, but, he added, "I never committed myself to a complete or even partial definition of the phrase."

Pressed for an answer "during the recess the Prime Minister will be at liberty to implement the agreement by putting his own interpretations on the phrase," Chamberlain said, "There is no change in the situation."

He added later: "I think the Government is at liberty to put its interpretation."

"What about the House of Commons?" asked Albert Victor Alexander, Labor.

Philip Noel-Baker, another Labor member, asked whether the Government considers itself "at liberty to bring into force an agreement of this importance without informing Commons as to the meaning of an essential clause of such an agreement."

Mr. Chamberlain declared he already had told the House he did not exclude the possibility it might be called during the recess to "consider such a situation as might arise."

Answering a question on the Anglo-French ministerial conferences during last week's state visit of King George and Queen Elizabeth to Paris, Mr. Chamberlain said only that "complete harmony of views" established at previous joint conferences had been maintained.

By MAX TRELL

HANID, THE shadow girl, stood just outside the bars of the polar bear's cage at the zoo and kept shouting to her brother, Knarf! "Come out of that cage, Knarf! That polar bear will hurt you! Oh, come out quickly!"

But Knarf paid no heed to her. He sat on the point of a rock inside the polar bear's cage and smiled as pleasantly as though he were sitting on grandmother's rocking chair. Meanwhile, the polar bear, who was bigger than a dozen Knarfs, grumbled, "Well, what is this favor you want to ask me?"

"It's a very big favor," the shadow boy said, "It's for the Tin Soldier. He likes Miss China Doll very much. She lives in her own private doll house which stands right under the sunny window near the geranium. She has a fireplace in her house. But she hasn't any rug to keep infront of it. So this morning she asked the Tin Soldier—"

"Oh, I see," the polar bear broke in. "She asked the Tin Soldier to get her a rug."

Special Rug.

"That's right," Knarf started to say.

Then Hanid, from the other side of the bars, put in, "But she wanted him to get her a very special kind of fireplace rug. She wanted a polar bear rug."

The polar bear growled. "A polar bear rug! What kind of rug is that?"

'It's made out of—out of—well, it's made out of your skin."

You have no idea how angry the polar bear became when he heard this. He started roaring and growling and muttering and snorting all at once. 'Out of my cage!" he roared. And he sprang at the shadow boy.

When they reached home he gave the Tin Soldier the curls.

Suddenly Knarf did a very surprising thing. He darted around the polar bear and before the great animal could turn around, too, he seized hold of his tail and plucked out a handful of the bear's curls.

Oh, how the bear roared at that! But Knarf sped out of the cage, and ran down the path with Hanid, and when they reached home again he gave the Tin Soldier the curls and the Tin Soldier gave them to Miss China Doll who said joyfully, "Oh! what a beautiful real polar bear rug! I'll love you forever, my tin soldier." And everybody was happy—except the polar bear.

CHAPTER 48

SILENCE somehow seems more than silent, when there have been two days of continued laughter and talking and singing and dancing and general whirling of sound, climaxed by the ugly staccato of gunfire.

William Daniel Baron drifted tantalizingly into mental awareness, and realized at once that hallucinations were still there to taunt him. He seemed, diabolically, to be at ease, resting or floating on the soft downiness of Ellen Dale's own bed, inside the heavenly pale blue of her own bedroom; in a moment, he knew, it would all turn again to blackness and horror and pain.

But this time, miraculously, it didn't turn. As his mind cleared still more, he knew that he really was in Ellen's room, in Ellen's bed, and that through her window he could see Sunday dawn reflected upon the great gray Whetstones. He smiled a little to himself, then raised his hand to inspect it and see if it really was there.

"Hey!" he suddenly shouted, or thought he shouted. Actually he didn't put half the energy into it that he imagined he did.

But it was enough. A door popped open instantly and a nurse came in. At her heels was Ellen herself. And then a serious-faced man, a doctor.

"What is it, a parade?" Bill asked, still smiling.

They fumbled with him, examined him hastily, ignored his question. Then quietly Ellen pushed in closer and looked straight into his eyes.

"Bill?"

"Hi, kid. What's the score now? Glad to see you up. What about breakfast?"

"Bill!...B—Bill!"

* * *

On Wednesday, Mr. Sidney Bromberg, sitting amid papers in his gorgeous office on the sixth floor of the Pacific building in Hollywood, Cal., was scowling up at his reception room girl.

"Tell them no," he barked. "No for the last time. Wait! let them in; I'll tell them myself."

The receptionist opened his door and in filed three keen-witted gentlemen of that fraternity known as counsel in public relations.

"Siddown!" Mr. Bromberg ordered. "I sent you boys word. I pay your salaries, and now you lissen to me. When I send you orders, you lissen to me or I hire somebody who can lissen, you see? She ain't coming back. No, I tell you, she ain't coming back."

The press agents stopped grinning. Evidently Sid meant it.

"What about you, Sid?" one of them demanded. "Thought you were going to marry her yourself. How many times we announced your engagement to her!"

* * *

Five days after the grand fiesta, William Daniel Baron was able to walk around the ranch yard and down ot the bunkhouse and corrals. He learned often on the hitching rail down there and chinned with some of the boys, and sometimes he'd climb cautiously up the two-by-eight-inch rough planks that made the corral fence and sit on top to watch the waddies at branding.

"First rate," he'd answer, with increasing truth.

But most of the time, convalescing, he'd sit around and sun himself and think. He was, he admitted wryly, behind on his thinking anyway. He was considerably lonesome, but he didn't admit it.

But old Buckshot went the other way, and Ellen never left his side more than five minutes at a time until about two o'clock Tuesday afternoon she helped bury him. People came back that Thursday night and told Bill that more people seemed to be at Buckshot's funeral than at the fiesta. They had buried the old man, by his request, out on top of a hill, and built a double-sized prospector's claim monument of rocks over him.

Bill dodged Ellen all that night, and all next day. He knew she needed a long rest. And he was still busy thinking anyway. Friday afternoon, the doctor who motored out carried Bill back to town and with full hospital facilities, Bill just stayed in town that Friday night so that he could learn the results of the X-ray photographs Saturday. He rested most of Saturday morning in his room at the hotel, or in the patio watching the famous bullfrog, but that afternoon he rode downtown and attended to a few business details.

"You heal quicker'n a branded bull," one rancher friend informed him, which was about true. Bill had regained his color, much of his strength now. The X-rays had showed him to be all right.

On Sunday morning one of the DD cowboys drove a ranch car into town and took him back home. Such hands as weren't on duty were all out to greet him, and among them was the head lady herself, fresh and rested and smiling again now.

He went in, by invitation, to have late breakfast with her, and joshed her no end about the ultra dainty tea and toast and marmalade which she sat before him. He swore he wanted a hunk of beef, and meant it. It delighted her, because she knew he was getting well.

Their talk, however, was rather unnatural. Each obviously was deliberately talking about impersonal things, deliberately avoiding discussion of the recent troubles and sorrows. It wouldn't do any good to remind each other again and again that two of the border patrol officers and five of the smugglers had been killed.

After noon each of them had a prescribed rest, and toward 4 p.m. Bill came to her front porch on a horse. It was the first time he had been mounted since the battle, but he felt grand. He led Ellen's Pintado and, delighted, she mounted also.

"Let's just drift around the cliff, and up there where we can watch old sol go down," suggested he.

"All right, Bill. I'm so happy to see you in the saddle again!"

He thought, then, that he had never seen her smile so b autifully. And for that matter, probably he never had. She wore the dark blue jodhpurs and the Indian jacket that made her look so like a little girl. Glory she's not big as a minute, he told himself now, as if just discovering it.

They still didn't talk much. Up on the ridge, not far from the Gap where they drove in cattle from time to time, they dismounted and sat together where they could see the sinking sun. The earth and the air were warm. The landscape was vast and delicately colored and inspiring.

"Kid, I been doing a lot of thinking," Bill began, after a short lull.

"Yes, Bill."

"Sid Bromberg offered me a stack of money, under contract. So I could have had money, a lot of it. But I turned it down. I didn't seem to want it after I had my chance. People—people somtimes are a little irrational about money, Ellen."

"I think so, too," she agreed, quite seriously, gazing at him.

They said nothing else for perhaps five minutes.

"It's nice up here," he remarked, eventually.

"Yes. Lovely."

"You know why I wanted to bring you up here?"

"No, Bill, I haven't the slightest idea. Why?"

He didn't answer. They just sat, while he stared out across space. He moved once to look at her, and when she turned and caught his eyes, he looked hastily away again.

"Bill Baron," she suddenly spoke "if you don't hurry up I shall—I shall scream!"

Even in the red of approaching evening she could see him turn redder, and it made her smile. He grinned back, like the boy he was.

"I never—never knew it would be this hard, at the showdown," he murmured. "Or this glorious. But I wanted it as they do sometimes in the movies, Ellen—up here, in the sunset glow."

He kissed her then. And kissed her and kissed her.

And because they hadn't been together much of late, they had a great deal of talking and planning to do. They sat together there far into the star-gemmed evening.

(THE END)

300 Million Bushel Wheat Crop Visioned

OTTAWA, July 25.—(CP)—Rust and grasshoppers are slowly cutting down the Prairie province wheat crop but prospects remain favorable for a harvest of close to 300,000,000 bushels, in the opinion of Agriculture Minister Gardiner who returned Monday from a western tour.

Mr. Gardiner came back to Ottawa to join his cabinet colleagues in their deliberations at cabinet council Tuesday over the fixing of a minimum price to be adopted by the Canadian Wheat Board for the 1938 crop.

Keen interest and anxeity among the western growers over the decision to be reached by the government is evidenced by the volume of representat i n reaching Ottawa urging that the price be fixed at no less than the 87½ cents a bushel level which has been maintained since the Board was created in 1935.

The minister would not divulge his personal feelings on this point, nor would he anticipate in any degree the policy on wheat marketing to be decided by the government this week.

Arguments advanced by the wheat industry in recent weeks are that there is every possibility of a big world production this year with a good United States crop and that the government should assist in the necessary hedging operations.

Mine Shaft Caves In Burying 2 Workmen

VAL D'OR, Que., July 26 (C.P.).—Rescuers awaited abatement of heavy rain before continuing their search to-day for the body of Jack Myers who was killed with Ernest Hoggard when buried beneath an avalanche of muck, rock and water at Perron Gold Mines, 18 miles east of here.

Myers, 28, and Hoggard, 32, were trapped yesterday when the reinforced sides of a new shaft where they were working with eight other members of a crew suddenly caved in and let loose a swirling mass of water and rock-laden mud.

Hoggard was dead when brought to the surface by fellow-miners late yesterday. The search for Myers temporarily was halted because it was decided there was no possibility the entombed man might still be alive and because heavy rain sent streams of water pouring into the open shaft.

Other members of the crew struggled from the debris and joined the rescuers after treatment for cuts and bruises.

The crew was at a loss to explain the tragedy when called to testify last night at an inquest into Hoggard's death. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

Bennett Arranges Shift of Mantle

OTTAWA, July 26.—(CP)—Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett conferred yesterday with Dr. Arthur Beauchesne, clerk of the House of Commons, on the details of his transference of the office of opposition leader to R. J. Manion, chosen to succeed him as Conservative chieftain at the national convention two weeks ago.

Provision is made in various statutes and books of rules for the succession but it involves interpretatoin of machinery which obviously is seldom used, since a change in leadership is comparatively rare.

As leader of the official opposition Mr. Bennett is paid $10,000 a year, with the allowance of $2,000 for an automobile. This is in addition to the $4,000 he draws as a member of the House of Commons.

Parliament also provides the opposition leader with a suite of offices in the centre block and a staff of secretaries. These perquisites of office will go to Dr. Manion at a date to be agreed upon with House of Commons officials and with the aproval of Mr. Bennett.

One Brawl No Harm Court Martial Told

NEW YORK, July 26 (AP).—The prosecution rested yesterday in the court martial of Lieutenant Colonel Stewart S. Griffin after the court Stewart S. Giffen after the court the complainant be made known. Defence counsel then asked and was granted a recess.

Lieutenant James Smith, Sr., reserve officer who served as Giffin's adjutant at a Walkwill, N.Y., civilian conservation corp camp, was presumed to be the complainant. Mrs. Smith testified earlier to an "animosity" for the defendant who is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman.

During cross examination, defence counsel asked her why she and Smith attended a hotel party in Waltonville, N.Y., with Giffin "if you knew of his reputed habit of drinking."

"We was well known in Washingtonville and Goshen and we figured one more brawl wouldn't make any difference," Mrs. Smith replied.

Key To Relaxing Credited For John D's Age

TORONTO, July 26.—John D. Rockfeller lived to the age he did, and retained his faculties to the last because he had mastered the secret of relaxing, believes Willian Jensen, the Daytona Beach, Fla., chiropractor who attended the American financier and philanthropist during the last six years of his life.

"Nothing worries me" and "why worry?" were expressions frequently used by the man who for years typified both tremendous wealth and happy old age, Mr. Jensen said in an interview yesterday. He is in Toronto to attend the convention of the National Chiropractor Association, which opened yesterday.

"Mr. Rockfeller was always quiet, no matter what happened, and I learned this was partly due to temperament, but also partly due to a belief he had that calmness was a healthy thing. He cultivated it," asserted Mr. Jensen. He revealed that he shared the care of Mr. Rockfeller with a medical doctor, whom the magnate let him choose for himself, and that relations between the representatives of the two rival schools of healing had been "very pleasant."

Mind Was Keen

The routine Mr. Rockfeller established for himself gave ample scope to his belief in relaxing. He rested for half an hour after every meal. After the post-breakfast rest family prayers were said daily. A rigid schedule controlled the activities of the whole day.

"When you came in to see Mr. Rockfeller he wuold be sitting very quietly. When you talked to him he almost seemed to be absentminded, but as soon as you mentioned something that interested him he would shoot questions at you so fast it would almost take you off your feet," said Mr. Jensen.

The philanthropists's famous habit of resenting every one he met with a shiny, new dime, Mr. Jensen thought, was motivated by a desire to give pleasure to people who might want a souvenir. "I think it also saved him from signing autographs," he said.

Old Age Held Rarer

Extreme old age is becoming rarer today because men and women "fail to conserve the energies of the body after the middle-life period," L. J. Steinbach, Dean of the Universal Chiropractic College, Pittsburgh, Pa., declared yesterday at the opening session of the convention.

Addressing 1,200 delegates, he said that "after we pass forty we either wear ourselves out or rust out."

Nor could he see much hope for increased life spans in the use of recent methods of bringing a semblance of youth to the aging.

The convention, which will continue till July 29, was launched yesterday afternoon with J. A. Anderson of Galt welcoming the guests to Ontario and describing the Province. Delegates from all over Canada and from every State in the Union were present.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A very lively and progressive day is forecast from the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects. There may be a state of high pressure, with the energies and spirit of initiative under fine stimuli for advancement and preferment. Superiors and those in power seem ready to support projects of a practical and constructive nature. Shun impetuosity and rash actions, and be careful with contracts and writings, leaving no loophole for loss.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a very active and enterprising year. Affairs are under high pressure for progress and achievement, with recognition and support from those in power and prestige. But be wise with papers, writings and contracts, and be alert to entanglements.

A child born on this day may be energetic, practical and creative, with much initiative and ardor in carrying through important projects although it may be of un-loving and fond of sports.

German Trans-Atlantic Survey Flight Completed

Japs Stalemated Before Kiukiang

SHANGHAI, July 26—(AP).—Japan's air, land and naval forces combined their power today in an intensified drive on Kiukiang, key Yangtse riverport, but Chinese defenders of the battered city were reported holding firm.

Japanese spokesmen here refused to reveal details of the battle, but foreign sources in the vicinity of Kiukiang said the invaders were using all available power to gain the river gateway to Hankow, 135 miles upriver.

Land forces fought on toward Kiukiang from Kutang, seven miles away on the short of Lake Potang, but met stubborn opposition.

They were aided by aircraft and warships in the Yangtse, which continued to pound Chinese defences around Kiukiang. It was believed, however, they had not yet attacked the city and were disinclined to endanger foreign property there.

Reports Japanese bombers had hit Anglo-American oil distributing properties on the outskirts of Kiukiang Sunday were unconfirmed.

Chinese communiques said vigorous defence fire had thwarted repeated Japanese attempts to take Kiukiang by direct naval action and had forced the invaders to depend upon aerial attacks.

Semi-official Chinese reports in Hankow said Japanese planes yesterday dropped more than 300 bombs in the Kiukiang area.

The British gunboat Cockchafer and the United States gunboat Monacacy still were standing by off the Kiukiang waterfront to aid British and United States citizens and protect their property.

Suspect Foul Play In Trooper's Death

BELLEVILLE, Ont., July 25—(CP)—Possibility of foul play in the death of Sergt. H. W. Burkholder of Hamilton, whose body was found on the railway tracks near here yesterday, was being investigated today by Chief Coroner J. J. Robertson and provincial police.

"There are a lot of queer angles to this case," said Dr. Robertson. "I don't see how anyone could fall through the window of a train without anyone seeing it happen. It all looks very mysterious."

The coroner said Burkholder must have plunged through the window of the troop train in which the 11th battery of Hamilton was going to Petawawa camp. The coroner figured, from the condition of the body, Burkholder was alive about 28 hours in the ditch where found and bled to death. The body was found about nine hours after death.

Provincial Constable William MacBrien, agreeing it might be a case of foul play, said, "We have our suspicions."

Looking Back On This Date

JULY 26

There is a story of a little known incident in the so-called "Patriot War" of 1837-40. Samuel P. Hart, son of an old soldier of the British army and for many years a resident of Cobourg and Belleville, where he had been a printer, had fled to the United States. His printing office at Belleville had been loyalists and he joined the Patriot organization in order to secure his revenge.

Fred Williams

About the middle of July, 1839, he went to Rochester, where John Montgomery, who had escaped from Fort Henry, had opened a tavern, which was the rendezvous of the conspirators against Canada. There he met one, Henry J. Moon, another refugee. Upon being asked if he "wanted to go into some money-making business," Moon replied in the affirmative and was told that the plot was to obtain a schooner with two cannon in it and "go skulking."

Hart went to Oswego, where he secured the schooner Guernsey, and on Friday, July 26, nine other men came aboard, among them the notorious Ben Lett, and early the next morning the schooner sailed from Oswego with another schooner, both well equipped with firearms, matches and turpentine, the latter to be used to set Cobourg in flames after the bank had been robbed and two or three "Tories" plundred and murdered "as an example to the others." Hart particularly wanted to Kill Sheppard McCormick, customs officer at Cobourg, because he had aided in the cutting out of the Caroline in the Niagara in December, 1837.

After midnight a party of the conspirators landed some five miles from Cobourg, proceeded to the farm house of a "Reformer", and thence to a secret meeting of "patriots" in a loft in the town. There plans were laid for the murder of a wealthy farmer, the robbing of the bank, and the murder of Hon. George S. and D'Arcy Boulton, who had defended the Short Hills raiders at Niagara the previous year, but it was decided to defer the revenge until the Monday night.

But Moor had a change of heart. He "would not be a midnight assassin even if I am a patriot," he said to himself and on Monday managed to contact D'Arcy Boulton, to whom he revealed the conspiracy. As a result the farmhouse in which the bandits were hiding was surrounded and several were captured.

The conspirators were brought to trial Sept. 13, the British subjects being indicted for treason, the Americans for felony. They were defended by the same D'Arcy Boulton, whom they had plotted to murder (he being assigned by the crown for the purpose). After a trial of 17 hours a verdict of guilty was returned and the Cobourg conspiracy was ended. Hart was sent to prison for seven years, but unfortunately Lett escaped to do more damage later on.

Lively Week Looms For War Veterans

TORONTO, July 26—(CP).—The down town sales headquarters of the Canadian corps re-union was busy from an early hour to-day as hundreds of visitors bought badges, berets, ties, blazers or pennants in readiness for the week-long re-union celebrations to be officially started to-night.

Executive headquarters at Exhibition Park had billets of wartime vintage prepared to accommodate the thousands of war veterans converging upon Toronto from other parts of Canada, fromal sections of United States and from every part of the British Empire.

Signs mark separate depots to facilitate registration of ex-service men at the downtown headquarters; nursing sisters, Imperials, Anzacs, etc. Veterans of the first Canadian contingent are provided with red berets, re dties, red badges; the second division sports the dark blue, the third is distinguished by light blue and the fourth, green.

Mayor Ralph Day, who enlisted while in his 'teens, will open the French village at Exhibition Park to-night, thereby starting off a week of festivities that will end officially next Monday night.

London Talks Fall Election In Canada

OTTAWA, July 26 (C.P.).—Prospects for a Dominion Federal election this fall continues to be a subject for much discussion in Ottawa despite the intimation from Prime Minister Mackenzie King during the last session and reiterated in a recent interview that he saw no reason for an election this year.

Many here think that should the new trade agreement between Canada and the United States be signed in September, the Government would go to th country on it. They argue it will be such a far-reaching treaty it will be sure to cause long debates in Parliament and the Government would be more comfortable in these debates if it already had a favorable verdict from the electors.

One of the difficulties in debating a trade agreement is that one nation signatory to the treaty cannot make any changes after it is signed without the consent of the other party to the contract and the result is it has to be accepted or rejected without amendments. So there would be no opportunity for compromise to meet divergent views within Canada.

Count Sees Lance Quite Frequently

LONDON, July 26 (AP).—Count Court Haugwitz-Reventlow, pledged not to visit his estranged wife, the former Barbara Hutton, was reported today to be seeing their two-year-old son, Lance, regularly.

Lance was said to be the main cause of the disagreement which led to the spectacular court case in London early this month and apparently started the couple on the road to divorce.

The Count was quoted by the Daily Herald as saying his wife frequently sends the child from Winfield House to visit him in his West-End hotel.

"He is a most attractive boy and meeting him is a real joy," the Count was reported to have said. "I have made no plans for the future and I don't know how long I shall remain in London."

Food prices are steadily increasing in France.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

MURIEL Watson used to worry about Bob's frequent trips to the "raw edges of civilization"—to mining towns and construction camps where life was rough and comforts few. Now he telephones her—and the children—from each new location cheering them, and himself, in the process. After all, he muses, you're never out of civilization as long as you have the telephone.

Reductions in telephone rates—local and long distance—in 1935, '36 and '37 have effected savings to telephone users in Ontario and Quebec of nearly one million dollars yearly.

Stick Stabs Lad Fatally

SHERBROOKE, Que.—A sharp, pointed stick pierced his heart and instantly killed Adrien Boisvert, 12, of St. Hermenegilde, Que., as he plunged to the ground from a broken swing, District Coroner J. A. Allard reported today. The boy had just swung to a horizontal position when the beam supporting the rope snapped, hurling him on the imbedded stick.

The Peterborough Examiner

PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, CANADA, TUESDAY, JULY 26, 1938

The Best Timber

KITCHENER. — "Canadian timber stands up better than Scandinavian timber, its chief competitor in England," Ernest Topping, a builder from Blackpool, visiting here with a party of eight British tourists, said today. "The biggest trouble with Canadian lumber is that it can't compete in price with the Scandinavian wood.

Tourists Make City Centre For Shopping

That Peterborough is a shopping centre for many of the tourists on vacation throughout the district can be proved by a little enquiry every day in the week. This morning, for example, S. R. Boger and a party of seven visitors from Canton, Ohio, who are staying at Bobcaygeon, motored down for the day. They reported everything satisfactory in the summer town on the Little Bob River with enough muskellunge and bass biting to make their outings on Pigeon Lake and Sturgeon Lake interesting. H. H. Treudley with his wife and daughter from Youngstown, O., came down from Beechwood on Deer Bay where they are spending ten days. Mr. Treudley has been an annual visitor to this district for twenty years.

"Fishing is not much more than fair," he told the Examiner, "and the muskies are mostly around six or seven pounds. We don't come over especially for the fishing, but because we like Beechwood and the Deer Bay country."

Fred Boyden and a party of four, of Toronto, is at Hastings for two weeks, his first holiday on the Trent. He motored up from Hastings Monday morning on a shopping trip.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Anderson of Canton, passed through the city Monday after a week end of five days in the Burleigh Falls area where they occupied a cottage with Peter Tender of Toronto. This was Mr. Tender's first holiday in the Kawarthas, and he left for home delighted with the fishing around Burleigh Falls.

A Buffalo Party

And here's just another example, J. F. Bauer and a party of seven from Buffalo are staying at Round Lake, north of Havelock, to be followed by other friends who successively occupy a cottage Mr. Bauer and C. Joyce also of Buffalo acquired some time ago from Harold Mathison.

"For the first week of fishing seven or eight of us come over 'stag' and then we are back again in September, but in the meantime we take turns with our families for a couple of weeks at a time," Mr. Bauer told the Examiner today. "I have been coming overe here for quite a number of years, and we've always been well used. This morning's motor trip into Peterborough was purposely to get our outboard motor fixed. We took it into the Johnson factory, and all they charged us was 83 cents for labor and everything. They wanted to know whether there was anything else we wanted, and some of the official came around and asked us whether we were being taken care of.

"If you go into one of your better restaurants they usually ask you if the meat, or whatever it was, suited us. The only other place I know of where they do that is in the south."

Banker's Son Spends Summer At Farming

To place the stamp of a news feature on a little story of a banker's son going farming for the summer would probably be approved by the banker and resented by the more sensitive farmer who feels that in service to the state and its people their own occupation should take precedence over finance in rewards and remuneration as well as in industrial rating.

G. A. Gillespie was telling the Examiner today that he believed the farmers of the district were sufficiently supplied with all the labor needed for local harvesting. And he mentioned the Toronto banker whose son wanted to spend the summer on a farm. Mr. Gillespie easily found a place for him in a good home in Smith township, and from all accounts the boy likes his summer experience, although it hardly classes as a vacation.

Twelve Old Country boys who were brought out to Canada by the Canadian Pacific Railway were recently placed on Peterborough farms, and Mr. Gillespie reports they are all making good.

"There has been very little demand for help from our farmers for the last two weeks, so that is no doubt an indication that they are manned for the harvesting," Mr. Gillespie added.

As a result of two accidents over the week-end at Buckhorn, Harold Baker went to his home at Norwood with two broken toes and Murray Barr with a broken ankle.

Edwards Brothers of Watford, breeders of Aberdeen-Angus cattle, made a thorough sweep of its class at Edmonton's diamond jubilee exhibition last week. This in an Ontario herd that usually shows at Peterborough.

REMANDED AGAIN.

A. Bridgewater who is under remand waiting for action by the Parole Board, was remanded once again when he appeared before Magistrate Gee Monday afternoon. He told the court he was anxious to get a job on the farm.

CASE DISMISSED.

A charge under the Liquor Control Act against Mrs. M. Chew which has been adjourned half a dozen times was finally disposed of in police court this morning when the Crown offered no evidence and the case was dismissed.

EXPECT BUSINESS TURN

Harlan Skuce of Philadelphia, Pa., here on a visit with his father, W. J. Skuce, Albert street, told the Examiner today that the entire staff of the company with which he is employed were directed to have their holidays over by the end of July, to be ready for an upswing of business in August that is generally expected across the border.

ALLOWED TO GO.

A former Peterborough man, now living in Toronto, promised to get out of town immediately if he were allowed to go on a drunk charge to which he pleaded guilty in police court to-day. The case was adjourned a week for sentence and Chief Newhall stated that the police could not go after the accused if he failed to appear next Tuesday.

A CITIZEN PROTESTS

An indignant citizen called the attention of a reporter to a row of unemptied garbage containers at the corner of Hunter and George streets at noon today. "If that was left beside my place all morning somebody would hear about it," he said. "The city and the Examiner spend money in attracting tourists and yet we leave that smelly stuff on the main street all morning. Why? There should be some answer."

NO WOBBLERS' TRACK.

Irrespective of the findings of the police enquiry now progressing, at least one Peterborough couple know the police are on the job. Following the break-up of a stag party in the wee sma' hours of Sunday, two celebrants decided to have a foot race on George street from King to Dalhousie street. En route they were stopped by the police cruiser and warned that the main thoroughfares of a city were not be used as a race track for wobblers.

LANDED 23-POUND MUSKIE.

Buster Whitton of Lakefield hooked one of the biggest maskinonge seen around the village this season, and proudly displayed it along the main street on Monday morning. He and George Jackman were fishing in Miller's Bay, an outlet of Katchewanooka Lake when their line tightened as if a whale had grabbed it. Half an hour's battle brought the big fellow up to the side of the boat, and when it was weighed down town it tipped the beam at exactly 23 pounds.

WANGLING IN WORMS.

A boy who deals in dew worms along the main stem unconsciously subscribes to the bigger and better sales slogan. It is said that when a bait-buying tourist is quoted the prices: 50 for a quarter of 100 for six bits, and fishes out the quarter for the smaller lot, the boy's answer is along the line that he doesn't stock fifty; just 100 because most tourists want the larger quantity. And usually he wangles the larger deal, getting out of the small business class selling tourists any number they want.

Lightning Destroys Barn Of W. J. Davis

Lightning set fire to the barn of W. J. Davis near Scott's Corners on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway this morning with total loss of the building and its contents of forty tons of hay, a bull, six calves, two sows and their litters and some chickens. The building was valued at around $2,000, and was insured for $1,200, and insurance of $600 on the contents covered more than the estimated loss of the produce and livestock.

Two cows on J. N. Lillico's farm were killed instantly in a field. Their value was placed at around $150.

The Davis barn was 98 feet by 32 feet. Cavan and North Monaghan farmers told The Examiner that this morning's electrical storm that flashed and thundered across the townships between eight and nine o'clock was one of the most menacing in many years. It seemed to be concentrated in a wide path on both sides of Springville. Surges of electricity on the Hydro wires burned out fuses here and there, two of them being at the homes of S. S. Staples and J. O. Ball.

Summer Guest Likes Lakes And The People

"I haven't the least criticism to offer about the Kawartha Lakes district and its people and their hospitality toward tourist visitors," John Pratt of A. S. Barnes & Company, New York city, one of the largest book publishing firms in the United States, remarked to the Examiner this afternoon.

"One thing I can say is that I believe the people up here are absolutely honest. At any rate I have no hesitancy about going away and leaving our cottage wide open. From my experience during the last twelve years I have come to trust everyone I meet up here. I can't say that about my own city."

Built Own Cottage

Twelve years ago Mr. Pratt and his wife were touring around the Kawarthas looking for a place to spend a vacation. "We got up as far as Fenelon Falls, came down through Bobcaygeon and stayed at Mount Julian for two weeks. We like Stoney Lake so much that we came back the next summer, staying at Mount Julian. One day we were out fishing down near Clear Lake when quite a storm blew up. We put in to a cottage which we afterwards learned was owned by a Mrs. Harvey. It was untenanted, so I said to my wife "I wonder if we couldn't get this place for a while." I telephoned around and we got the cottage for two weeks. That settled it for the future. We wanted a place of our own right there. Now I own 350 feet of the shore line, and in that third summer we built our own cottage. So you can regard me as two of the regulars. In fact I live ten months of the year thinking often of the two months ahead of us every July and August at Stoney Lake.

Doctor's Tribute

Last year we brought as our guests Dr. J. B. Nash of New York University and his wife. They have travelled all over the continent, and they were enamored of Stoney Lake. Dr. Nash declared that it was one of the most beautiful sections of country he had ever seen. He placed it second in his estimation to the Yosemite Valley. Could praise be more than that? I am fond of fishing and I've caught a lot of good sized bass. I have to go back to New York for a few days this week, but I shall be back as soon as I can. My home is in New Jersey, but our offices are in New York.

Verses By Visitors

"I don't know whether this little incident is of any interest to you or not. Two years ago the girl who cleans up our cottage after we leave at the end of the season sent us a few verses which she found. Mrs. Pratt had left a baited mouse trap which explains a reference in the rhymes written by some persons who were blown in there by a gale and evidently put up for a while. Nothing was missing, and we could never learn the identity of the visitors in our absence, although I enquired around Montvale not far from our place. So here are the lines:

September sixteen, 1936
Two travellers put up in these stix.
The smell was high with rotten rat
But with rain without we put up with that.
On observing the trophies big on the wall
We noticed a fish that was really quite small,
And the head of a dinosaur any one could
On closer inspection find out to be wood.
The Montclair Times made our hearts beat
With Montvale so close, our habitat sweet.
But the thing that seemed best to a couple of mugs
Were the beds which we found to be without bugs.
The Waldorf Astoria's not a bad joint
For them that like fleshpots, but we quickly "Joint"
The little chateau perched up on a hill
Is a haven for transients, blow fair wind or ill.
And so to our hosts we bid fond adieu
For tomorrow at daybreak we launch our canoe.
We've a good sense of humor, but it caused us a laugh
To see that damned minnow marked four and a half."

The only thing I could suggest to the people is to build better roads into the lakes, but even on that point there has been a great improvement since we first motored to Stoney twelve years ago. This is just like home up here now for my wife and I. You could hardly class us as tourists. We are regulars, delighted with our end of the lake and everything about the place, and that goes for Peterborough, too."

Harvey Council Passes Accounts

The regular meeting of the Harvey council was held in the True Blue Hall, Hall's Bridge recently. All members present, the reeve in the chair.

Moved by Mr. Hall, seconded by Mr. Irwin, that council pay W. R. Thompson, road superintendent, vouchers 4 and 5. Carried.

A Whopper! Buster Whitton of Lakefield is apparently just as good a fisherman as he is a lacrosse player. The flashy forward on the Peterborough lacrosse team landed this one from Lake Katchewanooka on Monday afternoon. It weighed 24 pounds, measured 47 inches in length, 23 inches in girth. It took Buster three-quarters of an hour to land him. D'Arcy Hill was his guide. (Examiner Staff Photo.)

Eating His Cap Last Straw

If there were any doubts in the mind of Magistrate Gee in police court Monday afternoon as to whether a man accused of intoxication had been drunk at the time of his arrest, they vanished about the moment that a restaurant proprietor described how the accused had started in to eat his cap instead of the sandwich he had ordered. There was of course other evidence. Some of it told how he chased the proprietor around his own restaurant with a carving knife, more of it pictured the arrest of the accused by Constable Leo Murphy and there was the intimation that he had mistaken the officer for Art Blade, former policeman and wanted to speak to Sergeant John Brown, who has not been on the force for many years.

These things on top of the accused's own admission that he had five glasses of beer and a quantity of wine helped to convince Magistrate Gee that the charge of intoxication was well founded and accordingly he fined the man $10 and costs or five days in jail.

3 Men Shocked By Lightning

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, July 26.—Three employees, Harold Mack, Fred Ferguson and Gordon Fowler, of the Warkworth cheese plant were the victims of a rather unusual accident during this morning's electric storm, the trio suffering from nervous shock, although the injuries are not very serious.

It is understood the lightning bolt entered the building down the chimney stack, put out the fire in the boiler, jumped to steel machinery on which the men were working and blew out the factory generator. Operations at the plant were discontinued until repairs could be made to the generator.

The Bluebirds' Tank

KIRKSVILLE, Mo., July 26. — (AP).—George Davis, proprietor of an oil company bulk station, found a nest in one of his tanks and tore it out. The next day it reappeared. Davis tore it out again. The next day he found a mother bird patiently building a third nest. Now a sign on the tank prohibits its use until after the bluebirds are through with it.

CAMPBELLFORD

Tenders Are Let Improve School

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 26.—Tenders for erecting a new fence and re-painting the old High School building were awarded by the School Board at their regular meeting held on Monday. S. A. Anderson's tender to erect a two-inch mesh fence for the sum of $66 was the first to be accepted on motion of W. Henson and A. J. Armour and the painting tender of Jas. S. Wilson was also accepted. The price being $165.00.

Tenders for re-placing the steps in front of the old high school building were read but it was decided that no action would be taken at the present time.

Walter Henson, chairman of the property committee, reported that re-decorating the top floor of the public school has been completed and made the suggestion that some varnish be purchased by the board to re-finish some of the desks which he claimed were in very bad condition. A motion was passed authorizing the purchase and it was added to the motion that caretaker C. Massey should apply the varnish. The report of Inspector of Manual Training C. C. Ashcroft indicated that the accomodations for this subject were "well ordered" but the stop and start switches on the motors "should be in more convenient places." Following the passing of the accounts the meeting was adjourned.

Driver's License Suspended Fine Imposed

Roy Courneya, 22, was convicted before Magistrate O. A. Langley in police court this morning of reckless driving on George Street on the night of July 2 and was fined $10 and $9 costs and his driving license was suspended for 20 days.

The charge arose out of a collision at the intersection of George and Townsend Streets between a car driven by Courneya and a truck owned by the Coca Cola Company and driven by Alton Beavis.

Courneya was defended by W. B. Gordon and Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., conducted the prosecution.

Beavis, the first witness, said that he had stopped on Townsend Street at the intersection of George street after driving east on Lansdowne Street and had allowed four or five cars to pass. Looking up George Street he had seen a car, which turned out to be one driven by Courneya, approaching from the north and 400 feet away.

He had moved out into the intersection and had almost completed a turn north when Courneyea's car crashed into rear of his truck. Witness estimated that Courneya was driving at 50 to 60 miles an hour.

In Centre of Street

Traffic officer Wm. A. Clark testified to visiting the scene of the accident and making measurements. He placed the point of impact as almost in the centre of the intersection.

James Anderson who was at the corner of Townsend and George Street when the accident happened corroborated Beavis' evidence as to the truck stopping before entering George Street. He placed the speed of Courneya's car at 40 to 50 miles an hour.

For the defence Vincent O'Connell and Harold O'Toole who were passengers in Courneya's car said that the latter had been driving at 25 or 30 miles an hour when the accident happened. O'Toole said that he did not see the truck until they were 30 feet away from the intersection and that it had swung out on George Street at 15 miles an hour.

Courneya, testifying in his own behalf, swore that he was travelling 25 or 30 miles an hour and that the truck had moved across the intersection at 12 or 15 miles an hour.

He claimed that he could not have passed to the west of the truck and thus averted an accident.

Magistrate Langley declared that on the facts he had arrived at the conclusion that Courneya was guilty of negligent and reckless driving, inasmuch as he had driven at an immoderate rate of speed and his position was too near the centre of the road as he approached the intersection.

He was about to suspend Courney's driving license for a month but reduced the time to 20 days when he found the former ruling would have interfered with the accused's holiday trip.

500 Peterboro' Men For Corps Reunion

More than one hundred ex-service men have registered at G. J. Downer's barber shop, Hunter street, for the Canadian Corps Reunion in Toronto beginning Saturday and continuing until Monday, and some of the veterans estimate that Peterborough will be represented by close to five hundred men.

M. J. Clancy is in charge of the registration, and will be in the shop during the daytime and also until 10 p.m. until Thursday night. Registration provides each man with a corps button, certificate, and complete information as to billeting, parades, entertainment and other details of the week-end program, and also entitles him to the special fare of $1.55 return for those who intend to travel by railway. The buttons will be the only passport to the French village at Exhibition Park. Returned men are advised that it would be more convenient for them to register in Peterborough instead of waiting until they go to Toronto, thereby providing themselves with all the essential credentials and information regarding where they may stay.

Fair Wheat Price Hinted By Howe

SASKATOON, July 26.—(CP)—Minister of Transport C. D. Howe inspected airport facilities here today and planned to fly to Edmonton tomorrow, after opening the Saskatoon Industrial Exhibition last night.

In opening the exhibition he commented upon "the fine spirit" he found in Western Canada and the evidences he met everywhere of an abundant crop.

"The federal government is seeking to see that the farmer will get the opportunity to sell his wheat at a fair price," he said. "Another department of government has gone into partnership with the farmer in seeking to place his produce on the markets of the world and I feel certain that the price will be fair."

12 Beaver Skins Reward Victoria Raid

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, July 26.—Game Overseer Alfred Hodgson paid a visit to Digby township, in the northern part of Victoria county, on Saturday and made a seizure of twelve beaver and thirty muskrat pelts. The official entered an old log barn on the huckleberry rocks and made the find in an old trunk in the structure. Charges of illegal trapping of beaver and trapping of rats out of season will be preferred against a well known resident of the township. A charge of having poison in his possession may also be laid. The beaver pelts were beautiful ones, the animals having been very large. An old envelope was found in the trunk with the name of the accused on it. This led to his arrest and his alleged admission.

Donald Hicks, aged nine, of Ingoldsby, Haliburton county, was brought to the Ross Hospital Monday suffering from serious injuries. The little lad while watching the operation of an electric wringer at his home, had his arm drawn into the machine. Several bones in the back of his hand were broken, and he also suffered flesh injuries.

A Toronto man will appear in the local court in a few days charged with having nine undersized bass in his possession. He was apprehended by Overseer Scott, of Kinmount, while fishing in Dorset township.

An inquest has been called by Coroner Dr. Collison to be held in a few days to investigate the causes surrounding the death of a Toronto woman, who passed away in the Ross Hospital on Sunday. The deceased was admitted to the hospital a few days ago, and it is believed that an illegal operation took place in a nearby centre prior to her admittance to that institution.

Garages in Woodville and Lorneville were entered during the week-end. A car was stolen from McIntyre & Hood's garage in Woodville. They changed the battery before leaving and filed the car with cigarettes, tobacco and motor accessories. At Lorneville Campbell's garage was entered and a quantity of gasoline and motor accessories stolen. It is believed that the men who pulled off the ribbery are the ones who stole a car at Burke's Falls, since the car was found hidden and abandoned in the bush near Beaverton.

Car Is Impounded Three Months

Roy Thompson, Campbellford electrician, who pleaded guilty before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning to drunken driving on Lansdowne street on July 18, was sentenced to seven days in jail and his car was impounded for three months.

Thompson had been on remand for a week after pleading not guilty last Monday. To-day he changed his plea and told the magistrate he had parked his park near the corner of Lansdowne and George street because he realized that he had been drinking too much.

Gordon Deals With Speech By Tweedsmuir

An address to the Canadian Club of Toronto by Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada's Governor-General, on the subject of the art of living was discussed by Hon. G. N. Gordon at Monday's luncheon of the Rotary Club. His Excellency had emphasized the importance of leisure, partly as relaxation and also because it afforded to business and professional men opportunities for obtaining a detached view of their own affairs like the general who to succeed should keep out of the thick of the fight in order that he may gain the advantage of the perspective of the engagement as a whole.

Mr. Gordon observed that Lord Tweedsmuir was influenced largely by the scene in which he had been for a time an active participant, both business and professional life in the Old Country. Centuries of experience had developed a design for living in Great Britain that was quite generally recognized and adopted by men of affairs in the Old Land, one of whom said on an occasion to Lord Tweedsmuir: "I should consider myself a failure if I went to the office more than five days a week or stayed there more than a few hours a day."

Strata of society were more definitely marked in Great Britain than in younger countries like Canada, Alderman Gordon said, and instead of opportunities in the professions, government service and even in trade being limited in a large measure to men who received the powerful aid of social position and influence as in the Old Land, the whole horizon was spread before the men of Canada and men rose from the ranks largely by their own effort and ability to the most responsible positions in government, industry, finance and business generally.

Brains Must Be Used.

"The secret of success" Lord Tweedsmuir said in his Toronto speech, "is to do one's job with a minimum of labor," and by that he meant "that we should apply intelligence, for intelligence saves waste, and most jobs are done with an absurd waste of labor.'

Leisure enabled a man to enjoy the pleasures of life and thereby to enhance his professional efficiency, to be ready for the job when he return to grips with it, but also it offered him time for reflection away from the whole scene of affairs, and for the play of intelligence in approaching the problems of the job in hand.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Gordon for his interesting commentary and exposition was moved by Alex Mowat who said he was especially impressed by the concluding thought of the address quoted from Lord Tweedsmuir as follows: "Some one has written that every man should be lonely at heart. We all spend too much time on the treadmill without vision or perspective in our work. But, sometimes we must get out of the din and discover ourselves. We all need the virtues of solitude, for we must all be solitary in the great crises of life, and we must all be alone at death."

Dr. Hayes' office in the Barrie Building will be closed from July 25 until Monday, August 8.

B.C. GOLFERS DISQUALIFIED AFTER WINNING WILLINGDON CUP

Ontario and Quebec Golfers To Meet In Final For Cup

Golf History Made In Disqualification

LONDON, Ont., July 26 (C.P.).—A history-making disqualification was written to-day on the records of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, a ruling that shunted the British Columbia team out of the Willingdon Cup championship and ordered a playoff tie between Quebec and Ontario for the golfing team championship of Canada.

Never since the competition was started in 1927 has the R.C.G.A. been called upon to toss out a winner. The Pacific Coast boys were apparently safely enthroned yesterday as team champions when Don Gowan of Vancouver decided he may have overstepped the rules and consulted the captain of the British Columbia team, Kenny Black, tied with Sandy Somerville of London as low scorer of the day.

It was long after the 36 holes of medal play had been completed that word suddenly drifted about of a hurried gathering of the executive of the R.C.G.A.

603 Aggregate.

British Columbia was posted winners with an aggregate medal score of 603, four strokes better than Quebec, defending champions, and a smart Ontario squad could show.

The galleryites had long departed, the Pacific Coast team was congratulating itself on its fourth win and all was in readiness for the Canadian amateur championship starting to-day.

Gowan sought out his team captain. Black was taking a swim, but immediately he heard Gowan's recital of the facts he hurried to communicate with R.C.G.A. officials. They were astounded, but immediately called the executive into session.

Gowan appeared voluntarily before the meeting and told his story.

At the eighth hole of the afternoon round, he told them, he had played a ball that might be considered out of bounds. At the ninth he had done the same thing.

The executive thanked Gowan for his sportsmanship, took note of the circumstances and promptly ordered a disqualification with the ruling that Quebec and Ontario must play a five-hole test to-day to decide the winner.

The two squads, four men a side, will settle the 1938 team championship over five holes. They play the first, second, and third, and then move to the 17th and 18th. The low aggregate decides the winner. Play will start at six p.m. (EST), after the first round of the 18-hole amateur championship has been completed.

The decision that snatched the team championship from British Columbia left little consolation for the teams behind Ontario and Quebec except a move-up in the standings.

Against the tied teams' 607, Alberta posted 618, Manitoba 620, Saskatchewan 662, and the Maritime combination of Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick 701.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

Entries for Central Ontario rink play-offs will be received by secretary of games committee up to and including Saturday, Aug. 6. Each entry must be in writing and must be accompanied by $1.00 fee.

A nice crowd of twenty mixed rinks turned out last night to enjoy an evening at bowls. The winning rinks were skipped by T. McMillan, H. Martin, R. Henry and E. L. Sackville.

To-morrow (Wednesday) afternoon the ladies of our club are holding a little tournament all their own. The draw will be made at 1.30 p.m. from the board. A small fee of 15 cents will be charged and good prizes offered. This invitation is for all lady bowlers.

On Thursday evening of this week we are to be favored with a visit of Port Hope bowlers (ladies and gents). It is expected that they will bring up as many as twelve rinks. This number, along with our own members, should make Thursday's tournament an outstanding event. To our local bowlers we would ask that they phone their names in not later than seven o'clock. This will give the committee a chance to have the draw made in good time. A light lunch wil lbe served by the ladies of our club. This notice is meant for all lady and gent bowlers. The fee is 25c.

It is expected that the prizes to be give naway at our coronation tournament on Monday will be exhibited in the window of Richard Hall's Ltd. in a day or so.

Hawks Handed 20 to 7 Setback

Quakers practically eliminated Hawks from the Southend Softball League race last night by handing them a 20-7 reverse at the Brinton Field. The winners played fine ball behind Shine's steady hurling and touched up Elliott for 26 hits. Delpellaro led the assault with six hits, including a homer, and Shine and McCullough got four hits each. Caccavella came through with a homer, triple and double. Stanley started for the winners but was ejected by Umpire Coursey after two heats, having given up four runs on four hits and three walks. Shine, suffering a swollen jaw from a collision with a player in the first, pitched neat ball, striking out four as he gave up 10 hits and walked three. G. Jay had five hits in five times for Hawks, three of them doubles. Pryde and Busby looked good in the field, while Cournyea, Starr and McCullough were best for Quakers. Harlemites Fall At Campbellford

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 26.—A home run by H. Campney with two on bases won for the Campbellford Electrics an 8 to 6 victory from Peterborough's Little Harlem outfit.

The game, played on the High School diamond on Monday evening was of the exhibition variety but nevertheless drew a fair sized crowd which was well rewarded as it was one of the nicest bits of softball seen here this season. The locals stepped into the lead in the first inning which they held all the way through with McComb pitching a stellar game and both Phillips and Bennett scoring twice on Conroy's fast ball. Couch, Campney, Blake and Crosson added one each for the winners with Campney's home run with Phillips and Couch on the bases was the highlight of the game.

The visitors went scorless in the first two innings and Calladine, Craig and Connelly counted in the third and Gray added one in the sixth on a walk, a stolen base and two singles and Calladine and Conroy completed the visitors scoring when they added two more in the seventh to bring the total up to 6.

The Dope Is Upset Again

They can't seem to settle the three-year-old situation in racing circles this year, as different horses pop up to win the big races and leave the experts without anyone to designate as the outstanding one of the season. It was Nedayr's first stake victory of the year as he won in a driving finish, with Bull Lea second.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

JUST SCRATCHING ABOUT today, like a hen on hard ground, trying to pick a living. Store a few seeds and a lot of sand away in the gizzard, lay the odd egg and wind up plucked after the hatchet descends. Oh, well, we'll lay the blame on old Adam and his misguided missus! Noticed an item in the Trenton weekly the other day where the R. C. A. F. softballers had lost six games in a row and were feeling rather safe now on the bottom rung of a four-team group. The Fliers, who must have been grounded, had some of the cocky puckists in the lineup, Gees like Trepanier, Lalonde, Lecompte, Gibson and Legris. They must still be punch drunk from the hockey beating they took from the Petes! How are the mighty fallen. . . .

* * * * * * *

TWO LOCAL MIDGET lacrosse melees were run off here last eve, Kinsmen taking a 4-3 nod over Rotary and Lions lambasting Kiwanis by an 11-5 score. In the first game a guy named Mattucci starred for the winners with all four goals. And in the second setto, the Vitarelli bros. were in on about nine. A great day for the Italians. We feared muchly for the Irish till we learned that an O'Toole, an O'Donnel, a Murphy and a Hallihan were also listed among the stars in these frays—and sure and foine lads they all be!

GORD MINTY, "Y" swim coach has lined up some big races for the Wallace Point regatta on Aug. 10th. A mile swim for men, half a mile for ladies, half a mile for gals 15 years and under, and the same for boys that age. Start and finish at the point with first two in each event copping a permanent trophy. Also cups for the youngest boy and girl i nthe half-mile events, and crests for all finishing. No entry fee but ya must have 'em in by Aug. 6th to Mr. Minty at the Y. M. C. A. Some of the city and district lads who can swim like a fish when there is a femme in sight, or some of the gals who have canoe trouble in the moonlight and crawl-stroke home, should get into these events. It will be a big affair, na doot.

AGENT NAMED W. T. KNOTT, 1088 Bloor St., West, Toronto, writes: "Dear Sir—As secretary of St. Anthony's Athletic Assoc., I have been asked to write you regarding an exhibition game or games of softball in your city Civic Holiday. We have a fairly fast junior team which, with the addition of two or three senior players, would make quite a game of it with any of the City League teams of Peterborough. Anyone interested could forward his proposition to the above address. I might add a few words of congratulation for the admirable manner in which your daily contribution to a fine paper is so consistently rendered. Indeed it would do credit to a much larger publication." Thanx, sir, and we were so covered with rosy confusion at the praise that we could hardly wait to print it!

Never a Close Shave

AND THURSDAY NIGHT in the lamp light we will have the House of David pro ballsters here to play the Petes at Riverside. There ought to be a big crowd in spite of the fact that there is likely to be a barber's boycott, as the Bearded Wonders of Benton Harbor play a smart brand of ball behind foliage that would make a forestry expert blink. Part of their contracts call for abstinence from shaving from spring until autumn and the boys may be young in years but they look like old men. Yet they play first-class ball and the Petes don't want to think, 'cause they licked the Buffalo semi-pros here last Saturday, that the situation is well in hand yet. Should be quite an attraction and ought to pack in the customers.

* * * * * * *

DIDN'T HEAR THE RESULT of the game last eve, the a.m. sheet slipping on it, but the Kingston Ponies were slated to meet the House o f David gang. And the Ponies had sent for Paczkowski and McIntyre, two of their expelled players. Also Bud Clancy, former star slabsmen, was on a visit to the Limestone City and agreed to twirl a few frames. According to the Kingston columnist, both the Ontario Sports Federation and the O. S. A. agreed there could be no further penalty for the suspended Ponies playing a pro team so long as some of the receipts went to charity. The article leads one to believe that the other sports bodies feel the Kingston baseballers and softballers are getting a rough deal from the O. B. A. and some pressure will be applied to have the suspensions lifted this week. The seven banned softballers have applied for re-instatement to the O. B. A. so that they may finish their city softball playoffs.

* * * * * * *

As The Badgers Bicker

A DISPATCH FROM Guelph states that the O. S. A. has been assured by ths Ontario Federation secretary that the governing body would immediately consider the case of the suspended Kingston players. Other O. S. A. business includes a bunch of transfers dealt with. Point Anne has been stepped up from intermediate "B" to an "A" rating, after winning the title last year and may use Johnny Bawden of Belleville. An application for the transfer of Ken Fleming to Keene was turned down. The local City Loop doesn't need to declare a winner till well out in August, so our playoffs will be four-in-seven, starting in a couple of weeks time.

AT THE BOWL LAST NIGHT, Omemee yanked out a 7-6 win over the Motorists in an eight-frame affair. Motorists rallied for four runs in the eighth but the game was called for darkness—and high time, too—early in the ninth with the O's having runners on second an dthird with one out. A neat scrap. Westclox manager wasn't on hand so the meeting didn't do much after the tilt. Except that it was agreed that the two "defaulted" games could be replayed if all managers are agreeable, but it had to be either both games or none. Omemee agreed to replay their joust with Motorists, and the latter were willing. Dunno how Westclox feel about the Westclox-Omemee fray. Thursday sees Westclox and Motorists play here while Motorists and Omemee clash at the Bowl on Saturday. The Omemee-Westclox tilt Aug. 4th winds up the schedule.

DEESE, DEM AND DOSE: Pirates and Greyhounds have a junior ball tilt at the Ex. tomorrow in the twilight. . . . Cobourg and young Petes will meet in the Lakeshore Junior Ball Loop semi-finals, Oshawa having clinched first place. . . . Keene and Westclox gals have their second sectional softball playoff tonight at seven in the Bowl; the Keenesters won the first of the two-in-three serial. . . . Don Foster, aged 10, pulled an unassisted triple play in a "Y" softball struggle last week, spearing a liner and tagging second and then running to third to beat a returning runner. . . . Wilson who saw duty on the mound at the Bowl last p.m., pitched for DeLaval in the Southend Loop. . . . Some Southend Softball League dope is in tonight. . . . Woodbridge have a lacrosse match with the Petes here Friday, with Kinsmen and Kiwanis mixing in a midget fracas. . . . Lefty Lesurf pitched in a 7-7 tie in senior ball last p.m. in Toronto, our old pal Umpire Ernie Wortley being panned hard by the fans for calling the contest. . . . A kid was hurt last night in the East City softball saucer when Parsons chased a foul fly and ran into him. . . . Oshawa is planning an even better junior "A" team in the O. H. A. this winter. . . . But right now business in the Motor City is even worse than the GM-men's fielding was Sat'day!

Elgin Suffers Seventh Loss

HASTINGS, July 26.—The Clerks handed Elgin their seventh straight loss in the town softball league when they defeated them 7 to 3 last night. The Clerks had seven hits to Elgin's 8, but had only had two errors while Elgin had four.

Scott for Elgin had to be relieved in the fifth innings after allowing seven hits, striking out four and walking seven. R. Richardson hurled shutout ball for the rest of the game, he walked three and had one strikeout.

Ruth Still a Hero To Albany Fandom

ALBANY, N.Y., July 26 (AP).—Babe Ruth was still a hero to Albany's baseball fandom today—even in defeat.

The mighty bambino, now a member of Brooklyn Dodger's coaching staff, showed all of his old-time power last night when he smacked a homer in his first trip to the plate in the course of an exhibition game between the Dodgers and Albany Senators of the Eastern league.

Ruth in the first game for four innings, played errorless ball at first base in addition to clouting the homer but the Dodgers lost, 7-6.

More Horse Vaccine

CALGARY, July 26. — (CP)—A shipment of vaccine to combat encephalomyelitis, dread horse disease which has made its appearance in Southern Alberta, will arrive here today.

A shortage of the serum was reported as a demand came from several areas in the south country and north and east of Calgary.

Dr. G. Gordon Anderson, V.S., of Calgary, said the disease had not reached epidemic stage, inasmuch as only sporadic cases had been found in a wide inspection.

"There is no cause for alarm," he added.

Tigers swamped Cubs by a 22-0 score last night in a Junior City Baseball League game at the Exhibition Grounds. The Cubs used Kirby, Thomas and Weir on the slab. Kirby was pounded out in the fourth with a nine-run outburst. Mortimer and W. BISONS REGAIN SECOND PLACE IN INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE

Believe Rainy Spell Will Prove Costly To Cleveland Indians

Spoiled Tribe's Run For American Flag

NEW YORK, July 26 (AP).—Like the crops, the roads and the amusement park business, the pennant hopes of the Cleveland Indians suffered severe damage from last week's prolonged rainy spell in the east. In fact, there's a strong belief in some quarters the tribe was rained right out of the American league pennant.

The Indians still are only a game behind the league-leading New York Yankees as they open at home today after remaining over in Boston an extra day to divide a final doubleheader with the Red Sox. They may even regain the lead at home. But when they go east again there's bound to be trouble.

Cleveland was doing right well when the deluge started. The Indians had beaten the Yanks in the opener of a "crucial" series and were confident they could take the league leaders and Boston Red Sox as well. As it was they got an even break in 10 games in the east, better than any other western team except Chicago could do. But the three games at New York they figured would put them on top again rained out and they lost two of three to the Red Sox.

Troubles Ahead

Yesterday's belated windup, when most of the clubs in both league were travelling and the Detroit-Athletics twin bill was postponed because of wet grounds, served to illustrate the troubles that lie ahead for the tribe.

Johnny Allen and Mel Harder did the pitching—they've been doing practically all the good flinging the Indians have had lately. Allen was beaten, 4-0, when rookie Emerson Dickman of Boston came through with a three-hitter, but Harder evened things with five-hit ball to win 3-0.

Beyond those two, Cleveland's mound staff consists mostly of Bobby Feller, who hasn't been doing so well lately and says his fast ball is gone. That's a none too promising list for a hard schedule of doubleheaders.

Allen allowed only five hits as he took his second defeat of the season and saw his 12-game winning streak end; but only one failed to count. The Sox went ahead on Pinchy Higgins' double and Bobby Doerr's single in the second, added two runs on a walk, Higgins' single, Ken Keltner's error and a fielder's choice and finished up with Jimmy Foxx's 27th homer in the sixth.

Bagby held the tribe to six hits and fanned nine in the nightcap but failed to stop Keltner and Jeff Heath. The former clouted his 17th homer for one run and doubled home another while Heath's triple and single led to a run.

New York Giants find themselves in a spot somewhat like Cleveland's, only they're four games behind instead of just one as they return home to face the National league's western clubs. They lost nine out of 13 decisions on the road and to make up their deficit they have to check not only Pittsburgh's Pirates, who won nine games and lost five, but Chicago's threatening Cubs, who hung up 11 victories in 13 games against the east at Wrigley Field.

Rain Downpours Hinder Sports On East Coast

NEW YORK, July 26.—If they can't do anything else with the Yankee Stadium, they might sow it with wild rice and use it as a duck preserve for Fall shooting. Furthermore, if the weather at Saratoga is to be anything like that of the past week at the Empire City track, those turf followers so deeply interested in "improving the breed" should concentrate on producing a strain of web-footed horses.

The tennis courts in this area are fit for nothing except lily ponds now. That's intolerable. Some of the golf courses had to be closed because of flood conditions. That's practically illegal. The golfer is ordinarily an amphibious animal but this weather has been extraordinary. A fisherman off Fire Island reported that he deliberately turned his dory upside down, figuring that he would't get quite so wet that way.

Unless Marse Joe McCarthy can get his Yankee ball club in the open in a hurry, he may have to take them back to St. Petersburg and start training all over again. A curve ball will look like a strange object to Messrs. DiMaggio, Dickey, Gehrig and Gordon by the time they come to bat again.

Helpful Hint.

One day last week Mr. Lucien Franck came forward with a suggestion that was coldly rejected at the time. But continued rain led to the thought that there may be something in it. Mr. Franck is a man who knows sports from away back. He watched the running of the first Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs in 1875 and he was a ball player himself in the days when the late Barney Dreyfus was sponsoring a club in Louisville, Ky.

Mr. Franck's suggestion was that a vast awning or canvas cover be held up over the ball parks by captive balloons. It's a desperate measure, but these are desperate days and this may be the only way in which they can get the pennant races finished by early October. It's either that or play right ahead in the rain and let the players swim for it.

Unless they make baseball an under-cover or indoor game, the managers may have another item to worry over. A hireling may be able to hit, run, throw and field—but can he swim? That may be very important. A breast-stroke outfielder couldn't begin to compare with a rival who could cover his territory or zip around the bases with a six-beat crawl.

Yes, It's Mildred

Mildred (Babe) Didrickson, sensational woman athlete of a few years ago, who swept everything before her in the feminine sphere of sport, and many times played against men for competition, is now engaged to George Zaharias, well-known "terrible Greek" of the continent's grunt and groan circuits. The Babe smiles following the announcement, made in St. Louis.

House Of David Ballsters Here

The famed House of David pro baseball team will be here this weekend for two exhibition games with the Petes in Riverside Park. The tussles, staged under the lights, will be run off Thursday and Saturday evenings, with the Benton Harborites journeying to Oshawa on Friday. As was the case last year a record crowd of fans from the city and district may be expected to see these bewhiskered diamond stars disporting under the arcs. As an added attraction this year, instead of the Davids playing some other pro squad, the men from Michigan will meet the Peterborough squad. Permission has been granted the locals by the O.B.A. It will be the first time here the locals could play the Bearded Boys of Benton Harbor.

Besides playing a classy, colorful game, the House of David team has a trio of peppy ball players, unsurpassed in baseball. They dish up a dandy showing to the interest and amusement of fans. The full team will make the trip here for the twin offering, and the Petes will be at full strength for the game Thursday. They feel cocky after their 4-1 win here Saturday over the Buffalo semi-pros, and are hoping to knock off at least one decision over the King Ben cult this week at home.

Buffalo Pins 9-1 Setback Onto Royals

TORONTO July 26 (CP).—There may not be much of a race for first place in the International Basebal league this year but the firing around the second an dthird berths is hot and heavy.

Buffalo Bisons pinned a 9 to 1 setback on Montreal Royals last night to regain second place when Rochester Red Wings dropped a tight game to Toronto 5-4. The herd thus took over runner-up position by a half game.

Syracuse Chiefs, Red Wings' hottest inter-city rivals, stayed right in the fight for third place by whipping Jersey City Giants twice, 2-0 and 3-2. While the contenders were fighting among themselves Newark Bears walloped the hapless Baltimore Orioles 19-3.

Bob Kline, won his third game in eight days for the Bisons when he let the Royals down with seven hits. Ollie Carnegie was the big gun of the attack with his 29th homer, a double, a single and five runs driven in.

Both of Syracuse's wins were thrillers. Young Glen Gabler gave them only one hit in the opener but a dropped fly ball by Babe Herman let two unearned runs score. Ted Kleinhans went the route for the Chiefs and allowed four hits.

The nightcap went 10 innings and once again Jersey errors' settled the battle. Shortstop George Myatt threw wild past first base in the tenth allowing Longacre to score from second base.

The Red Wings were stoped by Earl Caldwell's one-inning relief job after the Wings had come back from a 5-2 deficit at the start of the ninth. They filled the bases on Ted Olson, the starter, and Caldwell, after allowing Marron's single, good for two runs, retired the side.

Newark's slaughter of the Orioles was routine. Francis Kelleher and Nick Witek contributed homers to the 20-hit attack and pitcher Atley Donald coasted home.

Omemee Wins Over Motorists

Omemee took a 7-2 win over Motorists in an abbreviated men's softball game last night at the Bowl before a big crowd. The game was called for darkness in the eighth with the score reverting back to the seventh, Motorists having tallied four runs in the eighth. The losers were held to four hits, while the O's got seven, both sides booting the ball about for a few bad ones. Stephenson fanned six and walked seven, giving way to Reeds in the eighth, the latter walking one. Wilson for the losers fanned four and walked three, with Strickland going in in the fifth and allowing two walks as he struck out three. It was an exciting game.

Pogue led the winners at bat with a homer and single while Stephenson hit a four-bagger. For Motorists, Conroy, Smith, Dorrington and Montgomery got one hits each. Neat fielding was shown by Rehill, Brockley and J. Williamson; as well as Dorrington, Weir and Playford of the losers. The teams:

Lions Win Out In Lacrosse

Lions licked Kiwanis by an 11-5 score last night in their midget lacrosse melee, the second game of a twin bill at the George St. arena. It was the most open game of the season in this group. In the first frame, Doughty scored and D. Vitraelli evened it up. The latter passed to Maloney for another and then Gillespie tallied from Dwyer to knot the count. In the second, L. Vitarelli scored 3 times for Lions, aided once by Detlor. Doughty got one back for Kiwanis in the third, with L. Vitarelli scoring again, and then Gillespie of Kiwanis and D. Vitarelli of Lions dented the twine. Scriver opened the fourth with a tally, followed by Maloney and L. Vitarelli. Hallihan got one for Kiwanis but D. Vitarelli ended it for the winners. Both Vitarelli boys and Eason shone for the Lions with Hallihan, Murphy and Gillespie going good for Kiwanis. Teams:

Kiwanis: Goal, Lehman; defence, Murphy and Gillespie; centre, J. Caravaggie; wings, Berardi and Hallihan; rover, Doughty; subs, Carter, Dwyer, Flynn and Stewart.

Need Rowboats Bring Runners To Home Plate

NEW YORK, July 25—For no good reason, the downpour that held the Yankees and White Sox in check again over the week-end recalled a day in Chicago some years ago. The same clubs were involved. It was in the time of Miller Huggins and Babe Ruth and Jumping Joe Dugan and Silent Bob Meusel.

It was a bad day to begin with but they started the ball game and the White Sox went into the lead. Intermittent rain had left casual water all around Comiskey Field and a vast dark cloud coming in from the west promised a fresh flood in short order. If any more came down, it was a cinch that a batter would need hip boots to get up to the plate and rowboats would be required to bring in the outfielders.

It was about the fourth inning, with the White Sox at bat. They wanted to get themselves out in a hurry and then retire the Yanks in the first half of the fifth to make it a legal victory before the afternoon festivities were washed out. So the White Sox hitters were up there with instructions to swing at the first ball and get themselves killed off in a hurry.

That wasn't so easy. Miller Huggins yanked his pitcher and substituted another. That took some time, as the black cloud came closer. Sam Jones, on the mound for Yankees, dilly-dallied in a way that had the umpires furious. But Sam wasn't slow enough for Dusty Miller. So Sam came out and Waite Hoyt went in. Hoyt laughingly began pitching about six feet wide of the plate.

All In Vain.

The umpire behind the plate rushed out and gave Hoyt a terrific lecture with much wagging of his forefinger. Hoyt merely sneered and walked two men in succession. Then he apparently lost control and put a ball near enough for one of the White Sox batters to hit. It bounded down to Aaron Ward at second base who cuffed it around, kicked it twice and then tossed it feebly over Deacon Scott's head where Scott was standing on second base.

In the meanwhile the White Sox runners were just jogging around the bases, inviting the Yankees to tag them out. The New Yorkers didn't fall for that lure. Scotty recovered the ball on the edge of the infield, inspected the seams, wiped the ball off on his shirt and flipped it back toward Ward near second base.

Two White Sox runners had reluctantly crossed the plate by that time and the man who had hit the feeble grounder had passed second base at a slow walk. The umpire at first base was stalking along with him, gesturing wildly and shouting something that nobody could understand. Ward tossed the ball to Joe Dugan at third. As the runner faked a stumble and lay flat on the muddy ground the umpire's voice finally rang clear. He was shouting at Dugan:

"You'd better tag that man! Tag that man or I'll turn you in!"

The White Sox player lying in the mud looked up. Dugan hadn't made a move to come over and tag him. So the mud-covered gent arose and staggered deliberately into Dugan.

"He's out!" roared the umpire triumphantly, but it was only the first out and the next minute the black cloud opened up and deluged the field. In case E. G. Barrow forgets, that was one time the Yankees were thankful for a delicious downpour that made baseball impossible for the day.

Manush Drives In 4 Toronto Runs

REDWING STADIUM, Rochester, N.Y., July 26. — Heinie Manush led a personally conducted raid on the Red Wings here last evening in his extra base hitting, and was largely responsible for the 5-4 victory achieved by the Maple Leafs. The win gave Jack Burns' boys the series, two games to one.

The Leafs were all out to win, and Ted Olson, who kept the Rochester hits well scattered until he left the box in the ninth with three on and nose out, received credit for the victory, his first over the Wings this season. However, Olson needed the able relief pitching of Earl Caldwell to save the day.

When Caldwell replaced Olson in the ninth Narron was the first man he faced and represented the winning run. The Rochester catcher belted a single to left scoring Gidenwater and Juelich and putting the Reds one run short of a tie.

Then Caldwell set Crabtree down on strikes, got Vezelich on an easy infield grounder. Burns ordered Cobb purposely passed to fill the bases and the Toronto victory was clinched when Ogrodowski, the eighteenth Rochester player to get in the game, grounded to Sheerin for the final out.

Nubs Kilenke, the starting Rochester pitcher, lost the game in the first inning when the Leafs scored three times. Gantenbein's single and a pass to Burns set the stage for Manush's first telling blow. This was a home run over right field fence, Heinie scoring behind Gantenbein and Burns.

When Manush came up in the third, with Bob Bowman pitching for Rochester, Burns was on first. Heinie drove him home with a triple against the centre field wall. A moment later Manush scored on a wild pitch by Bowman. This was the winning run ad proved just enough in the face of effective pitching by Olson and Caldwell.

The Reds scored their first run in the second on two scratch hits, a base on balls and an infield out. An error by Sheerin gave them an opening for another run in the seventh and that was the extent of the damage they did to Olson until the ninth inning.

German Press Hails King's Visit To Paris

BERLIN, July 26—(CP-Havas)—Proclaiming the British Sovereigns' visit to Paris as a new success for the London-Paris entente, the German Press to-da yappeared unanimous in editorial praise for the Anglo-French friendship.

The banner line on Berliner Tageblatt proclaimed "a new entente," while the Voelkischer Beobachter, Chancellor Hitler's organ, was headlined, "the success of Paris," with the Koelniche Zeitung heading its article, "inseparable Allies."

The newspapers all observed that the Royal visit has tightened the entente uniting the two peoples and strengthened French opinion.

All newspapers expressed hope that Anglo-French relations would contribute to the maintenance of world peace.

The Voelkischer Beobachter said: "Since the visit of the British Sovereigns we have expressed the hope that the event would contribute to a strengthening of the feeling of security in France and thus bring about appeasement in the political situation. The hope has been realized fully. The British visit to Paris should indeed be considered as progress.

Doesn't Want France Worried

"Germany, in fact, has no interest in seeing its western neighbor worried over insecurity or weakness. We can never repeat that sufficiently, inasmuch as an important section of French opinion continues to be obsessed with the insensate conception that the policy of the Reich is guided by the sole idea of weakening and isolating France."

The Berliner Tageblatt also said a feeling of security would develop from the strengthening of the entente and thus favorably affect French opinion.

A sympathetic analysis of the meaning and the scope of the Anglo-French entente was made by the Koelnische Zeitung.

Stressing the spontaneous enthusiasm with which the French population welcomes an alliance with Great Britain, the newspaper stressed that the two principal poles of attraction were the people and the French Army.

Kansas Serum Given To Save 25 Horses

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 26 (CP).—Serum was received today from Kansas City, Mo., and 25 horses were treated with it immediately to prevent further spread through the district of encephalomyelitis, a sleeping sickness which killed three horses during the week-end. The horses were on pasture and had been purchased recently.

The horses, located at Welland, Netherby and Allanburg, were on the farm 12 miles distant and died within 12 hours of diagnosis. The third horse died early today, and its brain will be sent to Ottawa for confirmation of diagnosis of encephalomyelitis.

Dr. H. R. Potter of Niagara Falls, who said the diagnosis of encephalomyelitis, was not definite, but probable, obtained serum from Kansas City through the assistance of Dr. R. H. McIntosh of Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. The 25 horses treated today with the serum were in contact with one of the three victims of the disease.

Eight Ohio Students Study Life In Canada

TORONTO, July 26.—Eight theological students of Bonebrake Theological Seminary, Dayton, Ohio, arrived in Toronto yesterday on their last lap of a three-weeks' "Travelling Seminar."

Purpose of the seminar is to acquaint the students with methods of 35 or 40 of the leading ministers of United States and Canada. Yesterday the party attended Old St. Andrew's Church, where they heard Rev. Dr. E. D. Jarvis of Wellington Street Church, Glasgow; and in the evening they heard Rev. Dr. F. E. England of Bexhill-on-Sea, at Metropolitan United Church. For two hours yesterday the group questioned Dr. Jarvis on methods employed by ministers in the Church of Scotland. Today they will hold a two-hour session with Dr. England, seeking to learn more of church life and a minister's work. The students were met yesterday by Frank Chamberlain, press representative of the United Church of Canada, and Rev. Robert Graham, assistant editor of the New Outlook.

Today the group plans to visit the offices of the United Church of Canada. They will leave for Niagara Falls tonight. During their tour the party has visited many coal mines, steel mills, woollen factories, country parishes in Maine, and city churches. In New York they studied for a while at Union Theological Seminary, visited Father Divine's mission and many of the largest New York churches.

Bonebrake Theological Seminary is the only theological seminary conducted by the Church of the United Brethren in Christ, for the theological training of its ministers.

Propose Settling Debt To U.S. By British Loan

LONDON, July 26 (CP-Havas)—A suggestion that Great Britain's war debts to the United States possibly would "be settled by the issue of a new British Government loan in New York" was made today in the Financial News.

The Financial News' editorial said:

"The case against the present position is overwhelming. The direct effect of our default—if default it can be called—is serious and significant.

"It means that at a time when political and economic co-operation between this country and the United States is more important than it has ever been before, Great Britain is debarred from raising further credits in New York.

"The importance of this from the military standpoint can hardly be overrated. Serious though this direct consequence is, however, it is hardly more serious than the indirect effects upon Anglo-American relations and the indirect effects upon our position as a world creditor nation.

"Admittedly there are practical difficulties in the way of a settlement. Until a trade agreement has been signed there can hardly be any war debt negotiations on any formal basis. It is doubtful whether the American Government would feel itself able to include such negotiations, even formally, with its trade negotiations.

A Short Wait

"This means that there must be an interval of time before negotiations can begin, although there is no reason why that interval should be very long.

"It would be necessary for some means to be devised which would avoid objections which the British Government raised when it suspended payment. Possibly the whole thing would be settled by issue of a New British Government loan in New York.

"Possibly the American Government could be induced to take a settlement, or part of it, in kind. British shipyards for example could build ships for the largely obsolete American Mechantile Marine. Such a plan would have the double benefit of settling the debt and of setting on foot a positive economic collaboration at the same time."

Millard Attends U.A.W.A. Trials

DETROIT, July 26 — (CP). — Charles Millard of Toronto and Oshawa, Canadian regional director of the United Automobile Workers of America, attended opening sessions to-day of the International Executive of the U.A.W.A. as the trials of four members of the executive, suspended on unannounced charges, began behind closed doors.

The 42-year-old war veteran represented more than 7,000 Canadian U.A.W.A. members on the International executive and the three-man Finance Committee of the Union. His rise in the union has been rapid since the tense days of April, 1937, when employees of the General Motors Company of Canada went on strike at Oshawa. Millard was president of the Oshawa local and chairman of the Strike Committee.

"Canadian locals will not be affected in any way by the result of these trials under way," Millard said. "The policy of the suspended members and the remainder of the executive of 24 is identical. Our membership campaign will start immediately after the conclusion of the trials." The four men were suspended by Homer Martin, union president.

Mr. Millard said he would summon representatives of each of the Canadian locals to a meeting in Toronto to launch the union organization drive soon after he leaves here. There are 53,000 unorganized automobile and automobile parts workers in Canada.

Think Third Try To Defeat Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, July 26—(AP).—Senator Vandenberg (Rep., Michigan) expressed the opinion to-day that President Roosevelt would seek a third term.

"I expect him to try," Vandenberg said, "but I do not expect him to succeed."

The statement was contained in a letter which the Senator wrote to a Michigan constituent and which was made public by a friend here.

In came in the midst of speculation over third term possibilities.

Government Frank Murphy of Michigan declared in a speech at Traverse City, Mich., yesterday that "We may have to draft the President for four more years of leadership."

John D. Hamilton, Republican national chairman, asserted last week that Harry Hopkins, Works Progress Administration head, actually had launched a third-term movement when he told reporters 90 per cent of those on relief were for the President.

Dead, Dog Put in Dump Comes Home Next Day

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., July 26.—(CP).—Speaking of cats and their nine lives, this town boasts a 15-year-old dog with at least two lives.

Hit by an automobile yesterday, the dog was given up as dead by its owner, D. Gray, and his children. The dog was placed on the car running board and taken to the town dump, while plans were made for its formal burial today.

While the Gray family was having breakfast today, a familiar thump-thump was heard on the back-door. That meant the old dog was ready for breakfast. He was.

Rebels Break At Gates Of Gandesa

Franco Stronghold On Verge Of Recapture

BARCELONA, July 27 — (CP-Havas) — Spanish Government troops today fought their way into streets on the outskirts of Gandesa, Insurgent stronghold in Southern Catalonia.

The vanguard of the Government army has swept down past the Ebro River in a smashing three-day drive engaged the Insurgents well inside the suburbs of Gandesa, Insurgent regional headquarters.

The militiamen pushed in after dislodging the enemy from the heights overlooking the town, 20 miles north of Tortosa. Four months ago Gandesa was the scene of a serious Government defeat.

Electrocardiograph Used At Accident

HAMILTON, Ont., July 27 (C.P.) —An innovation in lifesaving technique at the scene of an accident which, it is hoped, will remove all doubt as to whether life still exists in the subject and accurately guide operators of artificial resuscitation as to whether they should continue, was used for the first time yesterday in the dramatic attempt to save the life of Albert Luinge, 30, landscape gardener, who was electrocuted at Limestone Ridge.

When early efforts at resuscitation failed, Dr. J. H. Mullin, chief coroner and five other physicians who sped to the scene to assist, decided to summon Dr. Lloyd Williamson, who owns a portable electrocardiograph.

Two tests were made with the device to check the subject's heart condition and then Dr. Williamson raced back to the city to develop the record. Both readings were negative.

"They established pretty definitely that death probably occurred instantly," said Chief Coroner Mullin. "One reading was taken an hour after the accident and the second a half hour later. I believe it is the first time an electrocardiograph has been used at the scene of such an accident."

In yesterday's case, the operators worked without respite for almost three hours.

Marriages In Canada Jump Over 12 P.C. But Births Stationary

Ottawa, July 27.

AN INCREASE of 8½ per cent. in the number of deaths in Canada during June compared to June, 1937, was recorded by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in a report issued today. There was virtually no change in the number of births and an increase of 12½ per cent. in marriages.

The report, covering sixty-seven cities and towns in Canada, with a population of 10,00 or over, showed there were 7,227 births registered, compared to 7,218 in June last year; 4,122 deaths compared to 4,150 and 5,089 marriages compared to 4,521.

LONDON, July 27.—(CP).—Great Britains territorial army, the country's second line of defence in the event of war, is at approximately 93 per cent of full strength. It stands according to latest figures at 185,006 all ranks, against an authorized establishment of 201,707.

Anti-aircraft units, whose task would be to protect Britain from air raids in the event of war, show the fastest increase in strength. The first anti-aircraft division, which includes the London area, is 91.2 percent. of its establishment and has doubled its strength in 12 months.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, war secretary, announced recently in the House of Commons a sweeping development program or the atni-aircraft division. In future there will be five of these divisions instead of two as at present. Strength of all ranks will be increased from 43,000 to 100,000. Production of the new 3.7 inch gun will be accelerated. The three-inch gun will be rapidly renovated and provided with a new type of shell to make it more efficient.

Using the existing type of ammunition, the three-ich gun throws its shell to a vertical height of 20,000 feet. The new ammunition will give it a greater range and will also suply a better burst, thus increasing the danger to attacking aircraft.

If anrplanes were compelled to fly at a height of 20,000 feet or over to avoid being hit, there would be little chance for accurate bombing of objectives. But actually the gun is seldom fired vertically but usually at an angle.

The new 3.7-inch gun is on the "secret list" but is adapted especialy for rapid loading and firing. It is believed its vertical range exceeds 40,000 feet.

Chamberlain Draws Nazi Praise

Berlin Is Reserved However Upon Czech Mediation

BERLIN, July 27—(CP-Havas)—Nazi newspapers to-day praised Prime Minister Chamberlain for having told the House of Commons that agreement between Germany and Great Britain is not impossible.

At the same time most newspapers remained reserved as to the possibility of solving the Czechoslovak problem through the good offices of Viscount Runicman, former President of the British Board of Trade.

Under a headline reading, "British Prime Minister Affirms That An Anglo-German Accord Is Not Impossible," The Voelischer Beobachter, official organ of the Nazi party, said:

"Chamberlain refuses to peddle the fable of irreducible opposition between the two countries. This optimistic note is not new with a man who has always refused to share the war psychosis. His statements regarding Czechoslovakia were prudent and reserved."

Saying that "The wise words spoken by Chamberlain on Anglo-German relations will be much remarked upon in Germany," The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung revived the suggestion that Britain should recognize Germany as the great Continental power, while Germany would resognize Britain as the great naval power.

The Czech Plan.

Store Is Robbed At Roseneath

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ROSENEATH, July 27.—L. E. Down's general store was broken into on Tuesday when a cash box containing $700 in currency and cheques was stolen. It is thought the robbery occurred sometime in the early hours of the afternoon.

A summer resident at Minnetonka Park, Rice Lake, was arrested soon after the robbery on a vagrancy charge and lodged in the Cobourg jail. When arrested he had a large sum of money on his person.

Maples Stand Gaunt As In Winter Snipped Bare By Green Army; Farmers Helpless and Mystified

A creeping, crawling green army, systematically destroying all foliage in its path, is advancing ruthlessly across a hundred acres or more of hardwood bush in Cavan Township. Already it has stripped 15 acres on the farm of Edwin Moore, Eighth Line farmer, and has spread to bushes of four neighbors.

Leaving trees as barren of leaves as on a mid-winter day, the worms are steadily advancing, leaving a wide swath of bare branches in their wake. On Tuesday an Examiner reporter stood in the middle of Edwin Moore's bush and heard the vast army at its work. It was the sound of a million clocks all ticking in one room—an eerie, methodical noise. Half-eaten leaves floated to the ground as if in autumn. Worms tumbled in hundreds from the trees. Clustered about the bottoms of trees were millions upon millions of the destroyers. It was all even a seasoned newsman could do to halt below a tree to snap pictures of the worms while others dropped by dozens in his hair, on his arms, down his shirt.

The Saddled Prominent.

The Entomological Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa has identified the worm that is attacking trees on the property of Cavan farmers, G. M. Linton of the Forestry Department at Orono, said to-day.

"There larvae are those of the "Saddled Prominent" Heterocampa Guttivittawalk, the letter from Ottawa stated. "This species feeds on beech and maples and often other hardwoods. Occasionally it may produce outbreaks and in these it is abundant in several localities this year.

"With regard to control: Spraying with lead arsenate is the correct procedure, four pounds to 100 gallons of water being the ratio. This measure will have to be applied immediately as the larvae are now about to leave the trees and prepare to pupate. We are rearing your specimens out to get some data on parasitism in this species. Normally natural enemies and parasites keep this species in check and outbreaks are confined to a period of one or two years. The trees, being deciduous, will normally withstand defoliation for so short a period."

Mr. Summers advised immediate spraying of fences, posts, and the ground along the edges of woods already infected, as a means of combatting the spread of the worms. He said he had told Mr. Moore to take such steps when he visited the farm on Sunday. No such precautions were taken.

The research man doubted that the trees infected will die. "It does not look like a fatal attack," he said. But he warned that steps should be taken immediately to prevent spread of the attack.

The worms have as yet operated only over a two or three-mile radius. But there would appear to be nothing to prevent their spread further. Edwin Moore's bush, where they were first noticed, lies about two miles south and west of the village of Cavan, on the Eighth Line of Cavan. About it are hundreds upon hundreds of acres of good hardwood bush, with a few acres of grain land separating them. Already the worms have invaded bush owned by four men other than Mr. Moore. They are reported to be at work on the hardwood trees of George Bothwell, Bill Douglas, Ira Gillis and Harry Argue.

Species a Mystery.

Sunday, A. E. Summers, Durham County agricultural representative, was notified at his home at Bowmanville, and went to the Moore farm to examine the worms, with G. M. Linton of the Forestry Department at Orono. He said they were not the dread army worm, but was unable to tell their species,

Man Debates 11 Hrs On Ledge Before Jumping To Death

By John Ferris
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, July 27 (A.P.). — Those who saw John Ward go to his death wondered to-day what queer obstinacy and indecision kept him waiting, perilously poised, for nearly 11 hours on a narrow ledge 17 storeys above the street before he plunged.

In all that time he had kept thousands waiting in morbid suspense, thousands who watched him from the street, from bus tops, from windows and the roofs of nearby buildings—a tiny bit of a man in a white shirt, who drank incerdible quantities of water through the long summer afternoon while police cajoled him, in vain attempts to dissuade him from thoughts of suicide.

With the coming of night he had become a pale blur as darkness crept up the limestone walls of the Hotel Gotham, a blur sometimes

Prairies Give Manion Full Support

Scores Well-To-Do For Too Much Self-Complacency

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 27.—(CP).—Conservative Leader R. J. Manion left for Ottawa to-day after 36 hours among the scenes of his boyhood and after receiving assurances of full support from Conservatives of Western Canada and Northwestern Ontario.

Before leaving, however, Dr. Manion in a public address condemned self-complacency and reaction as the chief dangers of democracy.

"I believe there is too much complacency among our well-to-do people," he said. "Great wealth in the hands of a few and poverty and want for the many cannot but lead to discontent and perhaps a revolution."

Unless the present system was adjusted in such a way that it would provide opportunity for youth and work and wages for the masses of the people, it was doubtful if it would endure another 20 years. With it would probably go the cherished freedom and rights of democracy.

Rebuked By Rich Man.

After uttering these sentiments in Toronto, he said, he had been rebuked by a wealthy man who told him he had been talking like a crazy man and a communist. That type of rich man was a greater danger to the present system than any communist.

Goldsmith's lines in the Deserted Village:

"Ill fares the land to hastening ill
a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and

were applicable to the modern world, he added.

The task of Canadians in a troubled world was to maintain the free institutions of their country and do all possible to establish social justice within its borders. This involved fair and stabilized prices for the farmers and work with adequate wages for the urban dwellers.

Among those who pledged their support to the new leader were Murdock A. MacPherson, runner-up in the leadership contest at the National Conservative convention in Ottawa three weeks ago, and Errick Willis, Conservative leader in Manitoba.

Killed By Train

SUDBURY, Ont., July 27—(CP).—Fred Powell of Renfrew, Ont., was killed early to-day 60 miles west of Cartier as he tried to jump off a Canadian Pacific Railway train and fell between two cars.

A companion, Randolph May, also of Renfrew, was riding the train with Powell and stayed at Roberts with the body.

24-Hour Gun Battle Ends As Farmer Fires Cabin, Perishes

Jonesboro, Ark., July 27.

WILLIAM A. (Buddy) Patton, 51-year-old avid reader of Wild Western Stories who frequently indulged in pistol practice, chose death in his flaming log cabin home to capture by a posse he had held at bay 24 hours with gunfire.

Furnishing a spectacular climax to a siege in which more than 1,000 shots were exchanged, he set fire to his five-room dwelling last night and perished while more then a score of officers and citizens looked on helplessly.

Sheriff Tom Lane said the once prosperous farmer opened fire when he and his aides approached the log cabin in which he lived alone.

Doctor Is Bailed At $10,000 On Drunk Driving

CHATHAM, Ont., July 27 (CP).—Walker de Haven, 60, Indianapolis, whose legs were broken and who suffered internal injuries when a car driven by Dr. J. Walter Coulter of Chatham smashed into him and another man near a parked car on Thames Street last night, died today in the public general hospital. A. C. Fenton, 72, Indianapolis, suffered a fractured ankle.

Dr. Coulter today was charged before Magistrate Arnold in police court with drunk driving and manslaughter. He pleaded not guilty and was remanded for a week. He was released on bail of $10,000.

De Haven and Fenton were talking with three friends in their parked car just after they had stopped here on a homeward trip with the intention of going into a restaurant. Police allege Dr. Coulter failed to make the curve in the road, with the result that his coupe plowed into the parked car broadside and crushed the two men standing at the side.

Those in the parked car were Dudley Williston, John Service and Arthur Jordan of Indianapolis. All five men were returning after a fishing vacation at the French River.

Police Probe Starts In City Hall

3 Witnesses Deny Threat By Chief To "Get" Copping

With Judge G. E. Deroche of Belleville as referee, and Cecil G. Frost, K.C., of Lindsay, assisting in the presentation of evidence, a judicial inquiry was opened this morning in the city council chamber into charges by Joseph Wheeler, former constable, and The Peterborough Examiner, broadly relating to the administration of the police department by Chief Constable Samuel Newhall.

T. J. Carley, K.C., was present on behalf of Chief Newhall, and W. F. Huycke, K.C., city solicitor, briefly outlined the city council's position after City Clerk Armstrong had reviewed the correspondence preceding the council's decision to authorize an inquiry that would be thoroughly independent, and confined to the charges which had been made in writing.

As an explanatory preface, Judge Deroche said: "This is not a contest between The Peterborough Examiner and the Police Department, nor between Joseph Wheeler and the department. This is merely an inquiry as to certain charges and suggestions against the Police Department. Mr. Frost will elucidate the evidence by calling witnesses furnished to him by the interested parties. Mr. Frost is largely responsible for the conduct of it."

Mr. Frost first called S. R. Armstrong, city clerk, to verify the initiating correspondence on which the enquiry is based.

The Examiner's Case First.

Then he proposed that the complaint of H. L. Garner, managing director of The Peterborough Examiner, be dealt with "to get it out of the way." He pointed out that Mr. Garner's letter embodying his complaint was written on January 24 last, and it was not until July 4 that the council took steps to proceed with an inquiry. The cause of Mr. Garner's protest involved Chief Newhall and Keith Copping, former reporter, now of Calgary, in an incident in which it was alleged that

Horde Of Worms Sweeps Across Cavan With Sound Of Million Alarm Clocks Ticking

Millions upon millions of worms are advancing over a hundred-acre front through the bushland of Cavan township, ruthlessly destroying all foliage in their path. First observed in a 15-acre bush on Edwin Moore's farm, two miles southwest of Cavan, on Sunday, by yesterday the worms had attacked five bushes covering a hundred acres, and were showing no signs of slowing up. Department of Forestry men, who sent samples to Ottawa, said the worms are not dangerous, will not kill the trees themselves. All the trees in the entire area the worms have attacked have taken on a mid-winter appearance. Scarcely a leaf is to be found on any deciduous tree; only the evergreens retain their normal appearance. The worms have not attacked crops, have travelled through them to reach other woods. A steady shower of leaves falls to the ground all day and the sound of the worms at their destructive work is that of millions of alarm clocks all ticking at once. At LEFT is a portion of the bush on Mr. Moore's property, stripped of leaves. At RIGHT is a typical tree, millions of worms about its base ready for the assault. (Examiner Staff Photos.)

Sidley Probe Goes On Says Conant

Effort To Interfere With Inquest Will Be Blocked

TORONTO, July 27 — (CP). — Attorney-General G. D. Conant stood ready to-day to "resist to the utmost" a planned attempt by executors of the estate of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley to halt an inquest into the death of the Racine, Wis., woman here July 6. One protest already has failed.

Commenting briefly upon the action yesterday on behalf of the executors to obtain a court order prohibiting Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson from "taking any further proceedings," Mr. Conant said last night: "We will resist to the utmost any attempt to interfere with the coroners jurisdiction and his conduct of the Sidley case."

D. L. McCarthy, counsel for the Sidley executors, excepting a son, William Sidley, protested yesterday against the "prostitution" of inquest proceedings. He said his clients felt the inquest was begun "not for the purpose of ascertaining the cause of death, but for ulterior motives."

A notice of motion for a restraining court order was handed to Dr. Lawson. It asks that the coroner be prohibited from taking any further proceedings; that all material he may have at his disposal be sent to Osgoode Hall and that McCarthy be permitted to examine Dr. Lawson and Dr. Ray Farquharson, chief of the doctors attending Mrs. Sidley.

Morse Eliminated Canadian Golf

LONDON, Ont., July 27—(CP)—Sonny Morse, Chatham shotmaker, was eliminated from the Canadian Amateur Golf Championship here today when he was defeated 6 and 5 by Ted Adams, Columbia, Mo., in the second round.

Adams played sparkling golf to go six at the turn. Morse was away off the game he played in yesterday's first round, taking 41 on the first nine against Adams' 35. Adams ended the match on the 13th.

Black, considered one of the best of the Western Contingent to make a bid for the crown of Sandy Somerville, was away to a bad start and could never catch up. Wentworth, a professional Hockeyist with Montreal Maroons in the National League, played a sound game all the way.

Somerville had no trouble entering the third round with an 8 to 7 win over R. C. Storey of Saint John.

Sandy was out in 36, one over par. He took an extra stroke on the fourth but birdied the long sixth with a four. He was one over at the ninth.

In the beginning, fear had chilled the hearts of all who saw him. But fear had passed and speculative talk was exchanged, and sorry gibes, arguments, wisecracks.

Crowd Bets Against Leap.

And so a kind of perverted holiday spirit grew upon the crowd that watched him teeteering on his dizzy perch. There were overtones of cynicism. He wouldn't jump. Not by a long shot. Amateur psychologists debated the point. All agreed he wouldn't jump.

The police tried new means of saving him—hoisting up a cargo net they had borrowed from a ship—and then John Ward made his decision.

All the devices the police and fire department, could think of had failed. The appeals of his mother and his sister, the persuasive words of a priest and several pyschiatrists had gone for nothing.

Police and firemen and everybody else who tried to dissuade Ward from jumping didn't spare themselves. Police stood for hours on duty. Firemen waited with a safety net, which nobody expected would save Ward.

Ward, the Southampton police records show, tried to end his life on July 11, 1937, by cutting his throat with a knife. He recovered and was sent to the State Hospital in Long Island, released in November, he was given employment by Patrick A. Valentine, travel Agency Head.

Tried Suicide Week Ago

A week ago last Monday Ward jumped from a bridge at Hampton Bays, Long Island, and was rescued from the water by police. Valentine and his wife thought they could rouse Ward from his obvious despondency by taking him and his sister, Mrs. Katherine Bull, to Chicago for a visit.

The outing apparently was not successful, for Ward was depressed when they returned to New York on Monday.

They went to the Hotel Gotham. It was about noon yesterday when Ward scrambled through the window of his room, edged along the 18-inch shelf of stone and took a stand midway between two windows where he could lean against a rough curved projection.

Then began one of the most nervous and protracted watches New York ever has known.

The word that Ward, apparently bent on suicide, was getting ready to plunge was flashed to police headquarters. Four radio squad cars sped to 55th street. A fire truck followed. Behind it came a rescue squad wagon.

Street Is Tied Up.

A crowd quickly gathered. Sidewalks were jammed on both sides of the street. Crowds ceased swarming in Fifth avenue and stood motionless, waiting in dreadful anticipation.

People appeared on roofs of nearby buildings. Men and women stood against the brown Gothic walls of the Fifth avenue Presbyterian church, waiting.

High above the street Ward, toes on the edge of the ledge, looked down. Women glanced up and away. Many hurried on, fearful of the end they thought would come in a few minutes.

Ward lighted a cigarette—the first of dozens he was to smoke before death—blew the smoke in a big clowd, watched it for an instant and then looked down. The crowd thickened.

Word trickled downstairs that Wards sister and the Valentines were trying to get him to come into the hotel room. He shook his head.

Patrolman Charles Glasgow, a soft-spoken man, tried to coax Ward inside. Through all the afternoon and evening Glasgow was to try, tasting the innumerable glasses of water Ward drank to convince the man on the ledge the contents were harmless.

Psychiatrists tried; the sister renewed her pleadings. A young woman from a sales-talk agency tried to convince Ward he ought to come in. To all the pleadings he shook his head or answered he had nothing to live for.

His last words were spoken to Dr. G. C. Presner, a city health department physician who had talked with him frequently during the day.

A Life Worth Living

"He said he would come in if we could promise him that life was worth living," said Dr. Presner.

"He said he tried many ventures and failed and that many persons close to him were against him."

The youth's final words, the physician said, were:

"Ther's no way out of it. I have been up here many hours trying to convince myself of a reason for living. I've made up my mind."

Ward then glanced up a moment and at 10:36 p.m. EDT he calmly stepped off into space.

Dr. Presner said he did not believe the death leap resulted either from fear or shock.

"He had made his decision," he explained. "The poor fellow was irrational during the last half hour."

Windows Barred On Heiress Says Chauffeur

TORONTO, July 27.—While living at the home of W. Perkins Bull, K.C., the windows of the room where the wealthy heiress to the Horlick malted milk millions occupied had been barred, John Moore, one-time chauffeur to the Toronto historian and lawyer, told a crowded court room yesterday at the opening of the inquest into the death of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley.

Mrs. Sidley, too, had given him sixteen cheques, totalling $100,000, Moore said. One day in April of this year, the chauffeur testified, Mrs. Sidley had presented him with an undated cheque for $10,000. She later wrote the date in, Moore deposited the cheque, but the bank returned it marked non-sufficient funds, he declared.

This testimony was adduced before Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson, in the Coroner's Building yesterday afternoon, when Thomas Henry Bull, son of Bull, Sr., was the only other witness to be heard before adjournment was made until next Tuesday at 2 p.m. Bull Jr., said that he did not know the cause of Mrs. Sidley's death, but that the last time he saw her she was "greatly changed" since his previous visit.

Bars on Windows.

Mrs. Sidley of late had not been "mentally right," declared the chauffeur, citing instances he claimed supported his assertion. He said she mistook strangers for her son William, would try to kiss or shake hands with them.

Moore said she also had asked him frequently to give $5 and $10 bills to strangers in restaurants. He testified he had been instructed by Mr. Bull Sr. to watch that she did not throw any money away. The windows in Mrs. Sidley's bedroom in the Bull home had had bars on them, he said. When travelling with Mrs. Sidley and her personal maid, Mae Harris, Moore said he had been told by Mr. Bull to "hold the doors" so Mrs. Sidley could not wander through hotel corridors. He had removed the catches from the inside so she could not get out, as she would disturb other guests by knocking on their doors and asking if her son William were there, he stated.

new minorities statute published last night, would grant new concessions in school administration, government jobs and the use of languages—all within the framework of the Czecho-slovak government.

Local self government and the degree of its autonomy was to be dealt with later in another statute, and until that time it appeared here that a definite settlement was unlikely.

Premier Milan Hodza said the new statute was intended to be the basis for negotiating with the minorities—Hungarian, Polish, Slovak as well as German.

It was not at once clear how far the new statute went toward meeting the Sudeten German demands, outlined in a speech by Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten German party leader, on April 24. (German autonomy demands inspired Czechoslovak fears that Nazi Germany might take a forceful hand to aid Henlein. Recognizing the danger to European peace, Great Britain and France have urged arbitration.)

Police Probe

the Chief Constable had said he "would get" Copping.

Mr. Carley requested that several letters by Chief Newhall to the Police Commission referring to the incident be also put in as exhibits.

Mr. Garner informed the court that he had not altered his position as stated to the council, that The Examiner was not acting in the capacity of a prosecuting agent, and should not be required to pay the expense of having Keith Copping brought from Calgary to Peterborough. He was chiefly concerned, he said, about employees of The Examiner receiving from the Police Department the facilities by which they could properly serve the public.

He said that in his last letter to the council he had written that he was not withdrawing his charges. "but because of the marked improvement in co-operation by the police" he saw no need for carrying the protest any further.

Mr. Garner added that he had intended in that letter to place more emphasis on his concluding statement that he did not think the inquiry into the Examiner's protest need be pressed, largely because of the highly satisfactory relations that have existed for four months between the Examiner and the police department in obtaining the information to which the newspaper was entitled in its service to the community.

Chief Newhall Called

With no other witness to be called from that quarter, Mr. Carley suggested that Chief Newhall should be heard with two witnesses of the episode in the court house involving the Chief and Mr. Copping.

Chief Newhall testified that he was in the barristers' room at the court house at the conclusion of the trial of the Crown against Alex Welch on January 10, with Provincial Constable David Silvester, Bruce Menzies and Copping.

"I asked Copping why he had stated in evidence at the trial that there were three or four policemen in the grass near the Bonner-Worth factory," Chief Newhall said, referring to the McDonnel street labor clash last summer. "I told him I had great respect for his father but I had none for him after giving such evidence.

"You say I committed perjury?" Copping said to me. I told him I didn't think he knew the meaning of perjury. I mean the seriousness of it. I did not say he had committed perjury. Copping replied "I still think there were three men in the grass." J. L. Cohen, the Toronto lawyer, came rushing into the room and put his hand over Copping's face, and told him not to say anything more. As Copping went out the door he said "I'm even with you now."

Chief Denies Threat

Mr. Frost—Did you tell Copping that you would "get" him?

"I never use those words to any one. I didn't use them to Copping. If I had wanted to get him I could have got him a thousand times."

Mr. Frost—Mr. Garner says that for some months the Examiner has found a great improvement in its service from the police department?

Chief Newhall—I think the service is the same as it has always been. The Examiner now has a level-headed, experienced reporter, Fred Craig who goes about his business and doesn't interfere with prisoners trying to talk to them and get statements from them, and generally going where they have no right to be. I never give a reporter any information before a trial.

Mr. Frost—Mr. Garner's letter says you continued to abuse Copping outside the Court House?

Chief Newhall—I did not. When I got out in front of the Court House there were about ten men on the sidewalk, Copping, Cohen and others. I said "I suppose if you fellows were in court you would say you weren't blocking the sidewalk. Move on. Cohen started to walk fast down the sidewalk trying to make a joke out of it, but Copping stood there in a defiant manner. I never said anything to him but walked on to the police car.

Constable Silvester

Provincial Constable Silvester corroborated Chief Newhall's testimony, declaring that the Chief had not threatened "to get" Copping or accused him of perjury, in the barrister's room or elsewhere.

"When Cohen and Copping were going through the door into the court room, Cohen said to the Chief: "We've only started with you. We'll get you." That was the origin of the "get you" expression," Constable Silvester said. "The word perjury was used by Copping. He said in answer to the Chief 'I'm not perjuring myself for you or anyone else' when the Chief asked him how he could say there were four men in the grass."

Bruce Menzies declared that Chief Newhall had not used the words "get you, or "perjury" toward Copping.

Mr. Frost invited any other person in the crowded gallery who might have anything to say on this charge to come forward, but there was no response. He then turned to Mr. Garner and asked him if he wished to make any further comment.

Mr. Garner replied that his letter had set forth his feelings in regard to matters which he was led to believe were true. "I have no personal feeling," he said, "I simply want the facilities of news which a reporter should have. I looked on results only, and I am certainly able to say that there has been a much better job done on police news in recent months than before."

Mr. Huycke explained that the council had declined to assume the expense of bringing Keith Copping all the way from Calgary paying his salary and other costs.

Judge Deroche remarked that there was no other recourse but to dispose of the Examiner charge at that point and procesed with the Wheeler matters this afternoon.

The Wheeler Charges.

First of a list of charges by Joseph Wheeler alleged that Ross Payne's butcher shop at George and Perry Streets was broken into on October 1, 1937, "but could have been avoided as it was framed. Another declared that Fitzpatrick and Geraghty's grocery store at Aylmer and Hunter Streets was burglarized on November 6, 1937, by two youths, that Constables Piercy and Archie Menzies had been tipped off by Norman McIlmoyle, 297 Lewis Street, that the store was to be forcibly entered, and that it could have been avoided as it was framed."

Mr. Frost said that as Mr. Wheeler's seven charges were not amplified he purposed calling the former constable to enlarge upon his assertions, without cross-examination at that stage.

Joseph Wheeler said he was a member of the police department for 15 years up to December 27, 1937. He had served 4 years and 16 days with the Coldstream Guards during the war and came to Canada in 1921. At present he is unemployed.

Mr. Frost—Have you ever been in police court on any charge?

"Twice since I was discharged on a section of vagrancy. The first charge was dismissed and on the second I was fined $10 and costs."

Referring to the Payne's butcher shop robbery, Wheeler said he was charging Chief Constable Newhall with knowing there was going to be a break-in and could have prevented it.

"What's wrong with that?"

"What do you charge?"

"That the police could have stopped a break-in."

Wheeler implicated Constables Piercy and A. Menzies in having advance information from Norman McIlmoyle that the store was going to be broken in.

Mr. Carley—You use the word frame. Do you accuse the constables of being parties to it.

"Yes. They could have stopped it."

Wheeler made the same charge regarding the Fitzpatrick and Geraghty store robbing.

The Vincent Case

The third charge alleged that Chief Newhall and all the members of the police force knew Max Vincent to be a bootlegger and was not prosecuted as he should have been.

Wheeler also alleged that Chief Newhall allowed beer to be placed in the Long house on Murray street contrary to the Liquor Control Act the night of the police ball in October 1936, that the beer was a gift from beer agents named Lyons and Lee.

Another charge was in the form of a question: "Where does the beer and liquor go that was confiscated?" Wheeler said he had seen some of it go to Chief Newhall's house.

"Why was William Welch, 140 Douro street, allowed to buy a $2 dog tag when he should have paid $10 for a kennel license?" was another implication and Wheeler charged that the Chief permitted it because of friendship for Welch.

Mr. Wheeler agreed on his own volition to withdraw a charge relating to Constable Piercy's personal conduct.

He alleged that false evidence was aduced against him before the Police Commission.

"Why was Constable Clarke allowed to wire Max Vincent's house, 69 Park street?"

Mr. Frost— What's wrong with that?

No Other Work Allowed.

"He is not allowed to do other work while he is empolyed on the police force."

Judge Deroche— Would it have made any difference to you if it wasn't a bootleger's house?

Wheeler also said Chief Newhall had permitted Clarke to be engaged although he is 43 and the regulations require an age limit of 29.

CAMPBELLFORD

Mother and Son Are Arrested

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27.—Mrs. William Cassidy charged with theft from the mails was arrested at an early hour this morning by Provincial D. G. Campbell. She is alleged to have taken a parcel from the rural mail box at the home of John Duff, containing shoes and other items of wearing apparel.

Her son, Clifford, aged 17, was also arrested at 4 oclock this morning as he attempted to break into the store of T. J. Horkins of town. He also faces a forgery charge and it was on this latter count that he was taken into custody, although it is believed a charge of attempted robbery may be laid later.

Both were taken to Cobourg jail this afternoon and will come up for preliminary hearing on Thursday morning.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, July 27 (C.P.). — July wheat occupied the spotlight on the Winnipeg Market again today. The cash wheat option plunged farther below the 95 cent mark after being as high as $1.02 a bushel less than a week ago. The close found quotations on futures prices 1⅞ lower to ⅝ higher with the deferred months holding up well. July slumped to 93, October was quoted at 76¼c, December 75¾, and December 74⅜c.

Trade was practically at a standstill in the closing half of to-day's session. Export business was small, about 150,000 bushels including durums, believed for Germany.

July was under hedging pressure by elevator companies and suffered lack of support in its early downward plunge. The cash month option was 2⅞ to 3⅞ cents lower at the opening, but moved slightly higher as the session advanced.

Todd—Bothwell

MILLBROOK, July 27.—A quiet, but very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Bothwell, Seventh Line, Cavan, on Saturday at high noon, when their second daughter, Jean, became the bride of William Todd, of Frankford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Todd, of Millbrook, the Rev. H. R. Williams, B.A., officiating.

The ceremony was performed in the living-room, the bridal party standing before a background of flowers, white hydrangeas and roses being intertwined with feathery asparagras and ferns. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, looked lovely in a dainty gown of pale rose-pink sheer, with sash of turquoise blue taffeta, tied in front, brilliant clips at the neck line, matching necklet and bracelet, a coronet of roses worn in her hair, white kid sandals, and corsage of pink roses, bachelor buttons, pink sweet peas, and fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Mildred Bothwell, of Peterborough, wore pale blue sheer, trimmed with blue baby ribbon, accessories of white, and a corsage of flowers similar to that worn by her sister, the bride. Mr. Allen Wood, of Millbrook, supported the groom.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held, and the guests, who included only immediate members of both families, sat down to a full course dinner, the bride's younger sister, Miss Flossie Bothwell, and Miss Jean Todd, sister of the groom, looking after the service of the meal.

The bridal table was centred with the three-story wedding cake, and was done in a color scheme of pink and white carried out in the fluted streamers from the large white wedding bell overhead, pink candles in silver holders, and in other details. Later, amid showers of confetti, Mr. and Mrs. Todd left on their honeymoon to Muskoka and other points north, the bride choosing for travelling a tailored suit of navy blue linen, with cross stitch, hand-done embroidery, white blouse, hat, and other accessories.

Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Todd will reside in Frankford where the groom has a position with the Ontario Hydro Commission. The young couple were the recipients of a large number of beautiful gifts, including the contents of two showers given the bride, one by her aunt, Mrs. James Johnston, of Peterborough, and the other by the congregation of Grace Presbyterian church, Millbrook.

Collingwood—Patstone

At a ceremony performed in St. Paul's Church, Newmarket, last week-end, Dora Lucy Muriel Patstone was united in marriage to Lorne Harrison Collingwood. The bride is a graduate of Havergal College. She has been for some time Dominion Secretary of the Anglican Young People's Association in the Toronto office. Mr. Collingwood is a graduate of the University of Toronto, and is now on the staff of the Peterborough Collegiate. Rev. Arthur J. Patstone, father of the bride, officiated. As the bride entered the church the ladies of the choir sang Albert Ham's setting of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Cyril Patstone, and wore a white taffeta gown, fingertip veil arranged with headdress of white carnations, and carried a bouquet of red roses. She was attended by her sister, Mavora, who wore a pale blue sheer frock trimmed with pink, a pink picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas.

The groomsman was Loftus Buckley, and the ushers were Ronald Patstone and Harold Patterson.

A reception was held on the rectory lawn, where Mrs. Patstone received in a gown of mauve georgette with white accessories and corsage of mauve sweet peas. She was assisted by the groom's mother in a navy blue sheer gown with corsage of pink sweet peas.

Later the couple left on their wedding trip, the bride going away in a grey tropical cloth suit. Mr. and Mrs. Collingwood will live in Peterborough.

Fashions

A darling little striped cotton percale dirndl play dress, buttons cunningly down the back in pinafore styling. Brief matching pantees, and a matching peasant scarf tied about the head, make it a complete outfit. For cooler days, daughter will be thrilled to wear the crisp contrasting white blouse of sheer cotton. Dainty self-ruffling makes a pretty finish for the Peter Pan collar and for the cuffs of the puffed-up sleeves. Mummy will find it so simple to sew and will run up several outfits; one in a peasant print and perhaps one in sprigged dimity or a solid colored chambray. Simple to launder, too, as it opens out almost flat. The ne-piece pantees have elastic at the waist.

Style No. 2101 is designed for sizes 4, 6, 8, and 10 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 39-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting for scarf and jumper; 1 yard of 39-inch material and 1½ yards of ruffling for blouse, and 1 yard of 35-inch material for the pantees.

Hilda Ashenhurst Is Married In Goodwood

Goodwood United Church, decorated with baskets of summer flowers and fern, was the setting for a wedding on Saturday at three o'clock when Hilda Elizabeth, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Ashenhurst, Goodwood, Ont., became the bride of John Bruce Bailey, only son of Mr. John Bellay, Epsom, Ont.

Rev. J. Robeson, uncle of the groom, officiated. The wedding music was played by Miss Edna Faskett of Goodwood, and the soloist was Miss Alma Baker of Stouffville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a graceful floor-length gown of pink silk net over satin, with deep border at hem and bolero of imported French cut taffeta, pink satin slippers and pink elbow-length mittens. Her fingertip veil of illusion and lace was arranged in halo style and caught with a tiny wreath of pink rosebuds, and she carried a cascade bouquet of Briarcliff roses, baby's breath, and maidenhair fern, and wore a silver necklace, the gift of the groom.

Miss Laura Ashenhurst, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a floor-length gown of turquoise blue lace with deep insertions of silk net over pink satin, matching blue halo hat with shoulder veil and pink elbow-length mittens. She carried an arm bouquet of gladioli and maidenhair fern.

Malcolm Tucker of Apsley attended the groom and ushers were Reedy Ashenhurst and Lloyd Ashenhurst of Toronto, cousins of the bride.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, and tea assistants were Miss Kathleen Beelby, cousin of the bride, Miss Florence Feasby, Miss Madalene Cook, and Miss Blanche Todd.

The bride's mother received in a navy sheer dress over printed crepe with matching hat, and wore a shoulder corsage of mauve sweet peas and fern. Mrs. J. Robeson, aunt of the groom, also received, wearing printed chiffon with matching hat and shoulder corsage of mauve sweet peas and fern.

Later the happy couple left for a motor trip to Ottawa and points east, the bride travelling in a frock of navy sheer with white trimmings, white three-quarter length coat, and large navy and white felt hat. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Bailey will live in Epsom.

Showers Refreshing In Warm Weather

The girl who is determined to look and be pretty comfortable most of the time in spite of summer's hot weather, takes a lukewarm bath every night before going to bed (no matter how late it is) a shower with the water at body temperature every morning and, during the day, as many medium cool showers as she can manage.

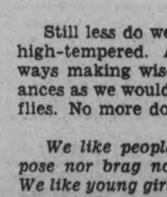
DOROTHY DIX

Be Simple and Natural, Cultivate a Spirit of Humor, Avoid Being Critical, Be a Good Listener and You Will Always Have Friends and Be Welcome Everywhere

WHAT is the secret of popularity? Nobody knows. We can say it is personality, but that is answering one riddle with another. It is just that some people have what it takes and others lack it, but what this mysterious power is that makes one attract us and the other repulse us we cannot tell.



Certainly it is not our virtues that make us popular. We may be respected because of them, but they do not make people love us or desire to be with us. All of us know men and women who possess every attribute that we abstractly admire—who are intelligent, well bred, moral and upright, good and kind, yet whose companionship we avoid as if they had the plague. And we know other men and women who are wastrels and wantons, deadbeats and borrowers, whose society we seek and whose faults we condone because, for some reason we cannot explain, we like them.

Now, while no one has succeeded in isolating and identifying the germ of popularity, there are certain qualities in people that make them persona grata with us. One of these is cheerfulness. We like gay people, people whose laughter is hung on a hair-trigger, people who grin at life and who make a rollicking adventure of the daily grind of work. We like to be with people who pep us up with their own high spirits, who make us forget our cares and worries and send us away with a smile on our lips.

Conversely, the melancholy are unpopular because they depress us. They add their own burden of woe to our own and take every bit of heart and courage out of us. Nobody's idea of spending a pleasant evening consists of being salted down in tears or having to listen to a hard-luck tale.

We like amiable, good-natured people. We like people who are not too critical or hard to please, and who are easy to get along with. We like people who are adaptable, who fit into any picture and who always make the best of every situation.

Life is too short and we all have too much to do to bother with those who have to be handled with gloves and who are always getting peeved over some imaginary slight. Nor do we feel called upon to burn incense before some one whose vanity must be continually appeased by flattery, nor are we humble enough to make way for the one who is determined to rule.

Still less do we like the grouches and the grumps or the high-tempered. And we avoid the sarcastic who are always making wisecracks at the expense of their acquaintances as we would a venomous snake. Vinegar never catches flies. No more does a sour disposition make friends.

We like people who are simple and natural, who don't pose nor brag nor pretend to be something they are not. We like young girls and boys who ARE young and enthusiastic and filled with interest over everything that is so new to them in this old world. We like motherly old ladies who are full of talk about their children. We like famous men and women who take their honors humbly and don't talk about their achievements. We like rich people who are not purse-proud and who never mention money.

But we abhor young boys and girls who affect to be sophisticated and hard-boiled and who talk about how drunk they got last night. We loathe old women who are painted and dressed like flappers. We despise high-hat celebrities who can talk about nothing but themselves, and we go miles to avoid spending an evening with new millionaires who boast about their possessions.

We like people who can give and take in conversation and who don't grab the floor and keep it. Nobody wants to listen to a monologist but once. Each of us loves the sound of his own voice and wants to have his little say and tell his own pet story. The one recipe for popularity that never fails is to be a good listener and to get the party of the other part started out on his hobby instead of discoursing about your own.

DEAR MISS DIX—Is it safe and in good taste for parents to permit their 16-year-old daughter to go to public dance halls unaccompanied, or am I, the father, not modern enough? Is a 14-year-old girl considered sufficient as a chaperon to the above 15-year-old?

PARENT NEEDING ADVICE.

ANSWER:

No. Emphatically no to both questions. It is not safe or in good taste for any girl to go to the public dance hall without having some responsible older person go with her and look after her, because naturally in a public dance hall there are many men who are highly undesirable acquaintances for any young girl. A 14-year-old girl is no chaperon at all, because she knows even less about taking care of herself than the elder girl.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"I find the greatest thing in the world is, not so much where we stand as in what direction we are heading. To reach the port of heaven we must sail sometimes with the wind and sometimes against it, but, we must sail and not drift—nor lie at anchor."
—O. W. Holmes.

Dear friends:

So many want to go places and do things with their lives but they lie at anchor, they do not get out and buffet the waves on the sea of life, but hug the harbor of home, the comfort of an easy chair. They do not live, they drift back and forth, moved only by the ripples caused by the craft of other people's lives in motion.

There are those too, who claim they stand pat, they cannot be budged, their opinions are all wrapped up and filed away. They forget that all life is changeable, and we need flexibility if we are to get anywhere.

You cannot live a full life and expect to escape any disagreeableness, any more than you can expect to go on a sea journey and avoid storms. And each and every experience makes life so much more interesting.

I remember once when I was crossing the ocean, a big storm came up which made the ship dig her nose deep down into the water, which naturally made the afterpart go away up in the air. I had been below, and was coming up the companionway, and just as I came to the top, she dug her nose down again.

This caused quite a decided slant to the deck, and caused me to run in the general direction of the rail towards the front. It was so steep that I cold not help myself, I had to run. I could hear loud cries, hear running feet, but my mind was all on preventing myself from shooting overboard.

The captain and engineer asked why I had crouched as I neared the rail, and I said it was the natural thing to do. Afraid? No I cannot say I was, it was just another experience of the trip, something to talk over and remember.

And, it is the natural thing to do when you get out and face life, when you hold your head up in the face of possible disaster, or crouch and reach for the rail. Oh yes, it is always there if you look for it and know where it is.

And now is as good a time to tell you as any other. I have just had another prayer of mine answered, a very important one too, yet on every side it did not seem possible to get it. I had used up my own resources, and then I left it up to God, and He did not fail me.

So, know where you are heading. Don't let yourself be anchored by doubt, of God, of yourself, of your friends, or your circumstances. Get yourself out of the drydock of indecision, clear off the barnacles of doubt in your abilities.

Have faith in your captain, He knows the route, but He cannot guide you safely over it unless you set sail, or get steam up. That is your part, because it is your life. Not God's life, not your neighbor's, not anyone else's in the world but yours.

And it is your responsibility as to how the outcome of the journey will be, for due to false ideas of where you want to go, you may try to persuade your Captain to take the wrong route, and so pile up on the the rocks of total wreck.

Oh yes, sometimes we demand what is not good for us, and when we get it, blame it on God. More later.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Win Fame for Yourself in a Story Contest

How did demure Eve Brown win a story contest? Eve knows if you want to write, you can. Learn a trick or two, plunge in.

Think not of fussy plots, but of an incident in your life—your goodby to the man you didn't marry. Describe his quirks of character that made you say "no."

One successful writer wrote a short story about a refused proposal. She made the climax a visit to a dove-house, described the feelings of the girl, when, eager for love, she saw how ludicrously her solemn suitor resembled the bowing birds.

Use vivid incidents to bring out the point of your story, but keep it real, make your reader feel it 'might have been."

Find Women Heirs In Another Land

CAPE TOWN, July 27—(CP).—Two women in Greece, Anastasis Campouroglou and Sevaste Sophianniou, have been declared heirs to the £60,000 ($295,200) fortune left by Panayiotis Vafidis, a miser who died in circumstances of abject poverty here last year.

Vafidis died without leaving a will. When his wealth was discovered the Supreme Court appointed the South African Association to act as executor of the estate. It advertised in Greek newspapers for their heirs of this rich man who had lived as a hermit. Eight groups of claimants to the fortune came forward.

The Supreme Court was asked to decide on the validity of these claims. The two women, they held, had been proved nieces of Vafidis and they dismissed the claims of the other groups of claimants but suspended operation of the order for a period to enabel any new claimant to present their claims.

In order that the favored claimants should not be left without means in the meantime, the master was authorized to advance them funds from the estate, providing security for the return of the money was offered.

Timber Worm Arrives

While a good many farmers have been watching for an attack of the army worm some form of timber worm arrived on the Eighth Line of Cavan township. The worms attacked the wood land on the farm of Edwin Moore, showing a preference for the maples first and then turning to the pine trees. When these worms strip the trees they do so thoroughly, leaving them as barren as a deciduous tree becomes in late fall and winter. Instead of shade in that bush today the sun is shining in through the naked branches.

A member of the Examiner staff visiting the woods to secure pictures said it was not any exaggeration to say the worms were there in millions. Trunks of trees were alive with them and on the ground they were in heaps. The noise in the woods was like the ticking of numberless alarm clocks; a sound which was uncanny and plainly suggestive of the attack which was under way.

The mystery at the moment is the origin of the attack. It was unheralded and unannounced and yet the worms had the numerical strength to start and succeed in stripping a bush.

Identification of such worms is not an easy matter. One thinks immediately of the saw-fly which wrought such havoc in our pine a few years ago especially in Quebec, but the saw-fly is not fond of maple trees. The treatment would be the same as in the case of the saw-fly, spraying with arsenate of lead, but that again to be effective would call for a spraying outfit of considerable range and there are few of them in the district.

When such an outbreak occurs it is a matter of general concern as well as of the immediate concern of the man whose premises are being attacked. We say it is a matter of general concern because if the invasion is not halted then the worms will be at liberty to proceed elsewhere. At central points throughout the province there should be placed outfits capable of handling any such outbreak because the individual would seldom have such equipment nor would he know where to turn to get it, and apart from that the expense would be too much for him to be expected to bear.

What Hitler Wants

Premier Chamberlain of Great Britain is trying a hand at settling the difficulty between Germany and Czechoslovakia, and has asked Viscount Runciman, former president of the Board of Trade, to proceed to Prague to make observations. It all has to do with what is frequently referred to as the Sudeten district in Czechoslovakia where the German population for the most part lives. The proposal is that the Germans shall come under a form of rule which would be separate and apart from that applied to other people in the country. That is the project which Hitler has in view and it is something which the people of Czechoslovakia for good and sufficient reasons are opposing.

One solution would be for Czechoslovakia to tell the dissatisfied Germans to return to their own land, but there are powerful enough obstacles in the way of so simple a solution. There are some 9,000,000 Czechoslovaks in the country and there are also three and a half million Germans. On top of that the Germans are fully aware that they have the backing of Hitler in their desire for a form of self-government. The situation is not pleasant from any angle. Having one rule for the German population, which would undoubtedly be directed from Berlin, and another form of government for the rest of the people in Czechoslovakia would be establishing a form of management which would be tantamount to deliberately providing for future outbreaks.

To what extent Premier Chamberlain can enter such a situation and seek to bring Germany and Czechoslovakia to terms of understanding is something which Britain itself cannot understand. None of the smaller nations in the Balkans will agree to it because if Hitler is able to swing that sort of a bargain then none of them will have reason to feel safe.

No Dog To Bark

Three armed men robbed John McBrien, a farmer who lives two miles from Orangeville, and found $300 in bank notes in the house. They rapped at the door about 10 in the evening and Mr. McBrien let them in, and once in they tied up the farmer and also his two hired men, after which they ransacked the home.

Such a thing is not apt to happen in many places because there are few occasions on which the average farmer has much actual cash in his home. If he happens to sell hogs or beef he is likely to leave the cash in the bank where he deals. Mr. McBrien is referred to in the reports as a wealthy farmer and it is likely the robbers had certain knowledge he kept money in the house. It is an isolated case and the custom is certain not to become general.

The thing would be comparatively easy because Mr. McBrien would not suspect anything was up when he answered the door. Farmers as a rule do not live in the atmosphere where they believe something may be wrong when they hear some person at the door after dark. The one thing which seems missing in the story from Orangeville is that nothing is said about a dog barking. Most farms have dogs and most farm dogs know enough to bark at night.

Prices Are Confusing

It is not difficult to feel confused after reading quotations from the farm markets of the province as recorded at any given weekend. The spread in the prices quoted is so great it does not make sense.

Beef hindquarters at 7 to 8 cents in Ottawa and 12 to 18 cents in St. Thomas on the same day indicates that Ottawa was not paying enough or St. Thomas was paying too much; if not that, then one has to conclude that Ottawa was being served with hindquarters from animals which were passing from old age and general infirmity.

In Brantford the barley market was given at 45 cents, while in Guelph it was from 55 to 60 and the two places are not so many miles apart. The low price for eggs at several places was:

Guelph	25	Niagara Falls	30
St. Catharines	32	Woodstock	22

The high price for eggs was given as:

Brantford	24	Hamilton	35
Niagara	38	St. Catharines	40

It is also difficult to reconcile a price of $12 for baled hay at Ottawa with a figure of $7 for the same thing at Stratford.

Two points in the Western section of the province provide such wide figures for spring lamb that one is left wondering whether they are actually referring to the same article. Both St. Thomas and Woodstock have the same quotation, 15 to 25 cents, but Brantford says 35 cents. There are good roads between these three points and it does look as though the person with spring lamb for sale would be doing well to enter the selling space which surrounds the rather ancient city hall in Brantford.

St. Thomas was paying 30 to 35 cents per bushel for oats. Ottawa (where wheat prices at least are pegged for the Dominion) was quoting 60 to 65 cents; St. Thomas cut the Ottawa price in half at 30 to 35 cents. The problem of the Canadian Wheat Board can perhaps be better understood after reading that Woodstock quoted 60 to 65 cents for wheat, while Kingston is credited as having attained the dollar mark.

In school days there used to be problems to work based on the premise that a farmer went to town to sell his produce and after that started to do some shopping. The basis of that old school problem still exists, but when the farmers went to buy their groceries they would find prices almost on the same standardized level. It might well be that the individual who sold spring lamb for 35 cents per pound in Brantford would be shopping in a store bearing the same name and with the same prices as the person who had sold spring lamb for 15 to 25 cents per pound in St. Thomas or Woodstock, and the farmer who had sold eggs for 40 cents in St. Catharines could do a good deal more purchasing than the one who had received 24 cents in Brantford.

At best the whole situation is confusing. The farmer is buying in a fairly uniform market but if the figures quoted bear any resemblance to truth then he is doing his selling in markets which appear to be pretty much on the hit and miss pattern.

Seeing His Own Son

Count Haugwitz-Reventlow, referred to now as the estranged husband of the former Barbara Hutton, American heiress, remains in London. His wife lives there but they are not seeing each other.

One report says that the husband is allowed to see his son Lance, and he stated to a London newspaper: "He is a most attractive boy and meeting him is a real joy."

But what a way to live! Certainly the father would find joy in seeing his own son; if he didn't he wouldn't be worth his salt. But he sees him just now and then. He is not home when the father returns from his day's work for the sufficient reason that the father doesn't do a day's work. The lad will never be down at the corner waiting for him after he hears the whistles blow. He can have a short visit with his own son just now and then.

Well that may be the method of living for those who marry into the class of many millions of dollars, but for the ordinary red-blooded man it would be a miserable sort of existence—or no existence at all.

Modern Garbage Method

Always there are complaints about garbage containers being left along some of our streets. Natural enough, as the average garbage can would hardly qualify as a thing of beauty. Even a real good one looks much better when it is standing out of sight.

One Peterborough resident was explaining today a system which he noticed in operation in Manchester. In the English city each householder is supplied by the corporation with two regulation-size containers. When the garbage is collected the full container slides into one compartment of the wagon and an empty one is left at the house. The collecting wagon is so made that it accommodates just a certain number of these containers, and the one which has been left at the house has been cleansed and sterilized by the department. Handling the garbage at the disposal plant is much easier and faster by having the containers on hand.

The initial cost of such a system would be fairly heavy, but it is regarded as one of the most complete methods in operation.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Hon. Bob Manion has taken over the helm of the Conservative ship but up to the present at least there have been few changes in the crew.

It is said that the secret of John D. Rockefeller's long life is that he had learned to relax. But then of course he could afford to relax.

It is claimed that a man sat on a flag pole in Toronto longer than had ever been done before. The answer to that seems to be: "Well, what if he did?"

Instead of it costing from $100 to $200 to learn to fly in England it can now be done for $10, and that has probably been achieved by cutting down the overhead.

Eddie Shore, Boston hockey player, saved three persons from drowning. That, however, will not save him from being booed every time he plays away from home next winter.

Single unemployed in East York are demonstrating as a protest against being left without food. At the same time farmers are complaining they are being left without help.

A man from London district was in court the other day for using car markers of the year 1936. We can't see where he gained much as the court took $14 from him.

Hamilton police loked five days for a man reported drowned, at the end of which time he was found locked up in jail serving a term for being drunk. Evidently the man had been soaked but was not drowned.

William Macdonald, a farmer in Nova Scotia, had a spell of coughing and up came a tooth which he had been carrying about in his lung since 1934. Not every person could do that because so few people have teeth in their lungs.

Toronto man suggests there should be wooden speed cops made to place at dangerous places along the highways. Somehow we have more faith in the other kind—the chaps who can pick the foolish driver out and call him over to the side of the road.

Colored girl in New York admitted in court she was "partly guilty" to a charge of stealing 80 pieces of silver and linen, and court did not know how to regard the plea. Then she explained she had stolen 47 of them which makes her plea seem right enough.

One preacher used his time on Sunday to preach a sermon telling men not to play golf to the exclusion of home and family life, of religion and friendships. And that seems to indicate it is not very difficult after all for a man to select something about which to preach a sermon.

A motor car went through the floor of a bridge near Matheson, and a police officer was killed. Then it was that residents said the bridge had been badly in need of repair for some time. Knowledge of that sort may be interesting but it leaves the officer just where he was—dead.

The head of a dog has been sent to Toronto for examination. The dog had bitten several people who were given hospital treatment. At times we hear a good deal about mad dogs but the expert at the government laboratory says "There has been only one case of rabies diagnosed in Ontario in the last seven years."

TOUGH DAYS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When fishing's on it's not much fun, to be a worm, a wiggling one, it's much like tempting fate; for worms the fishing people look, so they can string them on a hook, and use them all for bait.

¶ Nor is it safe yet after dark, a worm can't step out for a lark, the search grows keener then; and if instead of being in bed, a worm shoves up and shows its head, it wiggles not again.

¶ It's not fun being a little frog, and sitting quietly on a log, just watching for a fly; for fishermen are on the hunt, they come up softly in a punt, and then it's plain good-by.

¶ So frogs and minnows and the worms, will hail the time the season turns, perhaps some thanks they'll give; when comes the season of the year, when for them all the ways are clear—and they can move and live.

When the Bear Was Worth $25

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

SEBRINGVILLE, Jacob Ney, who will be 91 years of age in September believes the automobile to be the most wonderful invention of mankind.

In an interview with the writer, this well-known life-long resident of Perth County, now enjoying the twilight of his life, said he did not hesitate in selecting the automobile as a thing which has proven more beneficial than any other invention.

"But they've got to drive carefully or there will be trouble," he commented. Mr. Ney looks back to the year 1901 when he visited Buffalo, N. Y., and saw the first horseless carriage. He admitted he never dreamed at that time that cars would be as common as they are today and that there would be the many great changes.

Each day Mr. Ney watches the never-ending string of cars literally sail past on No. 8 Highway and sometimes his thoughts travel backwards to the days when along that same road everyone travelled by horse or on foot.

Mr. Ney is a big man, standing just about six feet and at one time tipped the scales at 220 pounds. His life has been a life of hard work on the farm, retiring some years ago to make his home with his son, Edward.

Born in Fullarton Township, Mr. Ney is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Ney, pioneer settlers who came to this country back in 1832 and hewed a home for themselves in the bushland of Fullarton. The farm was located on Lot 5, concession 5, and the parents came to this country from France.

MR. NEY RECALLS interesting incidents of his boyhood years. When a lad of four he was lost in the thick bushes and it was only because of his companion, his dog, that he was found.

Wolves and bears were common sights in those days. One morning when he was on has way to school, Mr. Ney recalled, he saw a black bear which apparently had been chasing hogs. That was one of the chief problems of the early settlers, protecting their livestock from bears and wolves which roamed at large and when hungry were bold about the farmyard.

Mr. Ney recalled that one of the neighbors once had built what he considered a strong trap for a bear. The government at that time paid $25 a head for a bear providing it had not been slain with a rifle. This neighbor caught a bear all right and when he went to slaughter it with an axe the bear broke down the barricade, gave one wide sweep with a forepaw, knocked the axe from the farmer's hand and beat a hasty retreat into the bush.

This pioneer resident has watched this district grow and develop. He remembers when Stratford was a village or a town of mud streets and frame houses and when there were taverns scattered all along the road.

Asked for his opinion of young people today, Mr. Ney smiled and said "I'm afraid they are travelling a little too fast, but there isn't much we can do about it." He recalled that young men years ago would work for $100 or $125 a year and their board and would get along fine, but he believes young men today want too much.

INITIALS, PLEASE.

(Fergus news-Record)

THERE ARE CERTAIN rules on all papers, worked out through long experience, to which most items must be made to conform. For instance, you may have said that "Rev. Smith was the chief speaker." Most editors wouldn't allow that to go unchanged. You might be surprised to know how long one might hunt around just trying to find out whether it was "the Rev. William Smith" or "the Rev. Robert Smith." Even in the case where it is not clergymen who are mentioned and where plain "Mr. Smith" would be quite grammatically correct, yet the readers of the newspapers would like to know whether the man referred to was Willie Smith (now William, of course) who used to go to school at S. S. No. 6, or who was the son of old Ebenezer Smith who lived over on the seventh.

SERIOUS SITUATION.

(Seaforth Expositor)

IT IS REPORTED that traffic officers on highway 8 and 21 report that of hundreds of automobile headlights tested on Saturday night last, 90 per cent. were out of focus.

If that is true, it puts the travelling public in a very serious situation. Any one who does much night driving is well aware of that fact. In fact it is not too much to say that a large proportion of the accidents which occur on our highways at night could be directly traced to defective car lighting.

FRIEND OF BRITAIN.

(Niagara Falls Review)

OWEN WISTER, who died at North Kingston, Rhode Island, not only was a noted author, but he was a real friend of the British Empire. In his "The Ancient Grudge" Wister set his fellow-countrymen right on many of the facts of history. He assailed the practice, once prevalent in some quarters across the line, of painting Britain as a country always anxious to do harm to the United States. Wister showed how often John Bull had stood back of the United States, giving physical as well as moral support in many instances. Undoubtedly Mr. Wister did much to improve the relations between the two great branches of the English-speaking world. For that alone he deserves the respect of peace-lovers everywhere.

• 400 Men Drifting In A Boat

(New York Times)

FOR SEVERAL WEEKS 400 refugees from the Austrian Burgenland have been drifting about in a barge on the Danube. Although they are within sight of three frontiers they can neither go back to the country from which they were driven out nor land at any foreign port. People without a country, human flotsam adrift on an international stream, they symbolize with dramatic literalness the urgency of the problem discussed during the past week by the inter-governmental conference at Evian.

It cannot be said that the conference solved the problem. It did not find a landing place for the thousands of refugees cast upon the world by the policy of the German Government. Except by a few Central and South American States, no doors were thrown open to the involuntary exiles whose fate must now be determined by nations other than their own. All the delegates professed a sincere desire to do what they could, but none offered to relax the quotas and restrictions that every country has put on immigration.

Nevertheless, the conference accomplished all that it could have been expected to do. If the difficulties of the problem were overemphasized, the outcome of a frank and unemotional discussion of the question was the setting up of a permanent committee charged to begin practical work August 3 in London on a long-program to assist the emigrants forced out of Germany.

The terms of reference of this continuing organization indicate that a good many points of difference have been compromised during the sessions. The American, British and French Governments agreed to the plan proposed by Mr. Myron C. Taylor. The new committee, though divorced from the League, will "cooperate fully with existing services" for handling refugees. Its first task will be to negotiate with the German Government and to deal with actual and potential refugees from Germany, but a resolution to "continue and develop the work" satisfies the American desire that eventually it shall extend to all refugees.

A beginning has been made. At the direct instance of the United States a new body has been created to deal with a new world problem. How quickly it can move to meet a great human emergency, how much this and other countries can be induced to sacrifice to this end. The next few weeks will reveal. It can only be repeated that if the great and small democracies that have set their hands to this comparatively simple task cannot unite to accomplish it, then there is no hope that they can co-operate in anything. In a special sense it is up to the United States, which has taken a generous initiative, to set an example of prompt and generous action.

• Home Is A Dangerous Place

HOME, THE PLACE where you are treated the best, and grumble the most, is one of the most dangerous places on earth. A large life-insurance company reported that the risk from injury at home is about seven times greater than when riding on buses, taxicabs, boats, trains and other public conveyances. In the United States the automobile kills only about six per cent. more people than meet their death through accidents in the home. Slippery rugs on polished floors kill 17 times as many householders as electricity. Forty-four per cent. of injuries in the home are from falls, such as falling downstairs, or from teetering chairs or tables. The average stair fall is said to cost $132 in doctors' bills, while from chairs and tables instead of using a good step-ladder, is $303. In the United States alone about 120,000 people are injured each year from slipping in the bath. Accidents don't happen—they are committed, and for this reason most of them are preventable, unless due to another person's blundering.

In view of the above facts, is it any wonder that some people seek recreation in other places to escape the dangers that lurk within their own domiciles? A large number of "don'ts" have been published to lesson the risk of accidents in the home, but most people don't pay much attention to dont's. Here's a few of paramount importance:

Don't use gasoline in the home even for cleaning.

Don't take medicine in the dark.

Don't patch electric cords—get new ones.

Don't handle electric fixtures with wet hands.

Don't stand in a bath and turn off electric light or heater, unless you have made your will,—and then don't.

Don't argue with your wife or husband when it's 90 in the shade. Wait till the mercury drops to 60.

• Why Should Fees Be So High?

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

PROSECUTIONS AND convictions under the Weights and Measures Act last fiscal year were substantially fewer than in preceeding years, at 239 and 213, respectively. As the number om inspections throughout the Dominion is about the same from year to year, it would appear that instances of short weight or unjust scales are becoming fewer. The totals were given by Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce, in the House of Commons the other day along with the information that there were 144 prosecutions for short weight, 89 for the use of unjust scales and six under other sections. Ten cases were dismissed, eight withdrawn and eight were pending at end of the year.

The House did not show much interest upon this occasion in the annual vote for the inspection service. It amounted to $439,325, and the minister remarked: "We more than got it back; there is a surplus." That has been the case for many years, and as actual cost of the service is less than $300,000, a tidy sum goes into the treasury by way of profit. This $439,325 collected from merchants and others is necessarily included in the overhead costs which they add to the price of consumers' goods and paid accordingly by the general public. Thus approximately $300,000 is contributed by the public to pay for pratection in respect of correct weights and measures, and about $140,000 is a straight tax of which they know nothing and which is imposed for no apparent reason. Why should the government year after year collect excessive inspection fees?

"A MAN TOLD ME."

(Innisfail (Alta.) Province)

ADDRESSING a Social Credit meeting in Blackie recently, Premier Aberhart said: "A man told me, that in Edmonton 40 per cent. of the people have lost their homes because of non-payment of taxes."

Earlier he stated: "A man told me, that in Regina the city collects more money from the rent of confiscated homes than they do from taxes. I don't know how true it is but a man told me."

We would suggest to Premier Aberhart that before going about the country spreading stories of this kind he would be well advised to investigate the truth of them. In fact it is his duty to investigate.

The people have had sufficient of this "A man told me" government and it is time we were getting something more practical.

A lot of legislation passed is of the "A man told me" type and has cost Alberta plenty to prove that the man was telling fairy tales, as is proven by the decision of courts of Canada and the Empire.

Acting in a drama in a small provincial theatre, the hero had to spring from some rocks into a "river" at the back of the stage. During one performance the mattress on which he usually fell was missing, and he crashed to the boards. He was equal to the occasion, however. Jumping up quickly, he exclaimed: "Aha! So the river has frozen over."

Award Prizes To Students At Lakefield

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, July 27.—The second annual summer vacation school held by St .Paul's church, Lakefield, in their parish hall, came to a close on Saturday, when the occasion was marked by a program and prize-giving in the morning and a picinc at South Beach in the afternoon.

The morning's program was carried out in the parish hall which was filled to capacity with visitors, parents and pupils of the vacation schcol.

Father Garvey acted as chairman for the program of recitations and hymns which was given by the pupils. Immediately following the program, Father Malane presented the following prizes, which were won at the vacation school.

Junior Division:

Class A, For Prayers—First prize, Barbara Hamblin, Mary Elizabeth Hamblin, ties; second prize, Dorothy Armstrong.

Class B, For Prayers—First prize, Hughie Davidson; second prize, June Wannamaker.

Senior Division:

Best Student (girls)—1 Betty Hill, 2 Evelyn Spencer; (boys) 1 Stafford Hill, 2 Billy Delledonne.

Most Orderly Pupils— Patricia Coughlin, Theresa Spencer, Joe Sabatino.

Following the distribution of prizes, Father Garvey thanked the teachers, Miss Mary Armstrong and Mr. Wilfred Pluard. Kathleen Coughlin then rose and moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Pluard for what he had done during the past two years for the vacation school, and to wish him the best of luck for the future in the work he had chosen. (This is the last time Mr. Pluard will teach at the Lakefield school.) Carl Hill seconded Miss Coughlin's motion of appreciation.

Much surprised, Mr. Pluard rose to thank the pupils for their kind wishes. "It had been a real pleasure to teach you," he said, "and the only way I can express the regret I feel at leaving is to say that I shall miss you when school time comes around next year."

Mr. Pluard then announced a picnic to be held in the afternoon at South Beach. The class closed with a hymn.

In the afternoon the pupils gathered at Father Garvey's and left from there, via automobiles kindly loaned by parishioners, for the picnic at South Beach, where a most enjoyable afternoon was spent.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

Everyone in the whole house was happy except Alphonse. Now Alphonse, you must know, was a goldfish. He lived in a little oblong tank which stood in the table near the sunny window in the children's playroom.

Everyone who saw Alphonse's tank or aquarium, said: "My! What a beautiful home for a goldfish! He must be very happy indeed!"

But whenever Alphonse heard anyone say that, he always opened his mouth as wide as he could and shouted at the top of his goldfish voice: "No!..No! I'm not happy at all! I don't like my home. It's too small for me!"

But the only ones in the house who ever heard Alphonse's complaints were Knarf and Hanid, the shadows of the two children. But they didn't know what they could do to help him.

Still Unhappy.

Once Hanid leaned down close to the glass side of the aquarium and called in to Alphonse: "Don't be unhappy, Alphonse. One of these days the children will take you down to the pond."

But instead of feeling happy about this, Alphonse only sighed. "They'll never take me out of this little tank," he said.

Then finally one morning before the children arose to play outdoors, Knarf and Hanid crept down softly into the playroom to see whether Alphonse was any happier than he was the day before. Imagine their surprise and alarm to find him trying to splash himself out of the aquarium.

"Alphonse! You mustn't jump out! You mustn't!" Hanid cried, darting up to the aquarium.

"But I must get out of this tank. I must! I can't live here another minute. It's summer and the sun is shining and everybody else is happy doing what they like and I want to go somewhere else. I don't want to stay here any longer!"

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

CHAPTER 1

WAS JULIAN coming or not? It was the question Noel Shayne was asking herself as she sat on the moon-lighted terrace in a new and exquisite dinner gown of gold tulle.

She was hoping Julian would come for a few minutes anyway, if only to say goodby.

Suddenly, Noel heard the butler making his slow, ponderous way to the terrace. As he drew nearer, she drew a quick, excited breath. "Tell Doctor Paige, I'm on the terrace, Matkin, she called out in her sweet, clear voice.

"Begging your pardon, Miss Noel," Matkin began, "it's long-distance from your uncle. He wants to know if he can see you tomorrow."

Noel thought rapidly Her trunks were gone She and Frankie, her aunt, had all their plans made to leave tomorrow for California, and to go from there in a few weeks to Paris. But Noel was glad of an excuse to remain over another day. "Tell Uncle Petes I'll wait," she instructed the buttler.

After Matkin had gone, Noel crossed the terrace and seated herself on the balustrade. The night was beautiful. A playful breeze sprang up and fanned her temples, bringing with it the haunting fragrance of lilacs. A young April moon threw a delicate glow over the sleeping gardens.

Noel sighed. She had waited for Julian over an hour Never before in all her spoiled, luxurious life had she waited for any man. Why hadn't she gone on to the dance at the Planters with her friends?,

The old grandfather clock in the library suddenly began droning the hour of 10. Then Noel heard Julian's pleasant voice, "Is Miss Shayne at home, Matkin?"

Before the butler finished answering Noel had crossed the terrace and stood at the low French windows of the drawing room.

Julian was standing before a pastoral scene by Corot. She stood in the windows gazing at his tall, erect figure, his broad shoulders, and well-modeled dark head. All at once Noel knew that something had happened to her almost with the first moment of their meeting, something that all the years of her life would never undo. Julian Paige was the man in whom her destiny lay, as fixed, as unalterable as the stars in the blue orbit of heaven.

Suddenly he turned. Their eyes met. "It was charming of you to wait," he said, his eyes holding hers with their warm, dark gaze.

She stepped into the room, drinking in happily the quiet strength of his sun-browned face, "Cocktail?" she asked.

"Perhaps you would prefer milk?" she teased.

Noel gave Matkin an order for milk and sandwiches The butler's face seemed to twitch ever so slightly as he left the room and Julian laughed. "You gave him a shock, asking for milk. He'll probably bring it in a champagne bottle."

"I thought you might have forgotten your dinner again," Noel said accusingly.

"I did," he admitted. And added: "Or maybe it was lunch I forgot."

Julian did not answer for a moment, but sat there looking about the long, comfortable room, the handsome rugs, the grand piano holding an immense brass jar of yellow roses, the brocade chairs, the white marble mantel over which there was a large oil painting of a gray-haired man with strong shrewd features.

Matkin appeared with a silver tray which he placed on the crystal-topped table at Julain's side. When he had disappeared, Julian's eyes met Noel's. "And you are a devastatingly lovely young woman, Miss Noel Shayne."

"Is that what you're holding against me?" she asked with a teasing smile.

"Do you think any man could hold anything against you?" he countered, his eyes taking in admiringly the eager vivacity of her young face, the gleaming ivory of her shouders, the little rounded chin with its dimple and tiny hint of stubborness.

She bore his admiring gaze with a faint smile. "Perhaps you don't care for my type?"

His eyes turnd to the Corot. "Quite the contrary. I admire a girl like you, much as one admires a painting like that, always lovely and inspiring in—in the proper setting."

"But only in the proper setting?" she qnuestioned.

"It took three generations to make you the exquisite product you are, isn't it enough that your beauty has the proper frame and always will have?"

She regarded him thoughtfully. "You know a lot about the people who made this town. my grandfather and some of the other pioneers, don't you?"

Julian took a cigaret from a Japanese lacquer box, lighted one for her and then one for himself. "I ought to," she said at last. "I was born here, on the 'wrong side of the tracks,' as the saying goes." Then he laid down his cigaret. "Shall we go dancing? I imagine the night-spots are getting warmed up by now."

She shook her head. 'I'd rather talk. There are some questions I'd like to ask you."

Julian's expression grew suddenly guarded, but he said, "Go ahead. I'll answer."

Noel drew a quick breath and plunged, "I want to know why you dislike me? Why you refused my invitation to dinner?"

His eyes widened. "Don't you know it's only a defense mechanism?" There was a teasing smile in his eyes.

"That isn't the reason," she contended.

He met her eyes seriously this time. "No it isn't The truth is I haven't the slightest intention of letting myself fall in love with you."

Noel's heart was suddenly throbbing high in her throat. "Would that be such—a dreadful thing to happen?" she tried to ask lightly.

"For me, yes." His voice had a dreadful note of finality.

"Please tell me why?"

"The answer should be obvious," he began slowly. "We met purely by accident. Just because a friend of mine who happened to be a friend of yours insisted that I attend one of her parties, which ordinarily I abhor. This one was different of course," he went on with a smile, "because I met you. But that doesn't alter the fact that we belong in different worlds." His dark eyes rested upon her unhappily as he went on. "You play and I work. Marriages between people as different as you and I nearly always end in divorce. That's a risk I can't afford to take."

Noel turned pale, and then a flush swept her face. "You think because I've always lived to please myself that I'm a sort of selfish parasite. That I've never developed stamina. That if the slightest thing went wrong with my marriage, that I'd fly off to Reno?"

"It's only that you've never had to compromise, or struggle for anything," Julian said gently. "There's no reason why you should."

"I think there is, Noel said gravely, and then added, "I think also that I can prove you're wrong."

Mexican Oil Grab Seen Blow To U.S.

WASHINGTON, July 27. — (AP). —Senator Pittman (Dem.-Nevada) said to-day he believed that the course of the United States' world trade must be affected profoundly by the controversy with Mexico over propety seizures.

Mr. Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations committee, said the United States could not permit the situation to go unchallenged because it would tend to "weaken, if not destroy, the rights of our citizens under treaties of amity and commerce throughout the world."

For that reason, Pittman said, he regarded a note on the land seizures from Cordell Hull, State Secretary, as not only a warning to Mexico, but a notice to all other governments that this country will not permit confiscation of American-owned property abroad.

Farm land owned by United States' citizens, Hull note said, has been taken over by the Mexican government since 1927. Hull emphasized the principle that there should be no expropriation of property without immediate payment of compensataion to the own.

Failure to maintain his principle in Mexico's seizure of oil and farm properties belonging to American citizens, Pittman said, would make such holdings the prey of unscrupulous governments in all portions of the world. The result would be severe crippling of this country's world trade.

For Thursday, July 28

A rather disruptive influence is read from the dominant planetary configurations, with much of vital importance concerned with the breaking away of long stagnant and crystallized conditions. And while there are signs of some progress and advancement, with sudden change and fresh opportunities, yet there are stubborn obstacles as well as dangers of loss through speculative ventures to be hurdled.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those who birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a difficult and conflicting year, in which there may be promising openings but many obstacles and impediments to cope with. It is a period of breaking away from congestions and unproductive situations, for reorganizing and planning anew for future success, but go slow in speculation and untried projects.

A child born on this day may be industrious, tenacious, plodding and, at the same time, adventurous and fond of change. It may have a tendency for "show" and unconventional and careless habits, particularly in money matters.

FAIRVIEW

Fairview young people enjoyed a very pleasant weekend when they motored to Haliburton last Saturday afternoon and presented their play, "A Perplexing Situation," and several other musical numbers and readings at a raspberry social which was held at "Lockland," Haliburton. They were entertained by Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Miller at their summer home at Ingoldsby Saturday evening and Sunday.

Those who enjoyed the splendid outing were: Misses Anne Franks, Greta Reynolds, Ferne Armstrong, Olive Bell, Dorothy Tully, Wilma Armstrong and Eleanor Rosborough, also Messrs. Central Ontario Rye, Wheat, Barley Heavy

TORONTO, July 27—(CP).—Fall wheat has been cut in most parts of the province, the Ontario Department of Agriculture announced today in its weekly crop report. Rust injury is evident in some sections, the report adds.

Only the odd serious injury to Bruse county crops due to army worms is reported. In Grey county nearly all the haying has been completed, and 70 per cent. of wheat has been cut. Halton reported late oats in many sections "will be light owing to the drought." Rust has ruined prospects of good wheat crops in many parts of Wellington county.

Lincoln county reported that "bountiful rains during the last few days have improved pastures," and a better than average corn crop is expected. Heavy rains have been "hard on standing grain" in Welland county, where wheat is not expected to average 30 bushels to the acre. Weather has been dry, however, in Lambton county and pastures there require rain.

Hastings, Northumberland, Ontario, York and Peterborough counties reported wheat, rye and barley nearly all cut with promise of excellent crops. Prince Edward county "is harvesting the largest crop of raspberries in years."

Rain is needed badly in Prescott and Russell counties to improve pastures. A grasshopper outbreak is "well in hand," and although a few army worm outbreaks have been reported none were believed serious. Hot, dry weather has ripened grain quickly in Grenville, while in Lennox and Addington "tomatoes have made wonderful headway."

U.K. Business Good Except On Mining

MONCTON, N.B., July 27.—(CP)—With the exception of the mining industry, business in the United Kingdom is good and there is even a shortage of skilled labor, H. P. Duchemin, K.C., publisher of the Sydney, N.S., Post-Record and president of The Canadian Press said here Monday.

He was on his way to Sydney from London where he represented The Canadian Press and The Canadian Daily Newspaper Association at the Privy Council's hearing of the Alberta appeals against disallowance of the Alberta press bill by the federal government.

Mr Duchemin said he had heard very little talk in England and as far as he had ascertained the general opinion was that there was no immediate danger of a general European war.

In the London office of the Canadian Press, Mr. Ducemin said, Canada had an efficient news-gathering bureau.

Lewis Play Sellout In Debut As Actor

COHASSET, Mass., July 27. — (AP).—Sinclair Lewis' debut as an actor in one of his own plays has put the standing room only sign on the door of Cohasset's summer theatre.

It was a new triumph for the Nobel prize winning novelist who chose the role of the small town Vermont editor in "It Can't Happen Here" for his initial appearance last night as a professional actor. The town hall was packed, applause was generous and the critics were kind.

The week's sellout made it likely that the novelist actor would play a return engagement later in the season.

Actor Lewis was not bothered with the jitters but remembered his lines and played his part convincingly. Director Alexander Dean praised his performance.

In a curtain speech, Lewis, who as Editor Doremus Jessup is swallowed up by rising Fascists, told his audience that it was up to them, through vigilance over their liberties, to see that it couldn't happen here.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27.—The Seymour West Women's Institute plan to hold a picnic at Crow River bridge on July 27 in place of the Field Day which had to be postponed due to the rain on Thursday afternoon. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Macoun and Mrs. Fred McCulloch presided. The treasurer's report was read and disclosed the branch finances to be in a very thriving condition.

The president extended her thanks to all of the members who had aided in making the lawn social a success and commented on their excellent co-operation. It was decided to join the Canadian Tuberculosis Association.

All members were requested to bring thrift exhibits for the Institute Section of the Agricultural Fair to the home of Mrs. Allen Lewis where the September meeting is being held. During the program, Mrs. H. Clark gave a report of the District Annual at Smithfield followed by an instructive demonstration of clothes closet accessories by two young members of the Tidy Tildies Club, Misses Irene Curle and Margaret McCulloch. Lunch was served by Mrs. Ray McCulloch, Misses Fae Kelly, Yvonne Waters, Barbara Rowe, Betty Clark and Jean Macoun. Mrs. Raymond Free poured tea.

Tarzan Answers Call

TORONTO, July 27 (CP).—An unidentified boy who stood under a tree and called "Tarzan, Tarzan," last night captured a pet monkey that had escaped from its cage before a service station in suburban Scarborough. The monkey, the boy said, just came down from the tree where it was hiding and perched on his shoulder.

The Pet escaped yesterday and easily avoided humane society employees who sought to capture it with a net. The boy heard the chase and stationed himself in a wooded section and called the monkey by name until it responded.

Windows Barred

John Moore, 754 Howland Avenue, stocky little chauffeur with a broad Scottish accent, was the first of two witnesses to take the stand. Without any hesitation througout his lengthy questioning, he told the story of events which had happened during a little less than a year in the service of William Perkins Bull.

"What were your duties?" asked C. P. Hope, Crown Counsel.

"I was employed to act as chauffeur and to do other odd jobs about the household."

'When did you first see Mrs. Sidley?"

"The first day on the job."

"Where was her room?"

"Were you ever in this room?"

"Yes."

'Can you tell us anything about the window of this room?"

"There were bars on the window."

"Did you ever have anything to do with any of these windows?"

"Yes. I received instructions to fix one of the windows so that it could not be raised any more than a few inches."

Moore was then asked whether he had taken Mrs. Sidley out very often and on whose instructions he had acted.

"I took her out quite often on the instructiins of Mr. Bull," he replied.

Said Mentally Ill

"Can you tell us anything about the physical condition of Mrs. Sidley?"

"I thought...well, it seemed that she wasn't mentally all right."

"Why?"

"Well, for one thing, she would come out to the stoop and wave her handkerchief at people passing by."

"Did it occur to you that she might have known these people?"

"She could hardly have known all the people she waved at."

"Did you make any other observations concerning her mental condition?"

"Yes. She often mistook people for her son."

"By that you mean William Sidley."

"Yes. She would walk up to them and shake hands with them, and sometimes try to kiss them. She would also sometimes ask: 'Don't you know me? I am your mother'."

"When did you first notice this?"

"The first time I took her out in the car. I sometimes had difficulty in keeping her from shaking hands with people."

"Did you notice anything else?"

"She always wanted to be around Mr. Bull."

"How did you know that?"

"Well, sometimes she bothered him."

"Bothered him? How;"

"Well, he had a lot of work to do, writing and such, and she would go over to him and put her hands on him. That's why I did so much driving with Mrs. Sidley."

"Who would accompany Mrs. Sidley?"

"Mae Harris, her special maid."

"Did you make any observations during these trips?"

Wanted to Turn.

"She very often wanted me to keep turning the car around. Sometimes she would keep me going around and around the block. She always objected to be travelling more than twenty miles an hour. On long trips, if we travelled at that rate we wouldn't be able to reach our destination on the same day, so I sometimes placed paper over the speedometer.

"Sometimes she would want to turn back after we started off on a trip. When she did this, I would drive into a service station facing back the way in which we came. Then we would go into a restaurant or some such place and when we returned I would ask her if she still wanted to turn back. If she did, I would turn the car around and continue on the journey. I usually managed to get away with that."

"Did you do anything with the car that you wouldn't do for an ordinary passenger?"

"Yes. I took the handles off the inside of the doors because she very often wanted to get out downtown in the middle of an intersection when we stopped for traffic lights. I took the handles off the windows, too. Sometimes, when we stopped, she would start rapping on the windows and occasionally she would attract the attention of a passer-by, who would come over and open the door. Then I would have quite a time getting her back in again."

Moore testified he had driven Mrs. Sidley to Montreal, Ottawa, Pointau-Baril and other destinations in company with her personal maid.

On a trip to North Bay last September, he said, he had had considerable difficulty with Mrs. Sidley, who wanted to wander through the corridors of the hotel. Moore said she disturbed other guests by knocking on doors and inquiring if her son, William Sidley, were there.

"Did you do anything to prevent her from getting out and bothering other guests?" asked Mr. Hope.

"Yes. On trips after that I was supposed to hold her door."

Removed Latches

"Who told you to hold her door?"

"Mr. Perkins Bull," answered Moore, adding that he had also removed the latches from the inside to prevent her from leaving.

"What instructions did Mr. Bull give you with respect to driving Mrs. Sidley?"

Moore replied he was told to be careful with her and was instructed as to when he should leave and return.

"Mr. Bull governed the time at which you were to go and come back?"

"Yes."

"What was the effect of these drives on Mrs. Sidley?"

Moore said she had "stood them" fairly well up until last Christmas, after which time she seemed to tire and weaken.

"After March she got so she couldn't stand long drives at all," he added.

"Did you ever see any money transactions Mrs. Sidley had?"

"At restaurants Mrs. Sidley would often open her bag and give me a $5 or $10 bill to hand some stranger." Moore said in such cases he always tried afterward to obtain the money back.

"Very often she has given me money," he asserted.

"Under what circumstances?"

"For no reason at all. She didn't talk much." Mrs. Sidley's former chauffeur said the $10 bills she often gave him decreased after last Christmas, because then "she didn't have so much to handle."

"Did you have any instructions with respect to Mrs. Sidley's money?"

Moore testified that Perkins Bull Sr. once called him in to his study and questioned him about how she handled her money.

Told to Watch

"I told him I often gave strangers money when she asked me to, but always tried to get it back after. He told me to watch that she didn't throw any away."

"Did you notice any cheque transactions?"

"Yes. Once I got a cheque for $10,000. This," he paused in consideration, "must have been around the end of April this year."

"Where were you at the time?"

"In the car."

"She carried cheque forms in her bag?"

"No; I gave her the cheque."

"What bank was it for?"

"The Dominion Bank. The branch at Yonge and Hayden."

The cheque was then sent to Mrs. Sidley's bank and came back unaccepted.

"It was marked with something like not sufficient funds," Moore explained. "It wasn't that exactly, but something like it."

The cheque had been handed over to "Mrs. Sidley's representatives," said Moore.

"Did you have any other cheque transacting with Mrs. Sidley?"

"About sixteen in all."

"How much would they be fore?"

After some consideration, Moore estimated they would total more than $100,000.

"Were they all given under the same circumstances?"

"Yes, just the same."

Some time after he had first met Mrs. Sidley, he noticed she often acted as though she didn't know where she was, said Moore.

"We would be driving along a country road and she would point to a factory chimney and say "There's the Horlick Malted Milk factory."

Later in the questioning Moore said that he had been warned by Mr. Bull and Mr. Cassan (Mr. Bull's secretary) not to take Mrs. Sidley across the border on any of their trips out of town.

CAMPBELLFORD
U.S. Mills Affect Canada's Industry

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27.—Canada's paper industry is going to be seriously affected by the fast growing pulp industry in the South, according to Carl Cohen. Speaking before Rotarians here on Monday Mr. Cohen, who resides in Albany, Georgia, and is holidaying with relatives in Campbellford, discussed conditions general in the southern states and claimed that the newly developed system of making news print from the southern pine would prove to be the salvation of many southern farmers. Five mills are already operating and using the southern pine which comes to maturity in about twelve years. The big interest will spend approximately fifty million during the present year in building plants that cost anywhere from three to five million dollars, he stated.

"The southern farmer is generally considered to be a lazy fellow," continued Mr. Cohen, "but of course he can be forgiven for this since the terrific heat makes working during the majority of hot summer days a really arduous task. He generally works from three to four hours a day and during the cotton season the hours may be stretched out a bit longer."

One transition of recent years has been the changing from cotton to mixed farming. This was one of the results of the depression since when cotton hit the bottom many tried other crops such as walnuts, pecans and tomatoes which are now ranked high among the leading exports of the country.

MORE ABOUT—

and forwarded samples to Ottawa for identification. On Tuesday Mr. Moore had received no intimation as to their nature, or as to means of combatting them. Frank Paterson, Peterborough's agricultural representative, could not say what kind they might be after having them described to him. They might be any one of a dozen kinds, he said.

The worms are between an inch and an inch and a half in length, bright green in color, and hairless. Their backs are not rounded when climbing, the entire body remaining close to the tree trunks. A great many of them are marked with a small brown spot on their backs. Some of the larger worms are entirely brown in color. Their general appearance is said to be much like that of the saw fly, scourge of the north, but they do not attack evergreens, as does that species.

Seem To Prefer Maples.

So far the worms have shown a preference for maples, then spreading to the other deciduous trees. All farms in the district have heard and been astounded by the incessant ticking noise that pervades the woods where the worms are at work. It is a noise such as army worms at work in millions in grain fields are said to make as they snip the tops from the grain. But these worms have not attacked the fields in any place, although they have crossed some fields to reach new woods.

Research men at the Government Entomological Foundation at Belleville were unable to determine the nature of the worms from such description. The description was that of the saw fly, but that particular worm attacks trees of the evergreen type, one researcher said. "If it attacks maples and other deciduous trees it might be any of a dozen types. It might even be a worm that does not usually infest forests, but which has reached rare abundance in that district."

"Might it be the timber worm as suggested by the Durham county agricultural representative?" the Examiner asked him.

"Not the timber worm we know here," he said. "That worm bores into the wood and does not attack the foliage primarilly. No, I would not like to say what kind it might be unless I saw it. If it is chewing the leaves on deciduous trees it might be any of a dozen, even a hundred varieties."

Suggested Spray Costly

"Is there any way the worms could be combatted without the knowledge of their variety?" he was asked.

"Yes, if it is chewing leaves, use any common commercial grade of arsenate of lead by spraying the trees with an orchard spray outfit. Such a method would be quite costly, though," he warned.

In Peterborough, Frank Paterson doubted the efficancy of using an orchard spray. Trees in forests are too high to reach by such means, he said.

Edwin Moore is anxiously awaiting word from Ottawa as to steps to take to combat the scourge. He does not think his trees are dead, believes they are strong enuogh to withstand the attack and return to foliage next year.

"They seem to be moving now to George Bothwell's and Bill Douglas' bush now," Mrs. Moore said.

Mrs. Bothwell told the Examiner the worms entered their bush on Monday and seem to be in full swing now. "They are certainly doing the work up in fine style," she said. Not yet as numerious as in Moore's bush, the worms are rapidly increasing in number and have shown no indication of going into the cocoon stage, she said. They are also in Harry Argue's bush on the 8th Concession of Cavon, a little further east and on the same side of the road as Moore's, she said.

Norman Braithwaite, 8th Concession farmer, said both Bill Douglas' and Ira Gillis' woods are infested, though to a lesser degree as yet. Ira Gillis' farm is across the road from Moore's, between the 8th and 9th Concessions.

No sign that the infestation has passed its peak was even hinted at by any of the people the Examiner interviewed. All said there were no signs of decrease in numbers, no signs of cocoons which would mean the end of the season for the worms. As far as could be learned, the worms are starting an advance that may spread through bushland in a large section of the district.

Monastery Fire Investigated

The Ontario fire marshal's department is investigating the cause of the $150,000 fire which destroyed the Good Shepherd monastery at Ottawa, imperilling 189 nuns and inmates. The fire is now believed to have started in a cupboard containing mops and brooms. The monastery is shown ABOVE at the height of the fire.

Chest Clinic Find Six Active Cases

The Travelling Diagnostic Chest Clinic sponsored by the Provincial Department of Health, Tuberculosis Prevention Branch, examined one hundred and fifty-seven patients. This is the second year the city of Peterborugh has been favored with this free voluntary service.

Dr. D. McCallum, Dr. J. S. Hazen, and Dr. H. H. Washburn were the clinicans, and D. E. Moore, X-ray technician. The local Board of Health had an office arranged in the City Building, where patients referred by their family physician could be examined. Mr. Moore had his portable X-ray equipment set up in the committee room.

Dr. G. Murray Fraser, M.O.H., explained the purpose of this service was to assist local doctors to detect tuberculosis in its early stages before the person had a chance to spread the disease by contact with others and before the patient reached the incurable stage. Early discovery means early recovery.

The tuberculin test discovers infection. The chest X-ray shows up disease in the lungs before the doctor can hear anything abnormal. Modern treatment such as pneumothorax and chest surgery produces miracles.

It is up to the people in a community to support measures that will stamp out this disease. It was very gratifying to the local Board of Health and Miss Zeta Kearney, public health nurse, who had charge of the arrangements, the manner in which the citizens responded to the clinic.

This week the medical practitioners received reports on their patients. The following is a summary:

Rainy Weather Hurts Farmer

Recent rains have washed up the early advantage of a seasonal gain of two weeks in the maturing and ripening of the crops of grain in this district, a farmer remarked to the Examiner this morning.

"Everybody knows the season got away to a splendid start, and everything was promising up to two weeks ago, but we have lost since then all the time we had previously gained. Threshing has been at a standstill for the simple reason that you can't get the crops dried out. Many of the fields that were cut during the last two weeks haven't seen any further work. The grain is still in stook, and operations generally are at a standstill. One week of dry weather is all we are asking for now. I don't think there has been any real damage to the grain crops, but there is the danger that if things go on as they are the grain may begin to sprout. The worst feature about it right now is that the work is being delayed. A lot of the threshing that might have been finished by now isn't done. Of course we aren't so much behind normal seasons because of the good start we got, but right now we're getting nowhere."

Wood Is Ordered To Pay $266,750 At 5 p.c.

LONDON, July 27 (CP Cable).—The judicial committee of the Privy Council today granted the appeal of Wood and others versus Wood in a case dealing with the liability of an executor to account for the proceeds of shares, part of his testator's estate, and discharged the order of the Ontario court of appeal.

In lieu of this order their lordships directed that an order should be made substituting for the judgment pronounced by Mr. Justice Makins—an order on the defendant to pay into court to the account of the plaintiffs $266,750 with interests of five per cent per annum from Sept. 30, 1925, until payment, and pay the plaintiffs their costs in the action.

The case arose from the will of Mary G. Wood, of Peterborough, who died Feb. 24, 1924. After certain specific bequests she ordered half the residue of her estate bequeathed to her son, Gerald A. Wood, and the other half divided equally between three children of a deceased son on attaining the age of 25. Gerald A. Wood and his sister, Charlotte Edwards, were appointed executors.

Dispute Over Stock.

Miss Edwards died in May, 1935, leaving the defendant the sole executor. In the distribution of the estate 485 shares of Canada Cement Company fell into the residue. In May, 1935, the defendant applied to have his accounts as executor audited and passed. The accounts showed he had taken over as part of the moiety of the residuary estate these 485 shares at $102 per share. The plaintiffs contend the shares actually sold for $250 per share and claimed half the proceeds with compound interest and contested the claim that an effective appropriation of the shares ever was made by the executors.

Their Lordships observed the task of the different court had been rendered most difficult "by reason of the unmethodical conduct of the defendant in the discharge of his duties as executor."

"Had he acted as a careful executor should act," the judgment continued, "and kept proper records of his executorship the questions in issue in this action could never have arisen or, if they did arise, could have been answered without difficulty.

"As to the guardian of the infants, she does not appear to have been approached at all.

"Having said this much, Their Lordships think it right to add they make no suggestion against the defendant's honesty in this matter. He seems to have acted with good faith and to have relied upon his lawyer."

The case of Wood vs. Wood, dealing with the estate of Mary G. Wood, in which the judicial committee of the Privy Council gave judgment today, originated in Peterborough, Ont. The judgment of the trial judge, Mr. Justice Makins, was delivered February 6, 1936, and the Ontario Court of Appeal gave its findings in the case, November 19, 1936.

Mrs. Louise LeClair Is Laid To Rest

Prominent and obscure alike, a large gathering of friends of the late Mrs. Louis LeClair, 490 Gilmour street, met Tuesday afternoon at her residence to pay last tribute to the memory of one of Peterborough's best beloved women. Mrs. LeClair died on Saturday afternoon after an illness that lasted for six months.

Her funeral service was conducted by the Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt, who spoke feelingly of the deep love which was felt for Mrs. LeClair. He paid homage to the spirit which could instil in the hearts of her acquaintances a love that would not perish with her passing. Mrs. LeClair was active in many phases of church life, in the work of the Well Babies' Clinic, and was a prominent member of the Y. W. C. A. board of directors.

Many of Peterborough's most prominent citizens attended the funeral together with many lesser known folk, but all of them carrying a high regard for their departed friend. Floral tributes were massed high about the bier in token of esteem. A number of friends from beyond the city were also present, among them S. H. Alexander, prominent Hamilton business executive, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Fleming of Oakville, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Ryan of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Unionville, Mr. and Mrs. E. Temple of Beaverton, and Mr. and Mrs. Payne of Toronto.

Indicative of the high esteem in which she was held by the youth of the city was the presence of the Bachelors' club, whose members used to meet nearly every two weeks at her home. Six members of the club were pall bearers. They were Bob Maybee, Harry Marsh, Jack Couper, Jack Kirkwood, Gordon Duncan, and Jack McKone. Interment was made at Little Lake Cemetery.

Seymour Ties Petherick's

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 27. — Tied ten-all at the end of the fourth inning the softball game between Seymour West and Petherick's Corners was called owing to darkness. It was the third game of the playdowns and the largest crowd of the season was on hand to cheer the teams to victory. Seymour West stepped into the lead in the opener with McCulloch, Anderson, and McCook getting runs. Cliff Anderson pitched the losers out in the same inning, but the hard hitting crowd from Petherick's headed by Reddick, Barnum, and L. Watson began hitting everything that Anderson put over in the second and had piled up seven runs before the side was retired with the score at 7 to 4. Ernie Ingram, third baseman for the Corners' team, was the star of the game, getting two home runs to bring in a total of four runs.

When the game was called the players went into a huddle and it was decided to eliminate all town players from the final on Saturday. This will leave Seymour West without the services of their catcher, Ernie Wilkes, Mac Atkinson who plays on third base, and Don Holmes centre fielder. Petherick's will be without Bug Reddick, who plays shortstop and added two runs to the game on Tuesday.

He made restitution to a local man for the amount of the worthless cheques, and claimed he had no recollection of having issued them against his brother's account in a Millbrook bank. He was given spspended sentence for two years and bonded to keep the peace and leave liquor alone. He also paid the court costs, amounting to $30.00.

B.C. Blaze In Control

COURTENAY, B.C., July 27. — (CP).—British Columbia police today said a wind which sprang up earlier in the day had died down again, leaving Vancouver island's 100,000 acre forest blaze "at a standstill and making practically no progress."

Forest officials last night had expressed fear that should the wind gather more force, flames might bear down on Bevan, Cumberland and Courtenay, towns threatened for several days.

Forecasting the Future

The highway transport pictured above is the artist's conception of the transportation of the future, and within the truck is more than two tons of laboratory apparatus which will be used to predict future progress when 'Previews of Progress,' famous circus of science, comes to Peterborough next week on Thursday and Friday.

Science Circus Is Coming Here

A new kind of circus is coming to town, with a new kind of thrills. There will be no trapeze artists, painted clowns or trained seals . . . in fact there won't even be a big tent. The new circus is a circus of science.

Under the sponsorship of The Examiner the circus of science, widely known as "Previews of Progress", will be held in Peterborough two nights at the Exhibition Grounds, Thursday and Friday of next week.

Ringmaster of the science circus is Ernest L. Foss, research engineer and science commentator. Using two tons of laboratory apparatus as his menagerie, Foss will put electricity through its paces. At his command rings will leap mysteriously into the air, music will change into light and dance a weird pattern on a screen, and nails will melt in a furnace so cold the demonstrator can put two of his fingers in the oven without harm.

The antics and contortions of stroboscopes, oscillographs and electric eyes will provide amazement and amusement. One of the most sensational demonstrations of all will take place when Foss actually fries an egg using a copy of the Examiner as a stove. No heat or flame of any kind will be used, and at the completion of the experiment the newspaper will be found to be not even scorched.

"Previews of Progress" was produced by General Motors, under the personal direction of Charles F. Kettering, noted scientist and inventor. For nearly two years it has travelled to hundreds of communities, and to date more than five million persons have witnessed the spectacle.

Admission to the show is absolutely free. The performance will be held on a special stage erected in front of the Grand Stand at the Exhibition Grounds. Merchants, clubs and other groups are co-operating to make August 4 and 5 two of the biggest days Peterborough has ever known, and as an official welcome to "Previews of Progress" a parade of gigantic proportions is being planned.

City Managership Urged In Vancouver

VANCOUVER, July 27 (CP).—Advocates of a city manager plan for Vancouver are seeking to rally public support behind their demand for a plebescite on the scheme.

As outlined by its originator, W. J. Barrett-Lennard, the plan would replace the present mayor and eight-man council by 48 unpaid councillors elected from 12 wards. They in turn would name and keep a "watching brief" on a city manager who would administer all civic departments except schools, parks and police.

Barrett-Lennard, a chartered accountant who surveyed the city's financial position two years ago, claims a city manager would result in a more efficient administration that would enable Vancouver to find a better market for its bonds and save $750,000 annually in carrying charges.

He thinks also the enlarged council would be more representative of Vancouver, whose 260,000 population sprawls over some 44 square miles. Furthermore, he says, there's too much work to be borne efficiently by the present eight aldermen.

His statements are backed by Captain W. J. Conway, honorary secretary of the recently-formed Vancouver council-manager association, who declares: "Not a single Canadian city that has tried the city manager plan is in debt today. Every city in the Dominion under our type of council is facing bankruptcy."

Opposition to the plan comes from the city hall. Mayor George C. Miller says Vancouver already is "actually closer to the manager plan than we realize."

He explained: "We have a comptroller in charge of our finances, a city engineer acts as operating head of the city, and the corporation counsel 'sits in' with both of them. These three men are the administrators for Vancouver."

Hastings Driver Not Guilty Magistrate Rules

Ellery Smullin of Hastings was found not guilty on a charge of reckless driving in traffic court this morning before Magistrate Gee.

The charge was laid by Traffic Officer Gordon Broughton who testified that on July 13 in the village of Norwood, Smullin had turned the corner of Highway No. 7 and the county road at a speed of 35 to 40 miles an hour and that his car had slewed around and almost hit the sidewalk on the other side of the road. The traffic officer declared that Smullin's car was practically out of control.

In his defence Smullin swore that his speed when he turned the corner was 15 to 18 miles an hour and that he had not endangered anybody by the manner in which the turn was made.

Magistrate Gee in dismissing the case told the accused that if he had answered the traffic officer's question courteously the charge might not have been laid. "Better watch your driving after this," he warned Smullin.

The crown offered no evidence in a charge of reckless driving against Thomas H. Brooks arising out of traffic accident at George and Dalhousie streets and the case was dismissed.

Another Adjournment

Despite a vigorous protest from T. J. Carley, K.C., there was a further adjournment of two charges against J. J. Brady for reckless driving and driving without adequate brakes. Crown Attorney McElderry said that he was ready to go ahead with the second charge but that the woman injured in the accident was still unable to attend court and she was the chief witness in the reckless driving charge.

Mr. Carley protested that the case was being made an examination for discovery in regard to civil action. "I am not saying of course that this is being don with the concurrence of the Crown," he explained.

It was finally agreed that there should be an adjournment until next Wednesday and every effort is to be made by the Crown to have its evidence ready.

Issie Botnick was charged with reckless driving in North Monaghan township and this time it was Mr. Carley who smilingly asked for a week's adjournment. It was granted.

Gordon Reycroft, Morganston, was fined $5 and $5.00 costs for not coming to a full stop on entering a highway and John Mack of Havelock paid $10 and $3 costs for having inadequate brakes. Paul Paraci of Toronto who pleaded guilty to speeding on Highway 28—sixty miles an hour, the traffic officer put it—was fined $5 and $2.35. For not having a permit John Foyle of Port Hope was assessed $1.50 and $2.50 costs. A. Williams of Campbellford was asked to contribute $5 and $3.50 costs for not stopping on entering a highway.

Dr. Hayes' office in the Barrie Building will be closed from July 25 until Monday, August 8.

GOOD INFIELD, EXCEPTIONAL PITCHING HOLDS PITTSBURG UP

Bucs Are Weak Batting Power Two Over .300

Pitching, the best in the league is the "why" of that amazing victory streak of the Pittsburgh Pirates, latest "favorite in the National League pennant race.

Add to the brilliant hurling of the right-handers the infield work of Lee Handley, Pep Young, Arky Vaughan and Gus Suhr and the Pirate advance is readily understood.

Big Mace Brown, the relief hurler turned victory-maker, heads the parade of successful Pittsburgh slabmen, his fast ball and curve accounting for 13 victories against three defeats up to July 23.

It took Brown a long time to get into the big league—he's been pitching baseball for nine years—but he has finally reached his stride and is the real surprise package of the year.

Browns work in the All-Star game at Cincinnati only confirmed what he was making the fans believe by his record—that he really had something up that big right arm. Striking out Rudy York, home-run hitter, with the bases full isn't a soft touch any afternoon in the year.

Brown, 28 years old, won seven games while losing two last year, but he took part in 50. He has won all his games in relief roles this year.

Klinger Is Star

Darrell Elijah (Cy) Blanton, the Waureka, Okla., boy wonder of 1935, hasn't been up to his old self, but his victory record is heavy compared to his losses on the mound.

The veteran Bill Swift, in his seventh year with the Pirates, is pitching as good as in other seasons. So is Tim Tobin, Oakland, Cal., youngster who won six against three losses last year. Swift and Tobin have accounted for more than a dozen Pirate victories, much needed and appreciated.

Klinger, up from Sacramento and first tried out by the Cardinals in 1933, is a veteran of four years of Double-A experience, and is a cousin of Charlie Hollacher, sensational shortstop of the Chicago Cubs 15 years ago. Bob's record with the Sacramento club last year was 19 wins against 13 losses. He comes from Allentown, Mo.

Suhr Leads Hitters

To give you some idea of how their pitching has kept them in the race let it be said that the Pirate bats have hit fewer home runs than any other club in the circuit and five teams have scored more runs than they have.

Only two players are batting above .300, the veteran Gus Suhr, first basemen, who is hitting the best in his career, and Lloyd Waner, who has been hitting slightly above .300.

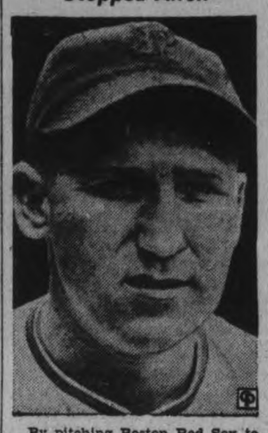
While the play of Johnny Rizzo, rookie outfielder flirting with the .300 mark, has given the Pirates many a happy moment, the amazing downfall of Paul Waner with the stick nullifies most of the joy. Paul never has hit below .300 in 12 years with the Pirates, but this season has been down around .260. However, he's climbing.

Rizzo, previously a rookie with the Reds and Cardinals, finished second to Enos Slaughter, now with the Cards, for the American Association batting crown last year. Rizzo and Slaughter came up from Columbus.

The Pirate infielders have combined their talents to stamp out many an opponents' rally with a fast double play, the Pittsburg club currently leading the loop in double play killings.

If the Pirates' pitchers hold up, Manager Pie Traynor may lead his club into another pennant, the first in 11 years.

Stopped Allen



By pitching Boston Red Sox to a three-hit shut-out win over Cleveland Indians, Emerson Dickman, ABOVE, rookie pitcher, ended one of the major league's greatest winning streaks. On the mound for the Indians was Johnny Allen, out after his 13th straight win and attempting to better his last year's mark of 15 victories and one loss. Allen has now won 27 games out of 30 over the last two seasons.

McKee gave Norwood eleven hits while striking out six and passing two. Hastings collected the same number of hits from Kempt. He also fanned six and walked none.

McKee, Jones, Radford and Kelley each with two hits were Hastings' heaviest clouters. Rogers with three led Norwood. G. Scriver played a nice game at third for Hastings while Scott on first for Norwood turned in their best fielding effort. McKee and Richardson got the only extra base hits, each having a double.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

JUST FOR A MINUTE we'll get a little far afield. We want to take issue with Baz O'Meara of the Montreal Star. He rates Babe Ruth a greater figure in baseball history than Ty Cobb. Perhaps the payoff is his remark: "Cobb was Cobb, and the baseball writers who admired him as genius never enthused over him." But back files will prove the great Tyrus got reams of publicity—even if Ruth was a more popular guy. Ty was a ball player's player, and yet thrilled thousands of fans. He could do everything perfectly on a ball field, hit, run, field, throw and think fast. Ruth could only slug homers, and pitch—but he sure could do those things! Both great men, but give us Cobb. Don't forget he led the league in hitting for 12 years, nine in a row—and he once batted .420! Had a life-time average, in 24 years, of .367 and stole 892 bases, frequently scoring from first on an infield! Held or tied 90 records when he retired with his million bucks. Quite a player, the Georgia Peach.

* * * * *

AND BEFORE GETTING back to local dirt, let us cite the case of a city that really supports its ball team. Yep, Detroit. The Tigers have just returned from a disastrous road trip which shot 'em down into sixth place and threatened to hang up a new record for straight defeats. Yet they were met at their home station, ye olde Michigan Central, by thousands of fans, a band and two big reception committee! Mayors and police chiefs of a dozen Michigan centres were invited to bring along a gang of rooters to help swell the mob from Henryfordsville, and they really welcomed the faltering Tigers home. It's the best ball town on the continent, whether Black Mike's gang are winning or losing. We like this spirit.

They Race With Death

WE ASKED A LIONS Club officer yesterday if the motorbike racers here for the big meet Civic Holiday would really turn it on. "Will they" he echoed, "you just bet your life they will. Those guys, particularly the professional riders, will give their machines everything they've got—they really risk their lives in evry race and think nothing of it. We had some 2,600 of a crowd here last year and expect more this time." Yeh, it'll be a big Civic Holiday attraction. Starts at 1.30 and will wind up about 5.30, earlier than was the case last year. Romeo Masse, flying Frenchman who cleaned up here in '37, will be back as well as three Verdun, Que., aces, Geo. Day, Irwin Knight and Sam Davis. The latter won in Oshawa July 1st.

* * * * *

WESTERN ONTARIO sports writers association held a meeting a few days ago and the reports showed 20 papers represented and a membership of 43 guys. Not bad at all. It is a takeoff of the noted Baseball Writers Assoc. of the States, and may amount to something eventually. At the time, they just compare notes on scoring, talk over things in a general sort of way and have a good time. When the association gets powerful enough, if it does, some constructive regulations regarding the promotion and running of athletics in this end of the Province may be lined up. However, the Central Ontario scriveners prefer to run independently for the present. Or else they haven't the dough to pay fees into such an organization.

Baseball By Lamp-Light

HOUSE OF DAVID ballsters are here tomorrow (Thursday) night at 9.15 in Riverside to play the Petes an exhibition game. And back again on Saturday night. Under the arcs. They bring their own lighting equipment and it's pretty fair, though Chuck Kearns, Les Burton and the rest of the locals may find ita bit odd chasing flies under artificial lights. The bearded boys of Benton Harbor put on a real show, playing good ball and dishing up a lot of comic entertainment. It ought to pack in a record crowd of fans at half a slug apiece.

* * * * *

DOWN IN KINGSTON the other eve, the House of David dudes took a 12-9 decision before the biggest crowd in years. The Ponies put a pretty fair team on the field, after their long layoff, made it right interesting. Bud Clancy was nicked for 15 hits but struck out 12 of the pros. Scrutton, Bennett, Corkey and Webber got two hits each in the Ponies' total of 12. The winners used two twirlers and put on a laughable pepperball act between innings. The Kingstons are hoping to be re-instated this week so that seven of them can get back into the softball wars. Wonder if an exhibition game or two if such re-instatement is okayed by the O. B. A., between the Ponies and Petes couldn't be arranged while the loop playoffs are slowly coming to a boil.

They Were Wound Up

WESTCLOX GALS evened up their first-half softball playoffs with Keene here last p.m. with a 12-6 equalizer. A big crowd lined the Bowl and saw quite a struggle, Ab Delahaye's damsels rallying for nine runs in a wild and woolly eighth inning to knock over Ivan Fletcher's femmes. Bea McDowell and H. Bradley were the pitching selections, both going fair. A lot of miscues in this tilt but quite an interesting dish just the same. There was some talk of running the deciding playoff joust Friday, but it's listed for tonight at the East City diamond and we have heard nothing more, so it will likely be run off this eve.

LEATHER TRADERS invaded Lindsay last night when the Riverview A. C. from here put on a mitt show in the arena and it was a nice one. Two kayoes and heaps of action all the way. A pair of Toronto grapplers knocked the fans out of their seats in a furious fray, while the pugs plastered each other all over the ring. Best bout was the Bowler-Low slugfest, while the Joiner-Packenham affair was lively, too. And Nick Orlando opened up after coasting a couple of rounds to take a popular decision over Wallie Hicks of Toronto in the main go. Several other neat numbers on the card. The Lindsay rink management (and the fans) were quite tickled and immediately invited the locals back for another show in two weeks. And they'll go.

C.C.F. Advances Into Cup Final

Victors by a 2-1 count, the C.C.F. advanced into the finals for the Injured Players' cup by defeating the Deloro squad here last night. The game was played at King Edward park with a fair crowd on hand.

The C.C.F. kicked off and were first to attack, Jobe having a nice try which just skimmed over the crossbar. Play then ran from end to end, both teams being awarded corner kicks which went for nothing. Deloro then took matters in hand and Brooks tested W. Dinesen in the C.C.F. goal with a hard drive on which Dinesen made a wonderful save and cleared the ball up to midfield, where Clapham got possession to let Jobe break away to send in a low grounder which landed in the corner of the net thus putting C.C.F. in the lead. This gave the C.C.F. encouragement and Jobe again sent in another hard drive to make B. O'Neill in the Deloro goal throw himself across the goal to make a spectacular save. Play ran on about even terms, both forward lines missing many scoring chances until Jobe again gained possession of the ball to beat O'Neill for goal number two. Finally Deloro were awarded a penalty kick, F. Harte being appointed to take the kick sent past, no damage done. As half-time approached there was no further scoring. Half-time C.C.F. 2, Deloro 0.

On resumption Deloro made a few changes, placing Townsend back on defense and McCall at outside left. This seemed to improve the team, and had the best of the argument at this stage and had chances go a begging. Finally they were awarded with a corner from which Hart sent over a lovely cross from the right wing, and Cousins made no mistake to make the score 2-1.

Encouraged by their success, Deloro pressed hard but were thwarted by the stout defence put up by the C.C.F. and the brilliant play of W. Dinesen in goal. Full time found Deloro pressing and no further scoring being done the game finishing C.C.F. 2, Deloro 1. Goal scorers were Jobe 2, Cousins 1.

Teams:

C.C.F.: W. Dinesen, O'Halloran, Jobe, MacDonald, Lawrence, E. Dineesen, Dyer, Thorne, Lang, Clapham, Henwood.

Deloro: O'Neill, McColl, F. Harte, Sproale, Grey, O'Neill, Elliott, Brooks, Townsend, Cousins, J. Harte.

Two Knockouts Lindsay Fights

Two knockouts featured the Riverview A.C. boxing show staged before 300 fans in the Lindsay arena last night, a card filled with action to keep the fans yelling. Don Osborne with Riverview Club officers promoted the show, with referees being Tony Minicola, Art Hunter and Bill Horrocks. Fred Scates did the announcing, while Lindsay men were judges and timer.

Best bout of the card was the middleweight fight between Norm Bowler and Harry Low, with the latter winning on a kayo early in the second round. It was a slugging affair with both boys floored in the first lively heat, Low taking the count of four and Bowler being saved later by the bell. Another good joust saw Bill Joiner, lightweight, knockout Mel Packenham halfway through the second round. They mixed furiously with Joiner hitting harder, and a doctor later called to examine Mel's ribs, feared cracked by his ring rival.

Nick Orlando, local 135-pounder, took the main bout decision over Wallie Hicks of Toronto, staging a strong finish with hard hitting and clever boxing. The bout was draggy the first half but they opened up in the last three rounds with Nick clearly outpointing the Toronto pug.

Joe Taman and Bill Horrocks, 118 pounds, put on a pleasing exhibition crowd enjoying it all the way. Joe Berardi, 96, took a close decision over Ken Dale in a neat number which saw both boys mixing it in of fast and scientific boxing for three whirlwind rounds with the fine style. Buddy Redmond, 82-pounder, barely nosed out a nod over Ray Smith in a speedy scrap, while Frank Vasey and Will Hayes put on a good no-decision curtain-raiser. R. Brady knocked himself out in humour round of shadow boxing.

The wrestling match proved a crowd-pleaser with Red Garner and Ted McKinley, Toronto welters, giving the fans the works in a lively session. Garner had to concede the first fall in 23 minutes but came back to take the next one with a furious body slam in nine minutes. McKinley took the deciding one in 22 minutes of rip-snorting action that kept the place in an uproar. It was really a riot with hard grappling in and out of the ring, one of the most thrilling mat matches ever staged in Lindsay.

Ontario Takes Willingdon Cup After Playoff

LONDON, Ont., July 27 (CP).—The second round of the Canadian Amateur championship got under way today with most of the familiar faces still in the title picture.

First round of 18 holes yesterday chopped the field nearly in half but those who figured for a chance at the title Sandy Somerville seeks for the seventh time were still in the running.

A field of 62 golfers started out in the 18-hole morning round with third round play to start as fast as the weaker are eliminated.

Galleries at the finish yesterday were treated to a sensational championship struggle that was decided after extra play when the Ontario four-man team came through to the Canadian team championship over Quebec, defending champions.

Bringing to the host province the crown for the sixth time Ontario carded an aggregate medal score of 95 against Quebec's 96 over the ordered five holes of play and an extra hole.

The peculiar playoff, ordered by th Royal Canadian Golf Association, came about through the disqualification of the British Columbia team, low scorers on Monday when the teams competed.

A persistent delegation from the United States still rapped at Canada's championship door. Among the challengers were two newcomers from Utah, Ed Kingsley and Ven Savage.

Kingsley squeezed into the second round with a one up margin over Harry Magill of Hamilton. Savage had a far easier time turning back R. A. Paterson of the home club 5 and four.

Sandy Somerville, gunning for his seventh Canadian title, meets R. C. Storey of Saint John. Sandy yesterday eased his way through to a 4 and 3 win over D. O. D. Higgins, of Brockville, Ont.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

Any pair of our lady bowlers who intend to enter into the Globe and Mail Scotch doubles competition may do so by making their entry to F. Brown on or before Saturday, August 6th. Our club is entitled to send two pairs, and if more than two pairs enter there will be an elimination series to determine who will represent our club.

If anybody can figure out this bowling game we wish they would call us around and let us in on it. It was during the game between R. Bacon and H. Freeman, the first of the round robin series to settle the supremacy of Group No. 2, and Freeman's boys started off at a terrific pace, scored a 4, 2, 4 before Bacon touched chalk—and then what happened? Bacon's crowd went right to town and ran the score up to 17, so at the second last end the score stood 17-13 for Bacon, or in other words Freeman only scored 3 points in 13 ends while Bacon grabbed off 17 points. But here's where we got a kick out of it all. Going into the last end Freeman 4 down but still fighting—a number of the boys who had been watching the game got up and went home. "Well I guess that settles its"; "Freeman can't win now," and a lot of wisecracks by men who have year's experience in bowling. Anyhow home they went and missed the best part of the game. Not only did Freeman tie up the game in the 18th end with a big four but nearly pulled the win out in the extra end. It has been truly and wisely said: "A game is never over till the last bowl is played."

Meola Receives Mound Credit Toronto Wins

TORONTO, July 27 (CP)—Credit Mike Meola, veteran Toronto right-hander, with a good share of the honors for Toronto Maple Leafs' rise in the International League.

While the standings have Toronto down in seventh place, a glance at the won-lost column will show the Leafs only a half-game behind the sixth-place Jersey City Giants and a game behind the fifth place Montreal Royals. Despite a record that shows only six wins and as many defeats, Meola has captured his last four starts in brilliant fashion.

He went the route in all four games and has allowed an average of six hits and one run per game over that stretch.

He scored his sixth triumph last night in stopping the Royals 3-2 with eight hits.

The Giants kept behind the Royals by blasting out a 9-1 victory over the league-leading Newark Bears.

Buffalo Bisons strengthened their hold on second place by pounding out an 11-4 victory over the third place Rochester Red Wings. The Bisons clouted out 17 hits in the triumph that moved them a game and a half in front of the Wings. The Wings, however, failed to lose any ground to the fourth place Syracuse Chiefs, who took a 4-1 beating from the last-place Baltimore Orioles.

HANK GREENBERG THREATENS RUTH'S 1927 HOMERUN RECORD

Yanks Increase Lead By Double Win Off Browns

NEW YORK, July 27 (AP).—While their feats have been more or less obscured this season by the fact their clubs haven't been cutting a great deal of ice in the pennant pond, pitcher Paul Derringer of Cincinnati Reds and hitter Hank Greenberg of Detroit Tigers are a couple of ball players who would come in handy to any of those pennant-seeking clubs.

Derringer has been the "old reliable" and an important steadying influence on those younger stars whose feats are largely responsible for Cincinnati's showing in the National league race. He pitched the Reds to a 6-2 triumph over Boston Bees yesterday, recorded his 13th victory against seven defeats and put his club only two games behind the second-place New York Giants.

Greenberg, despite the fact the Tigers have recently slipped to sixth in the American League race, is hitting homers with the same old power and even greater frequency than when Detroit was winning pennants. He socked numbers 30 and 31 yesterday to beat Washington Senators 6-5 and he's up there again threatening Babe Ruth's famous record. He's only two swats behind the Babe's 1927 mark, when Ruth hit 60 for the season.

Wallop Browns Twice

New York Yankees walloped St. Louis Browns twice, 10-5 and 12-5, to increase their lead over Cleveland to 1½ games, but their hitting was spread over the whole lineup. The Indians took a single game from Philadelphia, 4-2, behind Bobby Feller's effective flinging and Chicago White Sox trimmed Boston Red Hose 9-1 in other American League games.

The National's leaders had a hard time of it. Pittsburgh's Pirates went down 6-5 before a ninth inning rally by the Phillies. St. Louis Cardinals beat out the second-lace New York Giants by the same score while Gabby Hartnett's Chicago Cubs had hard work to beat Brooklyn Dodgers 10-8.

Derringer's performance yesterday not only was his finest of the season on the hill, but he added a home run—his first since he broke in with the Cards in 1931—to start the scoring. Wally Berger followed with his 11th of the season. Paul yielded five hits, didn't give a walk, whiffed five and not let a runner reach first until Debs Garms doubled in the sixth and was retired when he failed to touch the initial bag.

Greenberg's second homer provided Detroit's winning run but his all-around swatting wasn't as effective a xthat of Joe DiMaggio of the Kanks. DiMaggio socked a homer, three doubles and a single to drive home six runs.

Feller's performance was good news to the Indians, for Bobby pulled out of his recent slump to hurl seven-hit ball and fan 10.

Westclox Girls Even Playoffs

Westclox pulled off a nine-run rally in the eighth inning at the Bowl last night to even up the girls' softball sectional playoffs with a 12-6 verdict over Keene. A huge crowd saw an exciting fixture with the visitors looking like winners till the end. Third and deciding game will be staged at the Bowl tonight.

H. Bradley held Keene to 10 hits and four walks while fanning two in a fair slab performance. Bea McDowell of Keene allowed 11 bingles and three walks as she struck out three. Neither pitcher had good support afield by her teammates. Two Westclox double plays cut off splurges by Keene in the eighth and ninth heats. Some good defensive features were turned in by B. McDowell and D. Cocks of Keene; and M. Hawthorne and M. Allison of Westclox. B. McDowell got three hits, while H. Nelson banged out a double and single, as T. Mills got a triple. For the winners, J. Corley hit a triple and single, as A. Sturgeon and D. Merrett had two singles each. The teams:

Keene: H. Nelson, ss; D. Warner, 3b; D. Cocks, c; G. Nelson, cf; B. McDowell, p; T. Mills, lf; M. Miller, 2b; M. Belle, 1b; V. Patterson, rf.

Bob Murray To Be Canada's Choice As No. 1 Boy On Davis Cup Team

MONTREAL, July 27.—(CP). — Draw for the opening matches of Canada's first Davis Cup series since 1935 will be made to-day at Mount Royal Tennis Club where 10 years ago Tamio Abe led a Japanese team to victory over the Dominion's best netmen.

In the series starting to-morrow —the first round in American zone play—Japan will be Canada's opponent again and Abe will lead the visitors as non-playing captain.

He and E. Henri Laframboise, captain of the Canadians, will announce their teams this morning, shortly before names of singles nominees are drawn to decide which players will meet in the first two matches Thursday.

Bob Murray, young Montreal law graduate, who ranks first in the Dominion, is expected to be Laframboise's choice for the No. 1 singles berth. Abe is certain to name Jiro Yamagishi, 26-year-old university student, who has no peer in Japan.

Second singles assignment for the Canadians lies between Ross Wilson of Toronto and Douglas Cameron of Vancouver, with little to choose between them. Fumiteru Nakano is favored over Yasumine Kuramaitsu for the Japanese team.

While doubles combinations may not be announced until a few hours before Friday's match, Wilson and tall, spectacled Laird Watt of Montreal probably will represent Canada with Yamagishi and Nakano their opponents.

Bearded Players Here Tomorrow

The House of David professional baseballers will play the Petes two exhibition night games here this week, Thursday and Saturday, under the lights in Riverside Park. Permission has been granted by the O.B.A. for these tussles. The visitors bring their own fine lighting equipment, which has been seen here before. Huge crowds from the city and surrounding district are expected to witness both contests between the Benton Harbor boys and the locals. There will be plenty of good baseball shown, some entertaining pepperball stunts and lots of color under the arcs.

Most of the travelling House of David ballsters have had pro service on the diamond for other teams as well as the Michigan squad. They are young, husky players who wear the traditional beard of the Benton Harbor cult, founded by the late King Benjamin. They play first-rate teams throughout the States and Canada each year and hold decisions over many of them. The Petes play a smart brand of amateur ball and, depending a lot on their pitching, may upset the dope and surprise the visitors here tomorrow (Thursday) evening in the first fixture. It ought to be well worth seeing.

Cogs Defeat Nats In Southend Loop

The Cogs advanced nearer a playoff berth by downing the Nats in last night's Southend Softball tilt at the Brinton grounds by a 12 to 8 count. The winners nicked Wedlock for 14 hits, Mowry getting 3 singles to lead the assault and A. Heal and Mackness hitting homers. Todd allowed the Nats 9 hits but was wild, issing 10 passes. The Nats failed to capitalize on them, however, leaving 18 men stranded during the tussle. Loucks for the losers had 4 hits and played a swell defensive game, as did Cameron. Leggett and Art Heal looked best afield for the winners. Both teams had three double plays. The win gives the Cogs temporary possession of fourth place and dropped the Nats to the fifth spot and necessitates their winning their two remaining games to stay in the running. Lineups:

Tony Galento still doing all right, thank godness (and it's to bad we can't say the same for the Giants)....A magazine story by Dizzy Dean this week says he never wanted to be a pop-off guy, but the Card bosses made him and he couldn't say no because he was "afeared" they'd chase him back to the Arkansas cotton fields.

You now can get three to one here that Armstrong treats Ambers just like he has been treating everybody else....La Moody plans plenty of practice sessions before tackling Helen Jacobs again at Forest Hills, and La Jacobs might take the same hint.

In an exhibition game the other night between Brooklyn and Albany, a fan said: "Mr. Ruth, I have never seen you sock one."...."We'll attend to that right now," responded the Babe, and durned if he didn't park one on his next time up.... Incidentally, the three exhibitions the Dodgers have played since Ruth joined up have drawn 33,724 fans.

Galento is out of the ring for the rest of the year, anyway....Bill Terry ought to shoot some trusty south, check up on Burgess Whitehead and get the fellow back up here ....New York baseball writers have made the Giants a 6 to 5 choice to win.

Bill Tobin Heads Chicago Hawks

CHICAGO, July 27 (A.P.). — Bill Tobin, for the last two years vice-president and general manager of the Black Hawks, Chicago's National Hockey League champions, has been elevated to the presidency of the club, owner Frederic McLaughlin said yesterday.

Major McLaughlin will remain as chairman of the board of directors, and said Tobin's promotion was "merely a change in title and doesn't alter the operation of the club, or my interest in it."

Turkey will spend nearly $80,000,000 in constructing two new ports.

Loyalists Making Own Guns Tighten Belts, Fight On (Written for The Canadian Press by Allan R. May.

LONDON, July 27—(CP). — "As long as 'La Oz' remains open we are all right."

"La Oz" translated means "The Sickle," ancient symbol of peaceful toil but now used to refer to the line of the front from which the forces of General Franco threaten the centre region of government Spain.

A high military officer in Madrid gave me this graphic picture of the situation just before I lef there a few days ago.

If you draw an arc from Malaga, up through Corboda, Badajoz, Caceres, Toledo, around the Guadarrama mountains to Teruel and down to the seat Castellon, you will see 'La Oz." Within that region are about 7,000,000 people defended by an armed force of 300,000 to 500,000 men. On July 18, they had been at war for two years.

They have endured hunger and constant shellings in Madrid, attacks from the air in Valencia, Barcelona and other cities and small towns. They have survived after bitter defeat on the fronts, caused, they believe, by the refusal of the powers to permit them to buy arms.

One would think they could not go on. They can and will, for they are as determined today not to let that sickle close as they were two years ago not to yield Madrid. They are weary and bruised, but not exhausted.

Making Own Guns

A decided change has taken place in the last year. Under the Negrin administration with its policy of liberal constitutional democracy, every element and all the resources of the nation have been mobilized for one purpose—the expulsion of a 'foreign invasion."

A war industry now exists. In Valencia I was shown a sub-machine gun, patterned after models captured from the Italians and improved by Spanish technicians, which is now being produced at a rate of 70 a day. One year ago there were no such weapons for the Republican soldiers. The ammunition used in that gun—believe it or not—was made in Germany.

There is food in Republican Spain. Not enough it is true and when ships are bombed in Valencia harbor it means that children go without their rations of milk. But the government-held provinces include the richest agricultural lands of Spain and a good crop is being harvested this year. Food distribution is also better organized than before.

In any case, the temper of the people is such that they are not to be frightened by hunger. If they could get airplanes and tanks they would pull in their belts and fight on beans and rice. Madrid has done it and Valencia is prepared to do the same.

A Veterans' policy

WINDSOR, Ont., July 27—(CP). —Formation of a policy for veterans from coast to coast will be one of the main purposes of the Canadian corps reunion to be held in Toronto next week-end, Sam Wallace, a national delegate from the Windsor branch of the corps told more than 100 ex-servicemen here last night.

Sessions behind closed doors will enable delegates to determine viewpoints and policies on questions affecting veterans and their relations with Federal and other governments, Mr. Wallace said.

Looking Back
On This Date

One of the curiosities of human nature is the so frequentl attempt by some persons appointed to public office to either filch a privilege from another person in authority or attempt to create for his office some appendage which was not intended. This was well illustrated in 1879 when Hon. Alexander Campbell had just been appointed minister of interior. At Confederation the department of secretary of state for the provinces was estabished as the channel of communication between the Dominion and provincial governments. It also managed the Dominions' lands, then recently acquired from the Hudson's Bay Co., and in that respect was the germ of the department of interior in 1873, the department of secretary of state for the provinces being then abolished and its ceremonial functions taken over by the secretary of state of Canada.

Mr. Campbell, in a letter to Sir John Macdonald on this date (July 27, 1873), took the ground that his department and not that of the secretary of state of Canada, should be the medium of communication with the lieutenant-governors of the western provinces, but his view did not find favor with Sir John and the secretary of state of Canada remains to this day the appointed channel of communication between the governor-general and the various lieutenant-governors, while the department of interior was abolished, by the Mackenzie King ministry in 1936.

Campbell, who was an early law partner of John A. Macdonald at Kingston, held many portfolios in Macdonald cabinets and died lieutenant-governor of Ontario in 1892. He was in his later years, both at Ottawa and at Toronto, quite a stickler for strict observance of official etiquette. He was minister of justice in 1885 when Macdonald wanted to give that portfolio to John S. D. Thompson, of Nova Scotia, and he (Campbell) made quite a protest at being shoved out of the justice portfolio but finally consented on condition that just as soon as the lieutenant-governorship of Ontario became vacant he should be sent there. Meanwhile he went back to the post-office, and he and Thompson never got on well in cabinet council, Campbell sneering at Thomposn as a "man educated for the priesthood with a nervous look and subdued manner."

Sir John had much affection for the partner of his early struggles in law and politics, but got rather tired of Campbell's petulance and it was with relief that he saw him depart to Government House, Toronto, in February, 1887.

Friends Honor Cavan Couple

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, July 27. — On Thursday evening a large group of friends and neighbors from the vicinity and surrounding community gathered in Cavan communnty hall to honor Kenneth Braithwaite and his bride (nee Helen Smith), whose marriage recently took place.

S. S Staples was the genial and efficient chairman for a varied program including: A vocal duet by Rex and Frazer Carr, with guitar accompaniment by Rex; a vocal duet by Bea and Nan Fallis; a vocal solo by Sonny Boyle; a vocal solo with guitar accompaniment, by E. Johnson, each number of which was heartily encored.

The colsing number was a short, appropriate address by the Rev. J. R. Trumpour, after which Mr. and Mrs. Barithwaite were invited to come to the platform and R. A. Sutton read an address of congratulation and best wishes signed by Messrs. Eugene Touchbourne, Wm. Tinney, S. S. Staples and Russell Earle. Mr. Wm. Tinney handed each of the guests of honor a purse containing together, sixty-five dollars.

Mr. Braithwaite replied suitably on behalf of his bride and himself, and "For they are jolly good fellows" was heartily sung.

The floor was then cleared for dancing, for which the Johnson brothers and Bob Sutton, on piano, violin and guitar, and Bob Todd and Mrs. Louis Pudsey on violin and piano, alternately supplied music.

Supper was served in the basement by the committee in charge. The head table was prettily decorated in white and pink and at it were seated the bride and groom, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Smith, Mr. Harry Braithwaite and son Neil, and the Rev. J. R. and Mrs. Trumpour.

Designer Suicides Over Poster

DURBAN, South Africa, July 27—(CP-Cable)—B. F. Vanniekirk, designer of the election poster portraying the tragedy of marriage between white women and natives, ended his life because of remorse at the thought that he had insulted South African womanhood, it was disclosed at an inquest today.

The poster, which depicted a white woman and negro husband with colored children, aroused intense indignation during the recent general election campaign.

Vanniekirk shot himself at Heilbron in the Orange Free State, leaving a letter stating the cause of his suicide was a feeling that he had "irretrievably" insulted South African womanhood.

During the election campaign last May, The Nationalists were believed to have done their cause harm by publishing the poster. Afrikander women held protest meetings in several parts of the country.

Nationalists, the main opposition party, won 26 seats in the election while the Government won 111. There are 150 seats in the Parliament.

Woman 5 Years Jailed For Keeping Secret

CHICAGO, July 27 (CP). — Who said a woman can't keep a secret? Mrs. Daisy Tegtmeyer today was rounding out five years in the Cook County jail, all because "she won't tell."

And what this 53-year-old widow won't tell to the satisfaction of the courts is what disposition was made of part of a $30,000 estate.

In 1924 she became trustee of the estate of her father-in-law. Minor heirs of the elder Tegtmeyer filed a bill alleging they had $30,000 due. Mrs. Tegtmeyer refused to give an accounting. After much litigation she was told on July 27, 1933, to give an accounting or go to jail.

Numerous attempts have been made in various courts to get her out on writs of habeas corpus. One judge commented, "she is her own lockup keeper."

She was free under a bond for a few months last year while the Illinois Appellate Court reviewed her case. The court ordered her returned to jail.

Search For Gold Leads Police To Illegal Furs

SUDBURY, Ont., July 27—(CP). —Search for the $41,000 in gold concentrate stolen from Dome Mine lead accidentally to the discovery and a seizure at Rouyn, Que., of a $10,000 airplane cargo of beaver pelts, it was revealed in court here yesterday.

As Jacob Isaac Glick, Sudbury fur buyer, went on trial on 14 charges of illegal possession and transportation of furs, Quebec provincial police told of placing one of their men aboard the plane chartered by Glick on a mysterious trip to an unknown destination. Police suspected the trip was connected with the gold thefts and had an officer disguised as an airplane mechanic.

When the seven-passenger plane returned to Rouyn June 22, Quebec police discovered 16 bundles containing furs instead of gold, as expected, the court was told.

Guilty On 6 Charges.

Before evidence was called on the 14 new charges, Magistrate Willard Cooper announced he found Glick guilty on six charges of illegal possession of beaver pelts in which he was tried at Elsas, 200 miles north of here, July 15 and 16. Sentence was postponed, however, until the present charges are disposed of.

Sub-Inspector J. A. Matte told the magistrate how George Lortie, Quebec provincial officer, made the trip from Rouyn, Que., to Peterbell, Ont., as a mechanic and helped Glick and Pilot B. A. Paget load the bundles into the freighter plane for shipmet to Montreal.

When the plane reached Rouyn on its return trip, however, on the excuse of refuelling, Matte inspected the cargo and found furs. He said he at once communicated with Game Warden D. Gervais, who seized the furs and arrested Glick.

Lucky All Around.

"We didn't know where the plane was going," Matte testified. "We were suspicious and were looking for the stolen gold. The game warden was not watching for the plane. We weren't looking for fur. I 'phoned him."

He said he had given orders for the plane to return to Rouyn for inspection.

G. M. Miller, Sudbury, Glick's lawyer, asked if Matte got information on the flights of all planes. Matte asked if he had to answer that question. The magistrate held it inadmissible.

The pilot, Paget, told of making arrangements with Glick for the flight to Peterbell and return. Glick had shown him where to land and they had been met by a man named Lacroix, he said. He said he did not know why Lortie accompanied him on the chartered trip.

Lortie recounted loading the 16 packages when they landed on the Missanabi River. Those packages later revealed 444 beaver pelts, 10 otter, one fisher, two mink, seven marten, three muskrat, and two cross fox skins, he said.

Ontario Provincial Constable Leslie A. Tregenza, Kirkland Lake, testified he went to Rouyn and assisted in arresting Glick. He swore Glick admitted being in charge of the fur.

Alberta's C.C.F. Called To Organize

EDMONTON, July 27 — (CP). — A call to organize effectively for the next Alberta provincial election on the basic principle human welfare transcends all other problems was sounded to-day by William Irvine of Edmonton in his presidential address to the Alberta provincial convention of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

Organization of councils in 11 constituencies during July was reported by Mr. Irvine, former United Farmers of Alberta Member of Parliament for Westaskiwin. He said the Federataion aimed to have a constituency oragnization in each provincial constituency to contest the next election.

Expressing surprise at action of the United Farmers of Alberta at its January convention in affiliating with the C.C.F. federally but remaining independent provincially, Mr. Irvine also criticized the Social Credit government of Alberta as the "most notably complete failure" of modern governments.

After referring to the action of the U.F.A., Mr. Irvine said that whole major economic problems lie within the federal field there were many issues within the jurisdiction of the province that required application of C.C.F. principles.

The C.C.F. philosophy, declared Mr. Irvine, had many features which distinguished it from all other political parties and which should be reflected in a provincial as well as federal program.

Welfare First.

First of these, he said, was the principle "that the welfare and happiness of human beings within the borders of our province or our Dominion must take precedence to all else." Ample fulfillment of material needs was indispensable to human personality and in a country of abundance it was the first duty of a government to see that human needs were met.

Another feature that distinguished the C.C.F. from Liberals, Conservatives, Social Credit or Unity League supporters was that the C. C.F. stood for public ownership of public property.

"The mission of the C.C.F. is to recapture for the people of Canada the heritage of which they have been deprived," said Dr. Irvine. "Some of our alienated public property must be recaptured by the Federal government but some of it the Provincial government alone can recapture." The platform to be submitted to the convention would indicate to what extent public ownership might be furthered by a Provincial government.

Does Your Breath Broadcast— "I WEAR FALSE TEETH"?

Play Safe—Be Sure—Use Polident

Most people who wear plates or bridges suffer from a special kind of bad breath. Dentists call it—"denture breath."

You won't know if you have it—but it can spoil your happiness. Friends will shudder—people avoid you! And the worst of it is that ordinary brushing cannot prevent it. Neither will mouth washes. For the odor comes from a mucin-scum that collects on plates and bridges. This scum soaks up germs and decay bacteria and causes a vile odor that you cannot detect.

One thing can stop "denture breath"—and that's Polident! This new brushless cleaner has won the approval of thousands of dentists. Users say it's a blessing.

Polident not only purifies false teeth—but also removes all stain, tarnish and deposits. Makes breath sweeter—plates look better and feel better. Costs only 40¢ at any drug store and lasts for many weeks. Money back if not delighted.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

Prevents "Denture Breath"

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

Hepburn Party Unreported Over 14 Hours Is Found Safe In Alaska

Word Reaches Toronto As Cabinet And Mining Magnate's Office Call For Planes To Open Search

TORONTO, July 28 (CP).—J. P. Bickell's office announced at 2.53 p.m., E.D.T., today that it was informed by the Whitehorse and Yukon Railway that Premier Hepburn's air party made a landing last night at Carcross, about 40 miles south of Whitehorse.

The message to the head office here of McIntyre Gold Mines, of which Mr. Bickell is president, said the plane turned back last night because of fog after taking off from Whitehorse, Yukon, for Juneau, Alaska.

The brief message, giving no details, was sent by Rogers in reply to MacLaren's instructions to Rogers, head of the White-Pass Yukon railway, to despatch a seaplane and begin search immediately.

Call for Search

TORONTO, July 28 (CP).—The office here of J. P. Bickell, mining millionaire, has requested that all available commercial airplanes in the Yukon area search for the airplane containing Mr. Bickell, Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario and Bernard Smith, Millionaire New York broker. The plane, piloted by Jimmy Towne of Montreal, is more than 14 hours overdue on a 200-mile flight near Juneau, Alaska.

Cabinet Orders Action

TORONTO, July 28 (CP).—Following a meeting with cabinet ministers early this afternoon, acting premier Harry Nixon of Ontario announced arrangements had been completed with British Columbia for sending a search plane for Premier Hepburn and his party, overdue on a flight from Whitehorse, N.W.T., to Juneau, Alaska.

As hours passed without word of the Premier's party Mr. Nixon said the situation had become "very alarming."

He telephoned Premier Pattullo of British Columbia and made arrangements with that province to send out search planes as soon as weather conditions permitted. Weather in the Juneau area was reported unfavorable.

"We have also made arrangements with Northern Airways at Juneau, Alaska, to send out a search plane," the acting premier said.

Move To Forbid Sidley Probe Shelved Week

TORONTO, July 28 (CP).—Hearing of a motion for an injunction to prohibit continuance on an inquest into the death of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley was adjourned today for one week. C. A. Magone of the Ontario Governor-General's department requested the adjournment and stated Crown officials had not had sufficient time to prepare material in opposition to the motion.

Mr. Magone gave an undertaking that the inquest, scheduled to resume Tuesday, August 2, would not be continued until the motion for an injunction was heard. He added the Crown case would be completed on Friday or Saturday, and it was agreed the motion may be heard then instead of one week hence if a time can be arranged suitable to all counsel concerned and to Mr. Justice W. D. Roach who will hear it.

Mr. Justice Ainslee Greene, presiding today, agreed the material before him on the motion seemed insufficient. He was at first disposed to adjourn the hearing sine die, so counsel could arrange a convenient date with the following judge.

Better Separate Order

D. L. McCarthy, Counsel for Mrs. Sidley's executors, attempted then to have a separate order made by the court so he could question Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner, and Dr. Ray Farquharson, who attended Mrs. Sidley. Mr. Magone felt the material being prepared by the Attorney-General's Department might make unnecessary such examination.

The judge noted the "great amount of newspaper material there had been in the case, indicating widespread public interest. It was even more desirable than usual, then, that the matter should not be proceeded with in any undue haste, he said, as he declined to make a separate order covering the examinations.

By discussion of juge and counsel, a one week adjournment was agreed upon, subject to the undertaking of Mr. Magone that the inquest would not be proceeded with in the meantime. If arrangements could be made with Mr. Justice Roach sooner, the hearing will be held then.

Five Young Engineers Die In 700-Foot Mine Plunge

Sixth About To Enter Cage As It Drops Suspect Safety Cogs Gave Way

BOURLAMAQUE, Que., July 28 (CP).—Breathless drop of a runaway hoist cage killed five young mining engineers today in the depths of the Lamaque Mining Company's $1,000,000 No. 7 shaft. Four victims of the mad plunge died instantly and the fifth died in hospital about an hour later.

Just going to work, the five young mining engineers stepped into the box-like cage. Assistant Superintendent William Bennett, Toronto, was about to follow them into the hoist when it suddenly dropped from sight before his eyes, plummeting down into the blackness of the shaft.

Peter Downey, 24, Gleichen, Alta.; Harry Field, 32, Bourlamaque; James J. Crocker, 23, Toronto; and Arthur M. Hewat, 32, Halifax, met instant death. W. Clarke Isbister, 23, Toronto, received fatal injuries.

Downey and Crocker were graduates of the University of Toronto.

Think Cogs Slipped.

Mine officials said they did not know the cause of the accident. A new cable had been installed for the big cage only yesterday. An investigation was begun into the possibility that safety cogs, which hold the cable from slipping when the cage is not in motion, may have failed.

The plunge was from the ground level of the shaft, where the group of engineers had just stepped into the cage to be taken to work far underground.

William Bennett of Toronto, assistant superintendent of the $7,000,000 mine, was right behind the five men. He was just about to step into the box-line elevator when, before his eyes, it suddenly detached itself and hurtled down the black shaft.

Drop To Stop Block.

The shaft runs straight down for 700 feet. Then there is a "stop" blocking it off, before it starts down again for another 1,300 feet. Below that, there is a 1,600-foot slope to the 3,600 foot level. It was against the cement and timber top that the dropping car crumbled into a tangled mass of metal and twisted human flesh.

All but Isbister were dead when emergency rescue crews made their way to the spot. The young Toronto boy was barely able to gasp out a few words before lapsing into unconsciousness as he was carried up and brought to the hospital.

The tragedy brought up to 20 the number of lives claimed in the Northern Quebec district around here in mining accidents during the last eight weeks. Only Monday, two men were killed at nearby Perron when a 30-foot shaft caved in and buried them under rock and muck.

The Lamaque mine, biggest exclusive producer of gold in Quebec province, is located just outside Bourlamaque, about five miles north of Abitibi county's southern border. Opened five years ago, it is producing $4,000,000 worth of gold a year. It employs 800 men.

Dr. L. H. Forbes, president of the company operating the mine, was in the pit at the time of the accident. Neither he nor other officials issued any statement, but with other members of the company executive he began an investigation into the cause.

The accident, it was announced also, would be investigated by Roger Taschereau, inspector of the Quebec Bureau of Mines, who was to fly here from Noranda, Que. An inquest over the four victims will open later in the day.

2-Car Collision Kills Five

SASKATOON, July 28 (CP).—Five persons were killed and four others were hurt seriously in a head-on collision of two automobiles on a rise on highway 14 miles west of Perdue today. The dead:

William (Nick) Bazzor, 21, store employee, Wilkie.

Miss Betty Hants, 22, nurse, Wilkie.

Miss Jean Fischer, 24, nurse, Wilkie.

Edward Headman, Lacadena.

Mrs. K. A. McRitchie, Lacadena.

Seriously injured: K. A. McRitchie, Lacadena, taken to city hospital in Saskatoon; C. Christianson, 28, store employee, Wilkie, also in the hospital here; Jimmie Barbour, 21, of Wilkie, taken to Biggar Hospital; Ernest Thomas, 21, store employee, Wilkie, also taken to hospital at Biggar.

On Way Home From Fair

The Wilkie party, consisting of six young persons, had spent a day at the Saskatoon exhibition and was returning home, going west. The Lacadena party of three, all in the front seat of a car owned by Mr. Headman and driven by Mr. McRitchie, was travelling east to Saskatoon.

The Wilkie car caught fire after the accident. Charles Brady, address unknown, was asleep in a small car beside the road at the foot of the hill. The sound of the crash awakened him and he ran to the wrecked cars. He pulled the dead and injured from the burning car before the fire reached them.

Dr. P. D. Bennett, coroner of Perdue, has empanelled a jury for an inquest to be held Aug. 15.

District Crops Go Down In Cloudburst

While crops were ruined, telephone and electric wires were down, trees were uprooted and fences scattered by a terrific squall that struck down on this district shortly before noon today.

Corn was flattened as though by a roller and few farmers in the district believed it could be salvaged to any extent. At Lakefield electric wires were down on the farm of H. Clarke Garbutt, his corn and spring grains were flattened. Between Omemee and Peterborough at least 25 trees were uprooted and grain was pressed flat to the ground, even where it had been stooked.

A wind of high velocity accompanied the storm, causing a major portion of the damage suffered. Hail fell in some sections as large as ping pong balls. Farmers estimated that the wind reached a speed of at least 45 miles an hour, driving the rain before it with a thunderous screeching. More than an inch of water fell in Peterborough in less than half an hour, A. O. Phillips, official weatherman, reported. Sewers in the city were plugged and several inches of water flooded the sidewalks. On Townsend street near the Canadian General Electric plant, workers were faced with the problem of getting through the falling rain and two or three inches of water that was lying in the roadway.

Over Entire District

The storm struck with violence in all sections of Peterborough county. Farmers suffered their worst loss of the entire year, most of them being faced with almost complete destruction of spring crops. Telephone lines in half a dozen sections of the county were down and it was impossible to reach farmers in many districts.

From a score of farmers throughout the district came stories of the storm's violence. Some said the wind reached such a peak they could not see outside their windows. Others thought that hail was going to break the windows. The wind reached a sped seldom seen in this area, they said. It rocked the rain with terrific violence, slashed at the grain and moved it down as though by a machine.

In Peterborough lights flickered for some time, and a few wires were down, the Utilities Commission said.

No Trouble in City

There was surprisingly little trouble with city wires, R. L. Dobbin, public utilities manager, said. He had found only a few wires down, but said the commission had experienced trouble with outside current, suggesting that a bad storm had struck somewhere along the main line.

Payne Store Job A Comedy Of Errors Police Net Catches Constable; "F & G" Break Said Tipped By Lustic

Opening Wheeler Charge Entertains Gallery

Call it "The George Street Job" and spin it out to four or five reels of loosely knit drama with converging plot and action, a dash of danger, an interweaving comedy, a clashing climax in which the heroes are foiled, swiftly following anti-climax in which the villain is rounded up, and recurring in the background a character you can't clearly classify, finally spot it in a familiar location, and you have the broad pattern of circumstance and even in the first of the Wheeler charges against the police department as pieced together before Judge E. G. Deroche of Belleville, his assistants, and a full gallery in the city council chamber Wednesday afternoon.

The locale of this episode was Payne's butcher shop at the northwest corner of George and Perry streets. The time was between midnight and one o'clock on the night of October 1, 1937, and the principals were:

Bruce Menzies, county constable, who was tipped off on the burglary, and decided to play a lone-handed round up.

Police Constable Archie Menzies, son of Bruce, who learned separately about the tip off but from the same informant.

Police Constable W. Piercy who accompanied A. Menzies down to Perry street, rushed toward the store when it was entered, and helped bag B. Menzies as he dashed at the same moment out of the shadows and was closing in on the robber on his own account.

Roland Miles, the burglar, some time of Renfrew, wanted by the police for thefts of cars and other depredations, and now in the Guelph Reformatory.

Norman McIlmoyle, 297 Louis street, who tipped off the Menzies men without mutually advising each that he had also told the other.

And of course there were Judge Deroche, referee, Cecil G. Frost, K.C., of Lindsay who conducted the main examination; T. J. Carley, K.C., representing Chief Newhall; Joseph Wheeler, former constable, who started the recital of the story; various witnesses and other minor details. Chief Newhall hardly entered the picture of the first episode of the charges the dismissed constable had levelled against him.

The comic high light of the narrative was the excusable mistake of Constables Piercy and Menzies when they grabbed Bruce Menzies, and Archie "stuck a gun in his father's ear." There was no fooling about that, Constable Piercy implied recalling how peeved he was when Miles escaped during the diversion of the constables.

The Second Man

Still unexplained to Mr. Frost was the assertion of Bruce Menzies that he saw two men trying to get into the butcher shop, and the testimony of Piercy and A. Menzies that they saw only one burglar. And the figure in the background was Norman McIlmoyle who was in the neighborhood of the store, and so close by that he could run up and indicate to Piercy and A. Menzies the direction Miles had taken. Replying to Mr. Frost's pointed questions, Mc-

Planes Rushing Men To New Strike Outside Gogama

Sudbury, July 28.

DURING THE PAST few days, fifteen men a day have been flying in to Gogama, said to be the scene of the North's newest gold rush.

T. A. McArthur, mining recorder here, said about nine claims in that area had been recorded by prospectors today.

"We don't know much about it except that a lot of people are going out to a spot three miles south of Gogama Village. We have no idea what their claims are assaying," Mr. McArthur told The Globe and Mail.

Conversation with airport officials revealed that every possible plane has been hired for tomorrow to take prospectors to the scene of the strike.

Witness Recants Statement Given To Former Officer

Fred Lustic, Adeline Avenue, subpoenaed as police informant of a plot to break into Fitzpatrick and Geraghty's store at Hunter and Aylmer Streets on the night of November 6th last was a missing witness when his name was called at the hearing of the second of Jossph Wheeler's charges against the police administration before Judge E. G. Dercche at the city hall this morning.

Cecil G. Frost, K.C., Lindsay, assisting in the enquiry said Lustic was last seen with a club bag "going in the opposite direction". He was subpoenaed with other witnesses a week ago.

Wheeler's charge in the F. and G. store robbery was simply that the police had information before hand that it was likely to take place, "and it could have been avoided because it was framed."

All the witness connected with the second charge were examined this morning except Chief Newhall, and following his testimony this afternoon, Mr. Frost intimated that the Max Vincent incident would be dealt with next in order.

Evidence this morning showed that Lustic had informed Constable Archie Menzies that two unnamed men were planning to break into two F. and G. stores, the one at Aylmer and Hunter Streets, and the other on Hunter Street east. Witnesses denied Wheeler's charge two constables had conspired with Lustic or others to break into the Aylmer Street store.

Wheelers Evidence.

"About 11 p.m. November 6," Joseph Wheeler said, "Sergeant Thompson was in charge of the police station. He told me not to go north of Simcoe street on Aylmer, nor west of Chambers street. At 12 p.m. a man named Sanderson, who has a store opposite the F. & G. shop came in and said he saw a man going into the Fitzpatrick and Geraghty store. He thought it was Archie Menzies.

Thompson said, "Okay; if you hear anything let us know." Later Thompson and Menzies brought in Arthur Moore, 16. They said the other man was Joe Fontaine, Lake street, but that he had got away. Dr. O'Brien, Mr. Fitzpatrick, and Mr. Freeman were talking over the case in the station, and from their description, I thought they were talking about Lustic as a fellow they had seen outside the store. I arrested Fontaine later on an assault charge and took a statement from him."

The statement asserted that Fred Lustic, on November 6, "did ask me to break into the F. and G. store at Hunter and Aylmer streets, but I would not go. He asked me at 7.30 p.m. and again at midnight."

"I arrested Fontaine for assault, but he wasn't charged with another of robbing the store. I had seen Lustic several time and I thought something was going to happen that night. Piercy and Menzies figured in the arrest, so I concluded that it had been planted beforehand."

Hotel Unroofed, Cars Wrecked In Lindsay Gale

(Special to The Examiner)

LINDSAY, July 28—A violent rain and wind storm swept Lindsay this morning leaving a scene of destruction in its wake.

The wind swept the roof off the western section of the Foster Block at the corner of Kent and William streets and carried it over 150 feet. A portion of it fell on the main thoroughfare in front of the Hotel Benson, while another section was blow on the top of the hotel roof and hung menacingly off the side.

The street was completely blocked with debris and some half dozen cars parked on either side of the street were crushed in, some of them damaged beyond repair. One car on the south side of the street and immediately opposite the Benson House, contained a woman and she is believed to be badly injured. She was rescued from the car and rushed to the hospital. Planks, bricks, etc., penetrated the roof of the car and were even blown through the windows. The woman's escape was miraculous.

Guests in Panic.

Men mounted the roof of the Benson House and at great risk pulled the overhanging section of the roof from the Foster Block back to the rear. The guests in the Hotel Benson as well as the clerks in the stores in the area affected by the storm were thrown into a panic. Crowds gathered on the thoroughfare to witness the destruction wrought, and the police were obliged to keep them from the danger zone. Men are at work cleaning up the debris which completely blocked traffic. Considerable damage was done in other parts of the town, and many trees were blown down. Telephonic

Lack Of Fog Along Airline Rates Canada Tops

Last night the transport minister addressed a meeting of the Regina board of trade, his third speech in as many Saskatchewan cities in one day. He spoke in Saskatoon in the morning, Prince Albert in the afternoon and Regina at night.

Trans-Canada Airways will shortly have the best trans-continental air route on the continent and the Lethbridge-Edmonton branch would be an important link in the air route to the Orient, he said there.

The fact that there was little fog on the route was the factor that would make it the best on the continent, the minister said.

The minister forecast that as a result of recent conversations between officials of the British and Canadian governments large scale manufacturing plants would shortly be established in Canada, coupled with training school development for British and Canadian flyers which would give impetus to air development in this country.

He stated that air mail and express service would be started on the Montreal to Vancouver section of T.C.A. by Oct. 1, and that passenger service "would not be very many months away."

Mr. Howe said the department now had 40 highly trained pilots for transport service who came to the department on a minimum requirement of 1,000 hours of flying in the northern commercial service.

Terrific Downpour Floods Barrie

BARRIE, Ont., July 28—(CP)—The Barrie district was visited by a terrific electrical and hail storm which laster half an hour this morning. Jagged, sharp-pointed pieces of hail, up to two and a half inches in length, fell on Streets and gardens.

The main business section was flooded as cellars filled and sewers backed up, and Barrie fire brigade was called out to pump out cellars. Rain poured in torrents for half an hour.

Damage was done to district crops. Fields of barley and oats and other crops were flattened, and the rain soaked the wheat and other grains which had been cut and lying in the fields.

Faster Promotion For British Army

LONDON, July 28 (A.P.).—Great Britain announced two new moves to-day to hasten defence preparedness on the 24th anniversary of Austro-Hungary's fateful declaration of war against Serbia.

The anniversary of this historic event which plunged the world into conflict virtually was forgotten here in the rush to make Great Britain's armaments so formidable that no country would dare provoke a new war.

To-day's moves were:

Leslie Hore-Belisha, War Secretary, carried his revolutionary changes in the Army a step further in promising faster promtions and other features designed to attract men into the service.

He disclosed that wealth or social position no longer would be necessary for admission into Sandhurst Military Academy.

Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, at the same time promised speedy action on plans for evacuating the civilian population of London an dother densely-settled places in event of war.

Higher Pensions.

Mr. Hore-Belisha, who already has shaken up the Army at the top by retiring some older officers announced these new steps to make the service branches more popular:

Lower retirement ages and higher retirement pay.

Increased service pay with faster promotions based on time rather htan vacancies.

Creation of officers from the ranks without regard to whether they had passed through the Cadet Colleges at Sandhurst and Woolwich.

Scholarships offering free education at these colleges for youths whose parents are unable to pay for sending them there.

More than 2,000 officers will be promoted when the new rules become effective on August 1.

Chamberlain Drops Fishing To See Hitler's Aide

LONDON, July 28—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain delayed leaving for his annual fishing trip in Scotland today so he could meet Chancellor Hitler's adjutant to try to hasten the Anglo-German "understanding" the Prime Minister has long desired.

Mr. Chamberlain decided to remain at his official country home over the week-end to receive the envoy, Captain Fritz Wiedemann, reported to be bringing a new message fro mthe German Fuehrer.

Wiedemann came here last Monday to discuss European political appeasement with Viscount Halifax, Foreign Secretary, just before the latter went to Paris to review the International situation with French officials.

The political editor of the Daily Mail (independent) reported Wiedemann would arrive Friday and that his informal conversations with the Prime Minister would include the subject of an air pact between Great Britain and the Reich.

Any exchange between them would be merely preliminary and unofficial, although it might lay the foundation for formal conferences of officially-accredited diplomatic representatives.

Runciman Leaves Aug. 1

Since it was understood Viscount Runciman, newly-named British observer in the Czechoslovak dispute over minority rights, would leave for Praha Aug. 1, he would have time before then to see Wiedemann—although some observers believe Chamberlain does not regard settlement of the Sudeten German agitation in Czechoslovakia as an essential preliminary of any sort of Anglo-German understanding.

Addressing the House of Lords yesterday, Lord Halifax appealed for International sincerity, particularly in the Czechoslovak problem which, he said, would take a genius to solve.

Lord Halifax also warned Japan that Great Britain intends to protect her interests in China.

"We are quite ready to consider and already are considering possible action open to us if we do not secure adequate consideration for interests we have a right to protect," he said.

NEW YORK, July 28.

TO ESCAPE the noise and confusion of civilization, Lincoln Ellsworth, who has flown over both North and South Poles, was on the high seas tonight for his fourth expedition into the Antarctic.

His First Binge

BELLEVILLE, Ont., July 28.—(CP).—A certain Belleville youngster may never feel so prosperous again, but for a few hours yesterday he led the life of a millionaire. Somehow he got hold of $17, belonging to his grandmother, and he made a beeline for the shopping district. After a frantic search, he was found in a movie house, with a new $2 watch, a shiny cap pistol, a flashlight and numerous other articles held precious by nine-year-olds. Eleven dollars were left, after his wild spending

Drew Suggests War Aces Build Airforce

GUELPH, July 28.—Striking a new note in his persistent agitation for the immediate rebuilding of the Canadian Air Force, Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew last night suggested that Canada should enlist the services of three men, whom he referred to as the greatest living wartime pilots.

Speaking before the annual meeting of the Canadian Veterinary Association, Colonel Drew declared that Air Vice-Marshal Colonel W. A. Bishop, V.C.; Air Commodore Raymond Collishaw, D.S.O. and Wing Commander Donald McLaren, D.S.O., as a national duty, even at a sacrifice to themselves, should be urged to join in the rebuilding of the Canadian Air Force. It is a matter of national importance that three of the greatst living wartime pilots are Canadians, he said. Colonel Bishop and Wing Commander McLaren are in Canada, while Collishaw occupies a senior position in the Royal Air Force in England, declared Colonel Drew. Colonel Bishop is not in the Flying Corps at all now, and McLaren is in charge of the Western Division of Trans-Canada Airways.

Inspire Canadians

"It seems to me that it would be a great inspiration to young Canadians to have these men, who were outstanding pilots in the war, connected with the Canadian Air Force. It would also be particularly valuable to have men with their decorations and standing in charge of the training here if we are going to train British pilots in Canada," Colonel British pilots in Canada," said Colonel Drew.

"The offer made to train British pilots in the Canadian Air Force is absolutely meaningless. Canada today hasn't machines with which they could train pilots capable of flying modern military aircraft. It would be suicide to train a pilot in our pursuit planes, with a top speed of 150 miles an hour, and then have to put them in the Hawkes-Hurricanes, with a top speed of over 400 miles an hour," he declared.

The same contrast could be drawn between the Canadian bombers known as Wapitis, with a cruising speed of 145 miles an hour, and the British Blenheim bombers with a cruising sped of over 300 miles an hour.

Colonel Drew dealt with the air situation to Canada generally and made particular reference to the wonderful things accomplished in aviation in the Northland.

In his criticism of the Canadian Air Force, he said that none of the planes for delivery to the force were up-to-date machines.

Visitor Is Robbed In Toronto Hotel

TORONTO, July 28.—An armed robber bound and gagged a New York City visitor in a hotel room yesterday afternoon and escaped with $136 in cash, a $100 set of platinum cuff links, a wrist watch and a gold watch chain.

The gunman spent nearly half an hour in the room, searching for the money, while Harry J. Coslove of New York fumed helplessly on the floor.

The guest answered a rap on the door of his room on the ninth floor of the Ford Hotel and was confronted by a tall, well-built man holding a black revolver in his hand. Coslove was backed into the room, where the robber bound his hands and feet with shoe laces, which Coslove said his attacker took from his pocket.

A towel was stuffed in Coslove's mouth, before he was forced to lie on the floor face down, he told Detectives John O'Driscoll and Frank Wilson. After a long search the robber found the roll of bills on the dresser, hidden under Coslove's hat.

communications with all points in the district is demoralized. Rumors are current that considerable damage was done throughout the country, but it is impossible to get accurate information. The town is without electric power.

Hotel Roof Lifted.

Further examination of the destruction wrought by the storm disclosed the fact that a section of the roof of the Benson Hotel (about 30 feet square) was completely lifted and the greater portion of it was carried to the street. The large windows in the hotel front were shattered by the debris. The driver of the Langlois Laundry truck, who was in the hotel laundry at the time, was struck by lightning and thrown across the room. He escaped serious injury however. The driving rain poured into the hotel through the opening in the roof and did considerable damage. Mr. Walter Hyatt, with Mr. W. Nugent, manager of the hotel, was overcome during the storm and required medical attention.

Reports from the Ross Hospital state that the person taken from the wrecked car in front of the Hotel Benson was Miss Theo. Peacock, of White River. She was suffering badly from shock. The hospital authorities are amazed that she escaped without further injuries.

Factories Stalled.

The manufacturing plants are badly handicapped because of lack of electrical power, as only a couple of them have auxiliary plants.

The large barn on the property of John O'Hallorn, Angeline street was moved six inches off its foundation by the storm, and a portion of the roof blown off.

Move To Forbid

tion was filed Tuesday by D. L. McCarthy, K.C., acting for four executors of the estate of Mrs. Sidley, who died here July 6 at the home of W. Perkins Bull and was buried at Racine, Wis., her home. Mr. McCarthy held the order for an inquest was "without jurisdiction . . . in the absence of the body of the deceased woman."

Dr. H. A. Bruce, former Lieutenant Governor Ontario and Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner, were refused permission to examine Mrs. Sidley about 30 hours before her death, W. Perkins Bull stated in a sworn affidavit filed at Osgoode Hall before Mr. Justice Ainslee Greene adjourned hearing of the motion. Mr. Bull's motion was filed to support the motion of the four executors: William Horlick, B. F. Farrand, Andrea Pultz and Bernard F. Magruder, all of Racine.

Preliminary session of the inquest was held Tuesday despite protests by Mr. McCarthy to coroner Lawson that the order was without jurisdiction. Only two witnesses were heard, Thomas Bull Youngest son of W. Perkins Bull, and the latter's chauffeur, John Moore.

The Bull Affidavit.

Mr. Bull's affidavit was filed to support the motion brought by four executors of the Mrs. Sidley's estate to prohibit an inquest into her death on the grounds that the order for it is "without jurisdiction. . . .in the absence of the deceased person." Mrs. Sidley, whose estate was valued at $2,300,000, was buried at Racine, Wis., her home. She had been visiting at Mr. Bull's home for more than a year prior to her death.

Mr. Bull's affidavit set out that at the time of Mrs. Sidley's death, on July 6, 1938, she was a guest in his home at 3 Meredith Crescent, Toronto. The affidavit continued:

"At about midnight on Monday the fourth day of July, 1938, William Sidley, the son of the said deceased, telephoned to me at my said home and stated that he was at 189 St. George Street, the home of Dr. Smirle Lawson, and that I must know that Smirle Lawson is the Chief Coroner of Toronto.

"He further stated that his uncle Alex., a brother of the deceased, and his uncle Will Sidley, a brother of the divorced husband of the deceased, had engaged Chief Coroner Emirle Lawson and the Hon. Herbert A. Bruce, M.D., a former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, and that it was the wish of the two uncles aforesaid that Dr. Lawson and Dr. Bruce see and examine the said deceased. I replied: 'Isn't it too early for a coroner, Bill?'

"After some further conversation I stated that the question as to whether or not Dr. Bruce and Dr. Lawson should consult with the diotors attending Mrs. Sidley was for the latter doctors to decide.

"Dr. Ian Macdonald was in my house at the time of the above telephone conversation which I had had with William Sidley and he then spoke to William over the telephone in my presence.

Phone Again for Consent.

"Later at about 1.30 a.m. on July 5th William Sidley telephoned Dr. Farquharson and advised him that Dr. Bruce and Dr. Lawson were dressed and ready to attend at my house for the purpose of examining the patient and asked Dr. Farquharson if he would consent to consultation at once.

"Dr. Farquharson advised William Sidley that in his opinion and in the opinion of the other attending physicians it was not in the interest of the patient to have a consultation at that hour of night. Dr. Smirle Lawson thereupon spoke to Dr. Farquharson over the telephone and requested permission to examine the patient forwith. Dr. Farquharson gave Dr. Lawson the same reply as he had given William Sidley.

"The death of the said deceased occurred in the morning of the 6th of July, 1938, and on the evening of that day her body was sent by train to Racine, in the state of Wisconsin, one of the United States of America, and was there entombed in a mausoleum on the 11th day of July, 1938. To the best of my information and belief her body has not been returned to Canada since that date. (Signed) W. P. Bull."

VANCOUVER, July 28 (CP).—A brief but spectacular fire along Vancouver's waterfront left in its wake today seven injured and damage estimated at $1,000,000. Of the injured none was hurt seriously.

The 1,000-foot pier "D" of the Canadian Pacific Railway and its super-structure of passenger and freight buildings was reduced to debris by the blaze, brought under control an hour or so after it started yesterday.

The waterfront was threatened by the fast-travelling flames. In addition to the $500,000 pier, a road camp, a freight shed and four box cars and much merchandise were destroyed.

Four firemen suffered burns, another was knocked unconscious by a flying hose and a sixth suffered a dislocated knee. Tony Cardoni, a redcap, was knocked unconscious when struck on the head by a falling box.

The firemen burned escaped greater injury by diving into the water when the wooden fender from which they were working caught fire. A tug-boat rescued them.

Defies All Control

Within an hour of the time the blaze was first discovered at the northwest end of the pier, the structure was a mass of shooting flame and smoke that defied all efforts to bring it under control until worst of the blaze subsided.

The steamships Princess Charlotte and Princess Adelaide were moved hurriedly into the harbor stream, just in time to avoid onrush of the flames.

For a time it was feared the flames, shooting 100 feet into the air and throwing a tremendous heat, would spread to pier B-C where the Empress of Russia was docked. The B-C pier was kept well doused and the Empress got up steam in preparation for a hurried departure, but the flames were checked in time.

Fear was expressed also, that burning embers might be carried by an increase in wind into tinder-dry Stanley Park, Vancouver's famous natural forest playground.

Flames from the pier spread to the ramp leading from it to the foot of Granville street and the railway depot, causing it to collapse into the railway yard below. The depot was unharmed, although its lighting and telephone system were disrupted.

Space Cleared Half Mile

Spreading eastward, the flames attacked wooden sheds and dock planking. So fast did the fire advance that police warned spectators from docks half a mile away, for fear the blaze would sweep the entire waterfront. Oil storage tanks in the railway's freight yards escaped damage.

Police investigated possibilities of incendiarism, saying the fire had broken out beneath the pier in the section where there was considered to be no hazard.

Pier "D" was 1,000 feet long and 250 feet wide with accommodation for eight coastal vessels. It was built in 1913 and extended in 1930.

Payne Store

Wheeler declared that Archie Menzies "told me he and Piercy were in the store before the break-in took place."

Mr. Frost—"Did Menzies tell you where he got the information?" "No."

"You assumed it was Lustic?" "Yes."

"Do you say Lustic was a special friend of Archie Menzies?"

"I wouldn't say that. Lustic was a friend of McIlmoyle, and McIlmoyle was a friend of A. Menzies."

Wheeler told Mr. Frost that the "other man" arrested with Moore was supposed by Menzies to be Fontaine, but Fontaine had refused to take part in the break-in. The second man, then, was Gahagan.

"It was going to be Joe Fontaine, but he wouldn't go, so Lustic got Gahagan.

"Piercy caught Moore, but Menzies was lodged in the ice box and the other fellow got away."

"Did he lock himself in?"

"I dont know. Piercy let him out."

Mr. Frost— "Assuming all your suspicions are correct, tell us what is improper about it."

"Because the police allowed men to break into the store."

"Should the police stand in the front of a door where they thought a break-in was going to take place?"

"No; but they could hide and watch. The thieves broke in the front door of the F. & G. store."

Wheeler said one of the things that should have been done was to stop Lustic from "trying to get those boys to do the job."

Similar to Payne's.

Mr. Frost—"What you say is that this robbery was similar to Payne's?"

"Yes. It was practically the same."

Too Mr. Carley, witness said that on the Sunday after the break-in Joe Fontaine told him Lustic had asked him to do the job.

Mr. Carley—"How did you get possession of the statement by Fontaine?"

"He made a duplicate of it and signed it."

"Why did you get two?"

"Because you can't trust Chief Newhall."

"How long is it since you couldn't trust the Chief?"

"Since I joined the force."

Mr. Carley—"Where are other duplicates you got during the years.

Wheeler said he had no others now. He had destroyed papers and correspondence.

"You needed this one because you knew you were in difficulty?"

Wheeler denied he was in trouble with the Chief, but admitted that he had been sent to the station by the Chief from the police ball, but denied he was drunk.

"Did you take duplicate statements from everybody you arrested?"

"No. Just when I thought it was necessary."

Wheeler swore that Constable Rogers was present when he took the Fontaine statement.

"Would Rogers surmise you were doing duty?"

"I don't know what he thought."

Wheeler said Lustic should have been arrested for vagrancy, "hanging around the Hunter street corner at that time of night."

Witness said the report that the F. & G. store, Hunter street, was being watched at the same time was "all bunk."

"Lustic came to the station Sunday night and asked if Gahagan was still in. I asked him if he wanted to see him. He said "no." He seemed to be "tickled to death" that Gahagan was locked up."

Informed by Lustic

Constable A. Menzies testified that Lustic had told him on the preceding Friday he heard two chaps talking about breaking into a "F. and G" store.

One of them had said there was $500 in a flour sack.

Mr. Frost—"Did Lustic tell you who they were?"

"No; but he said one of them was a red head."

Mr. Frost—Why did you and Piercy enter the store?

"There was nothing else we could do. It was Saturday night, a busy corner, well lighted. Piercy consulted Mr. Fitzpatrick and he consented to us going in."

Constable Menzies said he did not get locked in the ice box.

"I hid in it. It was the only place I could find to hide in. When they broke in the door, Piercy yelled and I ran out and helped him. The other fellow got away. I thought it was Gahagan."

"Did you ever give Lustic anything?"—"No sir."

"It is alleged you and Piercy combined a frame up with Lustic?"

"That's a lie, the whole thing."

Joseph Fontaine

Joe Fontaine, 18, swore that the statement he had signed and given to Mr. Wheeler was not true.

"You made it up out of the whole cloth?"

"Yes. It was dictated to me by Wheeler."

"Was anyone else present?"—"No."

"Was there any reward to you?"—"Wheeler said he'd get me off if I signed a statement against Lustic."

"Were you subsequently let off?"—"No. I was charged with hitting Hugh Imming."

"How many copies of the statement did you sign?" Mr. Frost asked.

"Just that one."

"One or two?"—"One."

Fontaine said no one tried to frame him. "I always got what I deserved."

Alphonse Fontaine, father of the preceding witness, said Wheeler remarked when the boy was arrested—"they're blaming this boy around the police station." I said—"If they are I'll get after them."

Approached By Lustic

Martin Gahagan, another youth, said he met Lustic at 11.30 o'clock the night of November 6 last. "I was up at the dance, Lustic asked me if I wanted to make some easy money. He also asked me if I had seen Fontaine. He said he couldn't find Joe. After that I can't clearly recall what happened. I had been drinking. All I remember is that I was pulled out of bed about 3 in the morning."

In the F. and G. break in Arthur Moore, 16, pleaded guilty and got three months in the reformatory. A charge against Gahagan was withdrawn. Gahagan denied that he was in the store.

Mr. Carley—"Did you talk this matter over with Wheeler?"—"Yes, today."

"What did he tell you?"

"He told me to tell the whole truth."

Mr. Frost informed Judge Deroche that Fred Lustic had been served a subpoena but was now missing. "The last seen of him he was going in the opposite direction with a club bag," Mr. Frost added.

Saw One Statement

Constable John Rogers, next witness, said he had seen Joe Fontaine sign only one statement at the police station.

Mr. Carley—"Was any inducement made to him?"

"Not in my presence. I entered a report of the statement. Wheeler asked me to leave the statement with him as he wanted to see it. I left it oh the Sergeant's desk when I went off duty."

Sergeant Thompson said he had issued the order to Constable Naples, Wheeler and Sexsmith to keep away from the F. & G. store corner. He did so on instruction from the Chief.

"Piercy informed me some one was going to break in, and two men were put on to watch the store. We didn't want the constables to go that way because they might give it away."

Confidence In Piercy

Concluding the Payne charge hearing this morning, Chief Newhall said that in the light of the evidence Wednesday he believed Norman McIlmoyle was trying to help Constable Menzies in telling him what he had heard from Roland Miles.

"Menzies was a pro boxer, and that's how it comes about he had quite a liking for McIlmoyle," the Chief said. "I believe Menzies had a boxing club at one time, and McIlmoyle was a young fellow who belonged to it."

Mr. Frost—"Did you have any personal contact with McIlmoyle?"

"None whatever. I had him through my hands as a little boy, but I had thought he had got away entirely from that sort of thing."

Chief Newhall said he considered the charges by Wheeler regarding Piercy and Menzies were actuated by jealousy. He had confidence in both officers, and Piercy especially had done a lot of valuable work.

Mr. Frost—"Was there any unfairness in giving Piercy and Menzies the opportunity of going to the Payne store?"

"They were both off duty, and they could put in their time at that extra work if they wished. They were doing it on their own time, and it should be remembered we have only fifteen men."

"Did you issue the order the constables were not to go below the C.P.R.?"

"I did not. When the Sergeant comes on duty I don't interfere with him, execpt perhaps to check up."

Chief Newhall said that Piercy was working for him at his home when he was engaged as a police officer. "He had worked for me a year or two, and it was because of what I had found him that I recommended him for a position on the force."

Imagination Says Chief

Chief Constable Samuel Newhall was the first witness called when the afternoon session of the Police investigation began in the council chamber.

To Mr. Frost, he said, he had heard all the evidence on this charge. "The charge made by Wheeler is pure imagination or deliberate lieing," the Chief declared.

The witness said Wheeler could not have seen Piercy and Menzies talking to McIlmoyle or Lustic near the rest station. He had had Wheeler under observation that night, the Chief stated.

"Will you tell me what your knowledge of the whole affair is," asked Mr. Frost.

Chief Newhall said that he had been informed by Piercy that Menzies had "had another brain wave." And when he questioned the latter, Menzies had stated that he had been informed one of the F. and G. Stores was to be burglarized and afterwards had said it was one of the Hunter Street stores. Chief Newhall said he had detailed officers Clark and Stevenson to the Ashburnham store and Piercy and Menzies to the Hunter and Aylmer Streets stores. He said he had reproached Piercy and Menzies afterward for going inside, but had been told that it was impossible to find a place to hide outside where they could watch the front door.

Chief Newhall said that orders had been given that the man on the beat keep away from the store.

The witness declared that he had no conversation with either Lustic or Gahagan prior to the break-in.

"Did you have any conversation with Moore?"

"Not for several months."

"The main conversation was with Piercy and Menzies?" "Yes."

No Right To Take Statement.

Chief Newhall said that until a few days ago he had no knowledge of a statement being taken from Fontaine. Wheeler had no right to take such a statement. Chief Newhall declared that he had not been given a copy of the report. He suggested that Wheeler had taken the copy from the report form on the sergeant's desk and that was the reason why he had not secured the report.

"You are confident that he report is not on the files?"

"We have searched everywhere for it."

The report spoken of by Rogers would be on the desk all night the Chief declared.

If he had received the report, it would have been given to the Crown Attorney, but it had never reached his office, the witness stated.

Mr. Frost called attention to the fact that Rogers' evidence was that the statement was made out at ten minutes to 4 o'clock and that Rogers and Wheeler had gone off duty together at 4 o'clock.

Chief Newhall said in regard to charge that he had shown favoritism to Officer Menbzies said that he had disciplined Menzies twice recently. As to Piercy the Chief said he was an officer above reproach at all times.

Of Wheeler he said that he had been an excellent officer for five years and then had sold himself to bootleggers.

Warrant For Lustic

At this stage Mr. Frost asked that the name of Fred Lustic should be called and when there was no response, asked that a bench warrant be issued for the missing witness.

Orville Moore, bailiff, testified that he had served Lustic with a subpoena at his home.

"He ought to be brought here," declared Judge Deroche as he announced willingness to issue a warrant.

Hankow Orders Civilians To Flee Area

SHANGHAI, July 28.— (AP). — Tankow authorities ordered the quick evacuation to-day of all civilians in that populous area as Japanese troops moved relentlessly north-westward from Kiukiang.

The command showed growing Chinese fears for the metropolitan Wuhan area—Wuchang, Tanyang and Hankow, General Chiang Kai-Shek's headquarters and provisional capital—and authorities' desires to avoid the needless sacrifice of non-combatants in expected Japanese air raids.

The Japanese offensive to-day entered Hupeh province, the 11th of 24 Chinese provinces to be involved in the conflict. The Wuhan cities are Hupeh, which was 71,000 square miles and 29,000,000 population. The entrance to Hupeh was made possible by the Japanese occupation Tuesday of Kiukiang, 136 miles down the Yangtse from Hankow and only 100 air-miles distant from the temporary capital.

Claim Counter Attack.

Reports of developments on the Kiukiang front were conflicting. The Chinese admitted loss of the city but maintained their forces reorganized south-west of Kiukiang and launched a counter-offensive while huge fires were raging there.

Japanese reports were that Chinese opposition in the area was shattered and that both Japanese naval and infantry units were advancing westward virtually unopposed.

Chiese sources said the defenders dug into new defence lines 20 miles up the Yangtse from Kiukiang and just ahead of the Japanese. The new positions were said to run south from Lungping, on the north bank of the stream, to Telan, 30 miles south of Kiukiang, on the Nanchang railroad.

Dull, featureles strading was the order of the day, with operations local and routine. Export business was estimated at 200,000 bushels, and included old crop and durums.

Some buying appeared and was credited to overseas accounts, but it was limited.

Chief responsible for the higher tendencies to-day were reports of slim rainfall in the West and strength at Liverpool. Interest was at low ebb during the middle part of the session and prices fell somewhat but rallies were noted in the closing exchanges.

WORPLESDON, Surrey, England, July 28.—(CP Cable).—Henry Percival Biggar, 66, author and chief archivist for Canada in Europe, who in 1926 discovered a bust of General Wolfe, was found dead Tuesday outside the door of his home here. The bust of General Wolfe was one of the outstanding finds of Mr. Biggar's career. Reproductions were placed in the public archives at Ottawa, the National Portrait Gallery, London, Quebec House, Westerham, and in other places.

Loyalists Smash Rebel Lines Back

HENDAYE, France, July 28 (AP) (AP).—Government troops were reported today to have driven within three miles of insurgent headquarters at Gandesa in a sudden offensive along the Ebro River front in eastern Spain.

Dispatches from Insurgent General headquarters insisted only a few opposing troops had managed to cross the broad Ebro in Monday morning's surprise attack and that those were annihilated.

Advices from government lines indicated government militiamen had made a 12-mile advance in two days and firmly established themselves in Los Caballos mountains in positions dominating Gandesa, where insurgents attempting to sever Catalonia from the rest of government Spain defeated government fighters April 2.

So firmly were the government troops established, Barcelona bulletins said, that heavy artillery could be brought acros sthe Ebro and installed in mountains. Village after village, in insurgent hands for more than three months, were listed as captured.

A government communique announced also the capture of seven strategic hills and 3,000 prisoners in 24 hours.

Only One Way Open

It must be that some people who drive motor cars are stubbornly wedded to their ways. In Peterborough there has been another case of a man charged with and convicted of driving while drunk, and he has been sent to jail and in addition his car has been impounded for three months. That means he will not be able to make use of it until the end of October and then he will have to pay the charges for having stored it.

This is not the only place where these cases occur. In courts in various communities the same thing is taking place. When the law was changed making the impounding of the car mandatory it was believed that a new influence had been brought into the fight to make people quit drinking and driving at the same time. Certainly the law is stiff, but it is not sufficient to attain the object in mind—the elimination of drunken driving.

It must be such drivers are quite certain they can go ahead and defy the law and get away with it. One can hardly conceive of an individual drinking and driving if he had reason to believe he would go to jail and lose the use of his car for three months. The ease with which a drink can be secured may have something to do with it, but back of that there must be a stubbornness on the part of the individual or else a lamentable weakness.

The only way to meet the situation is to proceed with the unchanged enforcement of that law which puts drivers in jail and takes the car away. Repetition of that sentence may in time drive it into thick skulls that the law means just what it says.

Nerve Or What?

The Timmins Press tells of the rather daring exploit of Coroner E. R. Tucker of the district of Cochrane, which is described as a "tremendous territory" in which to work. There had been a shooting at Hooker's Creek, and Louis Lee had been blamed for the death of a fellow settler.

The man who is alleged to have done the shooting was barricaded in his house with lamps burning in the windows, and he had made the old threat that no man was going to come and take him alive. He probably meant it and he was armed and ready for an attack.

That was the scene when Coroner Tucker arrived. He was not armed and he had no officers of the law with him or near him. Only the terrified neighbors were in the district. The Coroner's solution was simple and direct. He walked toward the house and knocked on the door. He was met by the man with the gun who could see at once the visitor was not armed.

The result was that the Coroner left the house in a short time and Louis Lee came along with him fully persuaded that the best thing he could do was leave his home and give himself up voluntarily to the police, and that was done. How many men would have risked that procedure we do not know, but we are right enough in stating there are few of them who would have walked unarmed and alone into the house of an armed man who was making threats that he was prepared to shoot any one who came near.

Accidents In a Year

In the report of the Ontario Municipal Board for 1937 is a table showing the number of accidents on lines of the Toronto Transportation Commission. The record is:

Collisions with autos	3543
Motorcycles and bicycles	76
With wagons	73
People boarding cars injured	149
Alighting from cars	280
Falling within cars	393
Miscellaneous	406

That makes a total of 4,920 accidents for the year, which would make a daily avearge of 13.47. Of course there are many street cars operating in a city the size of Toronto; there are streets on which room is limited. But the cars have been running for years and they do not travel at high speed. A street car is a big thing; it is easy to see and it is known in advance it cannot change its course. And yet in one year there were 4,920 accidents in which 882 persons were injured and six killed, although none of the fatalities were visited upon passengers.

Why He Took His Life

As a rule when a virtually unknown man in South Africa commits suicide it is something in which few persons in this country would be interested. That was the manner of ending the life of B. F. Vanniekirk, an artist and designer.

During the recent election he produced a poster for election purposes in which he depicted the undesirable features of marriage between white women and natives. The poster when displayed during the heat of an election aroused intense indignation in many places and it actually did more harm than good as far as the results of the contest were concerned.

It was as a result of that poster that Vanniekirk took his own life, and at the inquest it was explained that the thing he had created caused his death. He felt he had offered an irretrievable insult to the womanhood of South Africa. Friends argued with him that producing the poster was all in the days' work for him, and he was merely getting out something which one of the parties wanted to use in the campaign. The designer is reported to have contended he had done a wrong which he could not recall and by so doing he had blasted his own career.

Not often is there opportunity for hearing so definite a delineation of a man's motives for wishing to take his life. There is nothing in it to suggest it was the working of a sick mind, but rather it was the reasoning of a man who was keenly sensitive about an injury which he had done to other people. He was probably a perfectly normal man mentally when he did away with himself.

What He Says Is So

Dr. William Menzie Whitelaw of the Dominion Archives staff has been in Australia and on his return was asked to speak before a service club in Ottawa. Dr. Whitelaw reasoned that Australia knew very little about Canada and Canada in turn knew little about Australia. One statement was:

"One wonders how long an empire that is supposed to be a commonwealth or family of nations can continue if the only contacts that are made are through trade treaties."

We dare say the Ottawa man is right when he holds that Canadians know little about Australia, and that Australians would be hard put if asked to tell in detail what they know about our country.

The truth is we are concerned pretty much with our own affairs, and it is difficult enough to find a good reason why that should not be the case. The average man has his own peculiar problems to meet every day in the week and they call for rather close application. If a man is not working and wondering when or where he is going to get a chance to become occupied then he is not worrying much about Australia or any other place else. His whole attention is taken up with his own particular case.

In the sphere of government and administration we have problems in a municipal, provincial and federal way which seem to call for more attention than most people are inclined to give them. Just how or when or where we could do something about knowing Australia better or becoming more familiar with the people there is a question for which we have no answer. The only thing which gives us a connecting link with Australia is the fact that we each owe allegiance to the British Crown.

The Organ Stool Was Handy

A correspondent writing to a weekly paper in Western Ontario records this item:

"Mr. and Mrs. C. E. James of the Eighth Line has fourteen for supper on Sunday evening including members of their own family."

Of course one might possibly start and write something about Sunday visitors and what they do to the farmers' Sabbath, but apart from providing the necessary material for a meal for 14 there would be the problem of some place for them all to sit.

Now and then that used to be something to be dealt with on the Tenth Concession and if 14 had to sit down at once it would have meant using the long table in the kitchen. Most times there were benches along the side of that table but it would not be right to ask company to sit on benches, so the company used to have chairs on one side and the members of the family and the hired man sat on the bench at the other side. Even that did not fully cover the seating problem, and then it was that the organ stool used to be pressed into service. It was a handy thing too because it could be twisted around to suit the height or the length of the legs of the small person who had to sit on it.

Of course the organ stool of that time had no back on it, but neither had the benches which ran along the side of the table. And the stool was well used to being twisted about to various heights as every person who played the organ always had notions at variance with all others as to how high up or low down the top of the stood should be. Those who wanted to pump a lot of wind into the organ with the feet preferred to have it fairly low down.

We do not know whether in the year 1938 Mr. and Mrs. C. E. James had an organ stool which they could fetch out when 14 people had to be arranged around the supper table. Perhaps the thing has gone out of style and may be they could manage by using the dining room and kitchen chairs and bringing a couple down from the bedrooms. Just the same the organ stool as we knew it on the Tenth would have been a handy thing to have in reserve.

Citizenship And a Job

A skilled man may come upon the time when there seems to be no demand for his skill, and again he may live to see the day when his services are much in demand.

Sir Samuel Hoare, Home Secretary, said Britain was giving "special consideration" to applications for repatriation of skilled engineers who migrated to United States in post-war years.

At the time of their departure there was nothing for them to do in England so they went to United States where they found work. In order to continue at their new posts and to be secure in the new land they took out naturalization papers in United States. Today a number of them are bent on returning to England where they desire to go and where they are actually wanted because there is a scarcity of skilled engineers.

It seems that under the pressure of finding something to do which will return a living a man must make citizenship a matter of convenience. Citizens of Britain when there was work there, citizens of United States when employment was to be had in that land, and once more citizens of Britain because work is available there. Strange—but a man has to make a living.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The loyalist troops in Spain drove the rebels back 12 miles, but in that war driving an army 12 miles doesn't mean a thing.

Christmas mail for the Arctic closes next week which should be a reminder that it would be well to start that Christmas shopping reasonably early.

In court at Simcoe a fine of $10 and costs or 20 days in jail was passed on Amos Seth, an Indian, for spreading false news. The thing Seth Amos got Amos Seth in trouble.

W. Perkins Bull, K.C., about whom so much has been printed in the papers recently, celebrated his 68th birthday in Toronto the other day, and people wouldn't have to ask who he was.

Two men at the Harrow experimental station are said to have developed a milder type of Spanish onion. If they are ever going to get that war wound up what they need is something stronger.

Mrs. Daisy Tegtmeyer has been in jail at Chicago for five years because she will not tell what she did with part of a $30,000 estate. Well, it looks as though the saying about a woman not being able to keep a secret is not exactly right.

A fur dealer in Sudbury was fined $16,395 for breaking the law. Unless he can pay he will have to spend 30 months in jail. Unless business is fairly brisk it might pay him to live on the country for 30 months.

Before a student enters a German university it is necessary for him to show that he can jump 13 1-2 feet. We fail to see what that has to do with going to university, but admittedly it might be beneficial in a course planned for pedestrians in any land.

If one desires a concrete bit of evidence regarding the risks a farmer runs in his business, we submit the case of Stuart Clydesdale of Dummer township on whose farm 17 head of cattle were killed by a bolt of lightning while standing under a tree.

HOLIDAYS

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Alfalfa came home yesterday, her feet seem made of heavy clay, she just looks gone to seed; and every move Alfalfa makes, she shivers bad and somehow shakes, she looks washed out indeed.

¶ She spent all yesterday in bed, admits she feels about half dead, she says she woke at dawn; she doesn't think she wants to eat, and says she's dead upon her feet, and all she does is yawn.

¶ Alfalfa groans an awful lot, and says she feels burned up and hot, it looks as though she's tired; she's due to work now any day, if she desires to earn her pay, or else she may be fired.

¶ She can't help with the work at all, she couldn't even sweep the hall, she didn't make her bed; she can't wash dishes, she can't sleep, she fells like lying down to weep, her eyes look kind of red.

¶ What ails Alfalfa you may say, that she's in such a doleful way, whatever has gone wrong; Alfalfa's not a weakened child, nor is she wispy like and mild, in fact she's rather strong.

¶ Alfalfa went on holidays, and there she burned up nights and days, in manner she thought best; she danced until her feet were sore, she swam till she could swim no more—and then came home to rest.

At First They Laughed At Him

(By F. D. R. in Brantford Expositor)

THE STATE OF TEXAS has been having a Democratic primary election in connection with the nomination of a Governor.

A couple of candidates had been preparing for the fight for two years. Each had personal organizations and both enjoyed a fine reputation as effective campaigners.

One of them, Attorney-General McCraw, of Dallas, and the other, Railroad Commissioner Ernest O. Thompson, of Amarillo. There were other aspirants, but the two men named were looked upon as the real contenders especially as each was further fortified by the patronage exercised through their offices.

Then, six weeks ago, a rank outsider and one who had never been thought of in connection with the position entered the race.

He is W. Lee O'Daniel, a flour salesman, who toured Texas on a sound truck with a "hilly billy" orchestra and his three children, Pat, Molly and Mike. Speaking from the top of his conveyance he addressed many thousands and at first ridiculed, it was soon realized that his challenge would have to be taken seriously.

Mrs. O'Daniel remained at home, where headquarters had been established, and it is related that she performed an excellent job in directing the less spectacular portion of the campaign.

Preciously he had been so little interested in politics that he was not even qualified to vote as he had failed to pay his $1.75 poll tax.

Taunted with this circumstances at one gathering his answer was that as only politicians had hitherto been nominated for office and in addition controlled the machinery for making such nominations he considered that no reason existed for any "decent, right-minded man wanting to vote."

When a rival candidate sought to make capital out of the fact that he was a son of a federal soldier he made reply:

"Certainly my father was a federal soldier. So was my uncle, and I want to explain how I got my name. My uncle was badly wounded at the Battle of Chickamaugua. He was cared for by some fine southern people, who nursed him back to health. My grandmother in gratitude had me named for General Robert E. Lee."

The comeback was received with great enthusiasm by a crowd of several thousands and thereafter Mr. O'Daniel was not subjected to any more questionings.

ONE of the main planks of his platform consisted of the promise to pay $30 a month to everyone over 65 years of age, and he explained that he would raise the $42,000,000 thus required annually by taking the sum from "the folks that's got it."

He also included the ten commandments and the Golden Rule as containing essential features of what he regarded as good government. It is further related that his meetings partook of the nature of religious revivals and that he manifested much of the showmanship displayed by Billy Sunday.

Members of political and other parties did not give him any support and he relied solely upon appeals to the general public.

"It's going to be the handwriting on the wall for these professional politicians," he shouted to a crowd of 10,000 who stood in the rain to hear him one night. "Every time they do something to me, I'm going to the people. I'm going on the radio and let you know what it's all about. The politicians are scared to death they are about to lose the political pie down at Austin, the State capital. Run out the professional politicians."

As the final outcome the man who was at first derided has succeeded in polling a larger vote than all the other contestants combined and as a Democratic nomination in Texas practically means the next Governor, his succession to that office is considered as a certainty.

Apparently still feeling fit after his strenuous and sensational fight, O'Daniel made two radio addresses on Sunday, and also addressed the congregation of the church to which he gives ardent support.

During his remarks he attributed his success to a higher power, adding: "It is the first time to my knowledge that the Ten Commandments have been used for a political platform."

Meanwhile telegrams of congratulation are stated to be pouring in from all portions of the country, and it is very manifest that a new force has arisen in the Lone Star State.

CRIME PROFITS SMALL.

(Columbus Dispatch)

That "crime doesn't pay" appears to be in danger of becoming one of those sententious platitudes which lose all meaning through repetition. This would be a pity, for, as applied to the great majority of criminally disposed individuals, it is literally and actually true.—An illuminating proof of this fact is furnished by the Government bulletin which discloses that last year in the United States the average robber got only $89.36 on the "job" for which he was convicted, and the average burglar, $59.19; and the average larcenist, $29.27. Yet men—particularly those in their 'teens and twenties—gamble on sudden, violent death or long terms of imprisonment for such paltry gain.

CATCHING THE LIARS.

(The Survey)

WICHITA, Kansas, is makin extensive use of the "lie detector" or polygraph. Last year Wichita tested 1,551 persons, found evidence of deception on the part of 363 of these, and insanity in fifteen. Police obtained confessions from 211 persons and prosecuted fifty-one others on the basis of the tests. Wichita police examine all who are detained, vagrants as well as suspects. Last year Michigan State police and Berkeley, California, city police used the lie detector in their regular routines.

• Why They "Howled Him Down"

(Letter to the Edmonton Journal)

Recently Premier Aberhart of Alberta was "howled down" when he tried to address a meeting of his constituents at Okotoks. The Edmonton Journal, one of Mr. Aberhart's stoutest critics, condemned the refusal of the people to hear him, but give the other side of the argument in a letter from a Turner Valley farmer.

SIR,—In commenting editorially on the Premier's Okotoks meeting, you are at a disadvantage in that you were not present. To you, the "treatment accorded to Mr. Aberhart, is extremely regrettable," and it is "poor political tactics to refuse any public man a hearing."

You should be aware that the Premier was facing his constituents who sought to recall him according to his own Recall Act. Not only did the Premier's Government in a cowardly fashion baulk the object but also aggravated the situation by retaining the $200 deposit. The latest insult the Premier has chosen to hand his constituents is to call those who audibly dared to criticize him, "rowdies."

The Okotoks meeting was representative of the people of the district, being in the main farmers. Farmers, numbering 200, at a meeting a short while previous unanimously passed a resolution opposing the production tax, and after adjournment went on record to ask this Government to resign. These people are long established farmers who have struggled to make things go without Government aid. It is extremely doubtful if planned political tactics entered as part of their behavior, whatsoever.

There is no gainsaying the fact that the majority at the meeting welcomed the opportunity to express audibly to the Premier their lack of confidence in his past actions and policies. What is regrettable is that the same majority also gave evidence that they have lost all respect for the Premier.

Remember, the Premier has for several years delivered the most of his speeches fom behind the radio or pulpit. He is accustomed to dictating his views without contradiction and has repeatedly shunned open debate. This is the first meeting at which he has met with critical interruptions as to embarrass his speech. Also consider the same audiences have been subject many Sundays to speeches by our Premier that have contained much that is aggravating. It is understandable that much that is irksome has had to be endured in silence because the author was not present.

Therefore it is not surprising that pent-up annoyances came to the surface when our Premier appeared in person. JACK LEE.

• Why Not Tell the Public?

(Hamilton Spectator)

THE Hydro - Electric Power Commission has disposed of an issue of $12,500,000 bonds at what is said to be a favorable rate for the money. The bonds will be sold to the public to yield 3.1 per cent. The announcement is made by Dr. T. H. Hogg, chairman of the commission, but the price received for the bonds is not disclosed. This means that the price paid by the commission for the money is not to be told to the public, although this is a public transaction.

Is such a course necessary? For many years now the complaint has been heard that the Hydro-Electric Power Commission has been withholding information from the public, who, theoretically, at any rate, are presumed to be beneficial owners of the equity in the system. Too often has it been heard that to give out information is not in the public interest.

The fact is that money is just as much a purchasable commodity as any other article. The first Quebec power contracts were kept secret, with the resulting suspicion confusion, charge and counter charge.

Sir Adam Beck maintained constant contact with the Hydro municipalities. With his death, that policy changed and has not been restored. The present chairman of the commission was associated with Sir Adam and ought to remember how carefully he sought to maintain confidence by open dealing.

The very fact that twenty-one banks and inyestment brokers formed a syndicate to buy the issue is reason for the price paid the commission being made public as a matter of sound business routine, if nothing else.

• U.S. Has Learned Something

(New York Herald Tribune)

TODAY AMERICA is vastly more world-conscious — perhaps, at times, too alarmed. In particular does the informed American recognize that in a close understanding between France and Great Britain lies the best assurance of world peace in the coming years. No likely combination on the Continent can be strong enough to risk inviting their joint enmity.

The danger lies in the repetition of the German error of 1914 when the German Foreign Office, despite reports to the contrary from German Ambassador Lichnowsky in London, insisted on believing that Great Britain would not come to the support of France. The astute Hitler, who has won so many triumphs by taking his enemies by surprise, is unlikely, for all his emotionalism, to attempt anything which means war so long as it is clear beyond any possible doubt, that in the event of hostilities he must count on British aid to France

The French people are fully aware of this fact. Hence by the warmth of their greeting to King George VI they are recording their approval of the political fact which is their best hope of peace. If the older ones among the populace contrast the lean austerity of King George VI with the ruddy joviality of King Edward VII they know that, whereas King Edward came with only a hope of some day bringing the two nations into accord in European affairs, King George has come to set the seal of approval on a solemn undertaking already in force. The one designed the building and laid the foundations. The older is attending a housewarming following a redecoration and refurnishing of the edifice.

WHAT'S HIS NAME?

(The New Yorker)

A LOCAL MATRON recalled the other evening how a few years ago at a dinner party in Rome, she sat next to a pleasant young German. She remarked to him that she and her husband were leaving for Paris the next morning, and he expressed wistful envy, saying he'd always wanted to visit Paris but never had been able to. The fact was, he explained, that his grandfather, who had peculiar ideas, had forbidden it firmly every time he had brought the subject up. Introductions had been rather hurried that evening, and the American lady was never certain who her dinner companion had been until just recently, when he was introduced to her again in New York as Prince Louis Ferdinand of Prussia.

ON KEEPING YOUNG

(Kitchener Record)

A prominent writer makes the claim that there are three things that keep on going at any age—enthusiasms, the power of making new friends, and a sense of humor. If you make a mental survey of the elderly men and women whom you know you will find that the most popular, the most beloved, are those who have these three fine characteristics.

EDUCATED GUARDS.

(Almonte Gazette)

JUST AS A GIRL must have her matriculation before she can enter as a nurse-in-training, so will the time come when a penitentiary guard will be required to have his B. A. It will make it more pleasant for the cultured gentlemen(with numbers) within the walls, the absconding bank cashiers, the thieving lawyers, the abortionist doctors, etc., to have guards with whom they can converse in their own language. And by precept and example the plain "mugs" will be "eddicated" while they serve their terms.

Japs Make Light Of Scrap With Russians

TOKYO, July 28—(AP)—A third clash this month between Soviet and Manchoukuoan patrols on the Siberain frontier was disclosed today by the Japanese foreign office with the obsrvation it was "not to be taken seriously."

Manchoukuo, however, protested the incident July 23, two days after it happened. A similar occurrence July 11 drew a sharp Japanese protest which the Soviet government rejected. Another Japanese landing on Faingoy Island in the Ussuri River July 21 was viewed calmly.

The official version of the latest incident was that on July 21 about 60 Russians landed from a gunboat on a delta of the Ussuri and "apparently reinforced by 160 men the following day" invaded Manchoukuo south of Khabarovsk and set fire to two small villages.

Fixe hundred Manchoukuoans attacked them and they retired, the report said. No casualties were mentioned.

All Quiet Now

The Japanese war office called it "just another border incident" and said "all was quiet now." The war office spokesman said the situation was not very serious because "there is virtually a border incident every day; friction is inevitable when the boundary is poorly defined."

He added the July 11 episode at Changkufeng, near where Siberia, Korea and Manchoukuo meet and where Russian soldiers occupied a dominant hill claimed by both Russia and Japanese-supported Manchoukuo, remained unsettled, "although negotiations are progressing satisfactorily."

Both Russia and Manchoukuo claim possession of numerous islands and deltas dotting the Ussuri and Amur rivers. Most of the border clashes occur due west of Vladivostok where a natural boundary is lacking and the latest map is dated 1886. As a result, official figures show nearly 200 incidents happened in 1937.

Polio Wave Scares English Community

HALSTEAD, Essex, England, July 28—(CP Cable).—A sudden outbreak of infantile paralysis to-day spread consternation througtout this quiet country community.

Of 11 children stricken, a 13-year-old boy died last night resulting in the placing of a virtual quarantine over the area and organized efforts of medical authorities to trace the "carrier" which is believed to have spread the disease unwittingly.

Halstead schools have been closed until Sept. 5 and other precautions are being taken.

At Felstead school, about 15 miles from Halstead, four boys are under observation in the school sanitorium, as a precaution 80 other pupils are quarantined there until Aug. 5, while the remaining pupils have been allowed to go home on condition that they be kept under strictest supervision.

Dr. J. S. Ranson, Halstead medical officer, reported no new cases today. He said the boys who died was John La Niece, 13.

The boy's condition became so serious Saturday that a call was broadcast for an iron lung and one was rushed here from Southend. The child improved at first, then suffered a relapse.

New World Dash

WASHINGTON, July 28—(AP)—The German Embassy: asked the United States Department yesterday to permit a German plane to land in Alaska on a projected round-the-world flight. Embassy officials said the plane was a Focke Wulf Multi-motored Craft carrying a crew of four.

Plans call for the plane to take off from Germany and fly southeast to India, to China and Japan and thence to Alaska.

From Alaska the plane would fly over Canada, cross the United States and fly back to Germany either direct, or via Ireland. Date for the flight was not disclosed.

Ocean Hop Ends Before It Starts.

Flat on its belly lies the twin-motored Barkley-Grow monoplane in which Roumanian air hero, Capt. Alexander Papana, planned to fly across the Atlantic ocean to Bucharest. Papana was flying the ship from New Haven to Hartford when a rain storm forced him to land at the local airport in Norwalk, Conn. The field was too small for the fast-landing plane and it rammed a stone wall, washing out the undercarriage and damaging the ship badly. Papana, who escaped unhurt, said the flight would be delayed for several weeks.

TAYLOR AND CARDWELL REPEAT IN 1938 HIAWATHA REGATTA

Florence Selby Among Winners Sports Events

Three sterling acquatic stars, the same ones who last week captured major honors at the Gore's Landing regatta, repeated their triumph at the Hiawatha meet on Wednesday afternoon, carrying off among them nearly every trophy offered. They were Mrs. Florence Selby of Hiawatha, Bill Taylor of Peterborough, and Herb Cardwell of Wallace Point. Taylor was entered with the Wallace Point team.

Hundreds of residents of Hiawatha and other centres, together with dozens of American tourists, crowded a hill top overlooking the water's edge and watched boating and swimming stars famed throughout this district, compete for numerous prizes. It was the second regatta of the season, was favored by much more suitable weather than the one a week ago at Gore's Landing, although a strong cross wind bothered paddlers to some extent.

Mrs. Selby, Taylor, and Cardwell were by all odds the outstanding competitors at the meet. Taylor and Cardwell finished third in the men's double canoe race; Taylor won the men's single canoe with Cardwell second; Mrs. Selby finished second in the ladies' single canoe; Taylor's crew won the men's four, and he was second in the men's skiff race; in the ladies' double canoe, Mrs. Selby and Doreen Deyell of Wallace Point were first; Taylor won the men's crab race; Taylor and Pat Perrin of Bewdley were first in the mixed tandem canoe, with Herb Cardwell and Doreen Deyell second; Mrs. Selby and Doug Mortimer of Wallace Point third; Mrs. Selby's crew won the ladies' four; Herb Cardwell and Doreen Deyell won the mixed gunwale race, with Bill Taylor and Pat Perrin second; Cardwell captured first honors in the men's swimming race; in the ladies' crab race Mrs. Selby was victor; in the mixed four race Cardwell's crew captured first prize, and Cardwell and Taylor finished first and second in the men's gunwale race.

There was not a single event in the entire program, except the professional paddlers' event, that one or more of the three were not in the money. They outshone all competitors in most races by a large margin.

Highlight of the day was the professional paddlers' race, won by Dow Taylor of Curve Lake, with Clayburn Taylor of Curve Lake in second place. One of the fastest races of the day, it roused keen enthusiasm.

Biggest surprise of the meet came when Pat Perrin of Bewdley defeated Mrs. Selby in the ladies' single canoe race by several lengths. Mrs. Selby had difficulty in getting away from the starting mark, ran into trouble all along the course, and finished just ahead of Doreen Deyell of Wallace Point. Another surprise victory was that of Doug. Mortimer of Wallace Point and Gord Minty of Peterborough, who captured the men's double canoe, with Walter Loukes of Hiawatha and Freddie Smoke of Alderville second, leaving the crack team of Bill Taylor and Herb Cardwell trailing a bad third. Taylor and Cardwell lost a paddle en route and were far behind at the finish.

The meet was sponsored by the Hiawatha Hockey Team, and judges were Dan Mushrat of Hiawatha and Thomas Bannon of Youngstown, Ohio. Jack Smoke of Alderville was starter, and Hanlon Howard of Hiawatha acted as announcer. William Mushrat and George Cowie of Hiawatha, president and secretary of the regatta association, were also officials.

SPORTS -DAY BY DAY-

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

AND TODAY WE'LL READ the roll call on some of the bigger sports events coming off here this week-end. We're right smack in the middle of summer now with warm-weather athletics at their height. From Civic Holiday (that's Monday) on, they decline into playoffs for the favored few, and by Labor Day there isn't much left in the way of ye olden summertime sports. Playoffs then are merging into the autumn classic, as thoughts turn from bathing beaches to coal bins, However, there is plenty doing locally right now and folks don't need to hit out of town this week-end for want of lively doings at home.

HOUSE OF DAVID pro baseballers have two games in Riverside Park, first one tonight and second one Saturday eve. Both exhibition affairs at 9.15 o'clock under the lights. They ought to pack in huge crowds as there'll be plenty of high-class ball shown as the Bearded Wonders mix with the Petes, and also plenty of fun and entertainment. Including the noted trio of pepper-ball performers from Benton Harbor. Russ Kitchen Saturday and Lefty McNally tonight are slated to do the Petes' pitching with Gunner Whitehill and Joe Jakafby in reserve. These games will be well worth seeing, folks.

Lo, The Lacrossers

IT WILL BE THE lacrossers tomorrow twilight down at the George St. arena. Woodbridge plays the Petes at nine bells, and this time they have promised to get the game away right around nine—and not half an hour or so late. It isn't the locals' fault, but they've squawked to the O. L. A. about visitors arriving late or not sending full teams. However, nothing like that is expected of the strong Woodbridge crew, and itought to be quite a tussle. Preceded by a midget tangle at 8.15. Another good crowd of gutted-stick enthusiasts is expected to line the lacrosse box tomorrow in the e'en.

BIG ATTRACTION on Monday, the holiday, is the half-mile Canadian dirt track championship races by noted motorbike riders. Put on by the local Kawartha Motorcycle Club and the Lions Club, with a sanction from the C. C. A. It'll be a thrilling show at the Ex. with the best riders in Canada performing, amateur and professional. Those pros ought to hit the curves at close to 80 miles an hour, just a case of: "They're sure travelling—weren't they?" Thrills, spills, chills and whatnot before a large and excited crowd whose roars nearly drown out the racing reports of the competing daredevils. It starts at 1.30 and runs till about 5.30 o'clock.

As Jaunty Juniors Joust

OH, YES, AND SATURDAY afternoon at three in Riverside sees the last scheduled game of the Lakeshore Ball Loop when Cobourg plays the Young Petes. A loss for the locals means they would get only one home game in the semi-final playoffs, winner meeting Oshawa. These teams will dish up a scrappy struggle and deserve plenty of fan support. In their tilt in Cobourg last e'en, the Lakeshore lads yanked out a 5-4 verdict in a sweet scrap. Gee Clark pitched seven-hit ball and fanned nine but tossed a homerun ball in the wrong spot to Campbell, leading Cobourg conker. Smith hurled a nice effort for the winners with six hits and seven strikeouts. McNabb went okay catching for Herb Ralph's bunch and Hollingsworth hit and fielded well for the same squad. Stanley slapped out a double and single. It'll be Bob Todd on the locals' mound this Saturday.

SORRY, BOYS, BUT the bantam section fell through. We'll run your letter and maybe it'll get you a game: "Dear Sir—Early in June you mentioned there would be junior and bantam city league ball this year. But I have heard nothing about the bantams yet. Well, when the fellows read this we became interested and decided to enter as a team. We began practising and, when the juniors got underway, we thought itw ouldn't be long till the bantams started. But as it didn't start, we would like now to challenge any bantam team in the city already formed or that could be formed. We have all our own equipment, including catcher's equipment but for shinguards, 11 bats, nine finger mitts and a first baseman's mitt. Any tear playing us may use our catcher's outfit or whatever we have that they need. Here's hoping we get some games in any field. We are all 15 and under. Yours sincerely Roy Morrow, ss; Gord Burns, p;" The address is 535 Aylmer, or write this column.

Her Name's Bea McDowell

YESSUH, those Keene gal softballers are money players. They up and knocked over Westclox with a 12-3 Mickey Finn last eve in the Bowl to win first-half loop honors. Only two reverses Westclox took all year came at the hands of the Keenesters in the three-game playoffs. Now Westclox have to win the second half or they're out of luck in the final serial. Bea McDowell, twirling her second game in two nights, made a great job of it last p.m. before a huge crowd here. And her battling buddies smacked two pitchers hard and fie lded in fine style to back her up. Congrats to Ivan Fletcher and his squad. Westclox and C. G. E. have a scheduled struggle here tomorrow p.m.

* * * * * *

LINDSAY POST SCRIBE evidently liked the mitt show staged by our Riverview A. C. up in the Scugog town a few nights ago. He says the club will be welcomed back anytime so long as they dish up action like on this card. He liked the Horrocks-Taman exhibition, the Bowler-Low slugfest, the joust between Packenham and Joiner, as well as the Orlando-Hicks main go. And he adds: "The wrestling bout, usually a pain in theneck to us, was a swell show. The two grunters, Red Garner and Ted McKinley, put on a better show than any of the big time pros we have had in Lindsay. Garner was the villian and didn't the fans hate him!" Just two minor squawks from ye writer-upper, one being that a few changes were made in the program too late for him to notify fans and the other being over a shadow-boxing round. But he hastens to add the show pleased him and Lindsay fans muchly.

* * * * * *

HITHER AND YAWN: Westclox and Motorists have a men's softball setto at the Bowl tonight, while Motorists are at Omemee Sat'day. . . . Cubs and P. C. I. play a junior ball game at the Ex. on Friday. . . . House of David squad took a 5-1 win over a Belleville-Picton team the other eve before 600 Quinte fans; they were just coasting. . . . Little Harlem pulled out an 18-11 smirk over Hawks in a Southend Loop fray last eve; Harlemites meet DeLaval tomorrow. . . . Spratt and Williams started, while Bell and Jamieson finished up when Kingston intermediates and Napanee went to a 12-all draw in nine heats the other night. . . . That Brinton Field, which the Brinton Co. permits the Southend Softball League to use, has been fixed up fine for the softballers this season—'tis a good diamond and layout. . . . We'll bet the Benton Harbor pros will blink a few times tonight when they spot that smoke-ball tossed up by McNally. . . . Bea McDowell finished the gals' game here last p.m. with a sore arm but a fierce desire to win out; and she did. . . . "We just gotta win here Saturday, that's all," says Herb Ralph, after his juniors were outlucked in Cobourg. . . . Aside to Jawn S.: Darn those amachoor poets and would-be Cupids—or is it that misery loves company, even in sports scribes?

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

On Wednesday afternoon we received word from Port Hope saying owing to unforeseen circumstances they will not be able to come to our club this evening. But notwithstanding this, we will go ahead with our mixed tournament as advertised —same time, same place, same fee—everything the same as usual.

We wish to remind the men that the skips-vices, leads-seconds competitions commence on Tuesday, August 2. Look up details in your schedule book. Our greens will be closed to bowlers to-morrow and Saturday.

Tournaments Results.

At Peterborough—Our ladies held the first of their local afternoon tournaments and a nice crowd turned out. The winning skips were: Mrs. J. Kingsbury, Mrs. A. Hope, Mrs. C. Williamson.

At Warkworth — There were 14 rinks entered from different parts of the Trent Valley circuit, and three 15-end games were played, with the following results: A. J. Meyers of Campbellford; B. Chesler, of Peterborough; A. Lindsay, of Brighton. The personnel of the local rink was: H. R. Martin, R. Burns, E. Wall, B. Chesler, skip. Each received an electric table lamp.

At Cobourg — There were twenty-four rinks entered in the mixed tournament sponsored by the Cobourg Lawn Bowling Club. Three rinks were from Peterborough. Results: 1, H. Freeman, Peterborough; 2, S. Topping, Kingston; 3, M. Booth, Cobourg; 4, A. Houme, Toronto; 5, H. Fulford, Port Hope. H. Freeman's rink was: Mrs. N. Killingbeck, J. D. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. L. Beome, H. Freeman, skip. Ladies each received a set of china dishes. Gentlemen each received a Kenwood blanket.

At Port Perry:

Eighteen pairs were entered in the men's doubles, with three from the local club. The winners were Charlie Bell and W. Merton of Lindsay, first; White and Pierson of Oshawa, second; Sedgewick and Scott of Toronto, third; Baer and Miller of Port Perry, fourth.

NOTED SWIMMER DIES

Campbellford Cops 5th Win

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 28. — Campbellford took their fifth straight win on their own courts when they defeated the Belleville Skating and Tennis Club in a Quinte League match Wednesday afternoon. The locals who are now standing at the top of the league took four of the six events from the visiting club on one of the hottest afternoon they have yet played in. Had it not been for the fact that Grace Cairns who was teamed up with Verna Weston, had to leave the courts before finishing the events, Campbellford might have added still another victory to their list. The score in the first set was 6-2, 4-4 when the game was called and the visitors were conceded the event. Mary McLean and Esther Moncrief constituted the Belleville team.

The visitors took their only other victory in the men's singles which Howard Kerr captured from Ken Kingston in a smashing 3-set victory by a score of 7-5,2-6, 6-0. The loss of this event was a surprise to club members who have watched this young player take all but two of the scheduled games he has played during the season. But Kerr who is one of the top ranking players in the league earned his victory with an easy style which earned high praise for him. Don Meyers was this week teamed up with Jessie Weston and they took an easy victory from Gordon Barclay and B. Soutar the score being 6-1, 6-1.

The first men's doubles victory came somewhat as a retalliation for the defeat suffered in the singles by Kingston when Cliff Weston and Harry Free walked away with an easy 6-1, 6-0 score from Spencer Evans and Murray Clare, while Bob Linton and Paul O'Sullivan, two of the newer recruits succeeded in taking the second men's doubles from Don Smallbone and Fred Fisher in a strenuous battle which resulted 6-2, 6-3.

Wilbert Kingston and P. Ferris took the first mixed doubles in two straight sets from the Belleville team composed of Jack Dickens and Jo Cruji. The first set went to 8-6 and the second was won 6-2.

Campbellford Rinks In District Plays

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 28.—With no events scheduled for the local greens, Campbellford bowlers took part in tournaments being held in Madoc and Warkworth on Wednesday afternoon. Eight members were on hand in Warkworth, to play in the men's rinks tournament while two couples from here went to Madoc for the mixed tournament. Those who went to Warkworth were Messrs. A. J. Meyers, C. W. Pallizer, J. A. Linton, J. P. Archer, L. B. Glover, T. L. Diamond, A. G. Thompson, and A. D. Bennett. Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Locke and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Wiggins represented the local club at Madoc.

Just Thinkin'

C. S. Howard, owner of Seabiscuit, gazes out on the track and reflects on the vagaries of equine and human nature. His great handicap horse has taken an active part in the scratchings that have been such a prominent feature of big races this year, but his victory in the Hollywood Gold Cup handicap seems to point to bigger and better things ahead... including victories.

Harlemites Beat Southend Hawks

Little Harlem of the Southend Softball League defeated Hawks, 18-11, last night at the Brinton Field to strengthen their playoff chances. Some hard hitting and loose fielding marked the tussle. Craig went wild and walked in two runs, giving way to Dennie who went fair after a wobbly start. The Hawks used three hurlers, none proving effective. Craig had two homers and three singles in six times up, and Grey got four for six. Jay and Kearney topped the losers at bat. F. Maloney and Hodson shone afield for the winners, while Busby and Pryde looked good for the losers. Teams:

Title Taken From Louis

NEW YORK, July 28.— (AP).— Important steps affecting three of the eight boxing divisions were taken Wednesday by the New York State Athletic Commission.

1. The light-heavyweight title held by John Henry Lewis was declared vacant in New York State.

2. The Commission declined to accept Al (Hostile) Hostak, last night's conqueror of Freddie Steele, as the new middleweight champion of the world.

3. A fifteen-round elimination bout between Small Montana of San Francisco and the Japanese-born Katsuma Morioka was suggested as the opening step in a campaign to produce an undisputed flyweight champion.

The action against Lewis came as no surprise. The negro was "set down" because of his consistent refusal to accept a challenge for a title bout filed Feb. 10 by Tiger Jack Fox of Spokane, Wash.

Woodbrige Here To Play Petes

Woodbridge lacrossers play the Petes here tomorrow (Friday) night in an O.L.A. senior "B" fixture at nine o'clock in the George St. arena. It will be preceded at 8.15 by a midget tilt between Kinsmen and Kiwanis. The locals have protested to the Ontario Lacrosse Association about visiting teams arriving late and coming short-handed, and definite action should result. However, the Woodbridge bunch—who played an early-season exhibition with the locals here this year—arrived on time on that occasion and brought a full squad. So they will likely be ready at nine tomorrow night to make it a real battle. It is hoped that another good crowd of gutted-stick followers will be on deck.

The Woodbridge boys, who lost here before, have bolstered up, especially with the addition of a former Orillia and pro defenceman. A week ago they stepped into Brooklin and held the group leaders to a draw in regulation time, showing they are strong enough to extend the Petes plenty here tomorrow. And possibly beat them. The locals expect to be at full strength for this number and a nifty number should result.

SPORT SPICE

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, July 28 (AP).—Don't laugh this off, but Jimmy Braddock may try that long reported comeback ...Business over at the "store" isn't what it ought to be and besides Mike Lou Ambers is looking better than he Jacobs needs heavies like nobody's business...Here's another fight tip: ever did in his life.

Bill Terry (with his Jints hitting the skids like everything) is feuding with the newspaper guys again.... Ray Fabiani, the fiddling wrestling promoter, has slapped a $25,000 suit on the 20th Century Sporting Club because he says Promoter Mike Jacobs wouldn't install a cooling system...St. Paul has upped the cut on its golf open from $2,500 to $7,500, and are the pros happy... Event starts tomorrow.

Burgess Whitehead has changed his tune and his mind again.... Burgess now says he'll lay off hard work the rest of the season and make a fresh start next year...At that, he's doing a pretty good job with a semi-pro team a couple of times a week and Polo Grounders wish he'd hurry back.

Terry has retired from the Giants' third base coaching line probably because it just didn't do much good ...What we want to know is how old is Fred Johnson, the pitcher the Browns imported from the American Association?...Record books say he's 38, but some of his pals insist you can add three years to that and still be right...In which event Fred probably is the oldest regular in either major...No matter how many summers he's seen slip by, he went the route against the Yankees yesterday (when they were not hot but torrid) and that's something.

Elgin Suffers Eighth Defeat

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, July 28.—The Tanners sent Elgin deeper into the cellar in the local softball league when they handed them their eighth straight loss by a 15 to 10 score. Elgin took an early lead when they scored half their runs in the second innings. The Tanners made sure of victory by scoring four in the last of the seventh. The feature of the game came in the second innings when E. Preston, Elgin second sacker, clouted a long homer to left with the bases loaded.

Hahn went the distance for the Tanners and was clouted for 15 base hits. He issued 2 bases on balls and whiffed 9. J. Richardson returned to the mound for Elgin but was the victim of a 16 hit assault by the Tanners. He struck out 1 and walked the same number.

Thompson and Ibey each with 2 singles and a double were the Tanners heaviest clouters while E. Preston with a homer and three singles had the most hits for Elgin. The teams:

Elgin: J. Richardson, p; E. Preston, 2b; J. Preston, c; R. Richardson, ss; M. Scott 1b; B. Scott, cf, 1b; Fleming, lf; G. Richardson, 3b; Grady, rf, Metcalfe, cf.

LON WARNEKE WHITEWASHES GIANTS TO GIVE CARDS 7-0 WIN

Giantment Fail To Hold Pep Of Title Days

NEW YORK, July 28 (AP).—They said it can't happen here. They said that no matter how bad those Giants looked with bats in their hands, their defence would always hold them up. They said that strictly on pitching and fielding alone, those Giants would always get along.

But, after listening to all that for years, you take a look at the latest developments in the National league race, and (shades of John McGraw!) there's the very thing they said couldn't happen—all over the place.

The great pitching, except for King Carl Hubbell who's carrying the entire burden again, is gone. The airtight fielding is up in the air. And the terrible Terry Terriers of '36 and '37 are wallowing around a half-game ahead of third place, five games back of Pittsburgh Pirates.

They've lost five games in a row, the latest a 7-0 four-hit whitewashing applied by long Lon Warneke and the Cardinals yesterday. They've dropped eight of their last 10, and in their last 68 games—since their early season streak of 18 victories and three setbacks, in fact—they've played under .500 ball.

They're only holding second place today because the revived Chicago Cubs developed a case of butterfingers last night let the Dodgers score three times in the ninth inning for a 3-2 Brooklyn win.

Since Pep Young had himself a big day, driving in four runs to pace the Pirates to a 4-2 win over the Phillies, the Bugs were left five games out in front. Deacon Danny MacFayden and Lou Fette toseed a pair of five-hitters and Boston Bees belted Cincinnati Reds twice 1-0 and 5-1.

Over in the American league, the Yankees held their game and a half edge on Cleveland Indians, but the spotlight remained focussed on Hankus-Pankus Greenberg, Detroit's dynamiter in Chief, who belted a pair of homers for the second 9-4 win over the Senators and boost straight day to lead the Tigers to a the Detroits back into fifth place.

The two round-trippers were Hank's 32nd and 33rd of the year and put him seven games up on Babe Ruth's record 1927 campaign, for the portion of the season already completed.

Rookie relief hurler Steve Sundra pitched 3 and two-third innings of hitless ball, hit a homer and a run-producing single and gave the Yanks a 7-5 decision over St. Louis Browns. The second game of what was to have been a double bill was rained out. The Indians nipped the Athletics 22-11 in a fancy slugfest. The Red Sox-White Sox twin bill was washed out.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Lon Warneke, Cardinals—Blanked Giants 7-0 with four hits.

Steve Sundra, Yankees—Pitched 3 and two-third innings of hitless ball in relief trick, and hit homer and single driving in two runs to whip Browns 7-5.

Pep Young, Pirates—Hit homer and single and drove in four runs in 4-2 win over Phillies.

Hank Greenberg, Tigers—His two homers sent five runs across to beat Senators 9-4.

Bad News Hale, Indians—Hit homer, two singles, drove in two runs and scored two in 12-11 win over Athletics.

Stars Take Two From Orioles

TORONTO, July 28 (CP).—Taking a tip from those old contender-knocker-downers, the Newark Bears, Buffalo Bisons have not only consolidated their grip on the International League's second place but have proven themselves the class of the contending field.

The Bears knocked over the Bisons in what was as close to a crucial series as the league has had in two years earlier in the season. The Herd turned around and took eight out of 14 from Rochester and 10 out of 13 from Syracuse, its closest rivals for second place.

The Bisons were at it again last night. They drubbed the Red Wings 11-4, while Syracuse was besting Baltimore in both ends of a double bill, 4-0, 7-4, and Montreal's Royals were splitting with Toronto, winning 3-2 and losing 4-3. In the league's only afternoon game Newark pounded Jersey City 13-8.

Herman Fink bobbed up with an eight hitter to stop the Red Wings for the Herd. As usual Ollie Carnegie supplied some potent stickwork. He got three hits, while Marv Olson, Eddie Boland and Jim Oglesby contributed two each, including a 330-foot homer by the latter. Behind this powerful stickwork Fink coasted home.

The Maple Leafs moved into sixth place by splitting their double bill with the Royals. Harry Smythe and Joe Sullivan turned in fine hurling jobs, the former winning the opener for the Montrealers, the latter taking the nightcap for the Leafs.

U.S. GOLFER WINS

DIEPPE, France—(CP).—An 18-year-old Walker Cup Team reserve, R. Dunkelberger, won the French amateur golf championship, defeating A. L. Bentley, Southport, England, 3 and 2, in the 36-hole final.

11 Canadians In Running For Golf Title

LONDON, Ont., July 28.—(CP).—International and national struggles continued as the Canadian amateur golf championship, only one round removed from the quarter finals, swung into its third day today.

With champion Sandy Somerville still on the firing line there were four aspirants to the title from the United States ready to scramble with 11 Canadians for Sandy's crown if it is knocked from his head.

Eight of the 16 starting play today were doomed for elimination in the fourth round. The fifth round this afternoon opened the door for four more to pass out. The semi-finals to-morrow and the finals Saturday will be played over 36 holes.

Somerville, with a large gallery trailing as he and R. C. Ellis played, supplied the highlight to yesterday's play with a hole in one at the 185-yard fifth. Not so attractive to the gallery was a heavy rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, that swept the course for 15 minutes.

The American Four.

The American quartet still in the hunt as play started to-day were Ted Adams, of Columbia, Mo.; Ed Kingsley of Salt Lake City, Utah; Ken Savage, another Salt Lake player from the Utah Copper Club, and Dick Lutz, of Ashland, Ohio.

Ranged against them were six stalwarts from Eastern Canada, including Somerville. The others were Gordon Baxter Taylor of Montreal; Phil Farley, of Montreal, runner-up to Somerville last year; Gordon Taylor, Jr., of Toronto; Pete Kelly, of Charlottetown, and L. B. Bissell of London, Ont.

Adding to the Canadian strength was this sextet of westerners: Jimmy Todd of Victoria, semi-finalist in 1937 and eliminated then by Somerville; Bobby Proctor, of Edmonton, Alberta champion; Jim Hogan, Alberta's junior champion; Johnny Richardson, another Albertan, who formerly held the junior title of his province and is still a junior; Allan Boes of Winnipeg, and Ernie Palmer, Manitoba champion.

Sandy Not Extended.

Somerville, moving closer each day to his seventh Canadian title, was not extended in his two rounds yesterday, winning handily from R. C. Storey of Saint John and R. G. Ellis of Montreal.

Ken Black of Vancouver, believed ready to go a long way in this year's competition, suffered sudden elimination at the hands of Marvin Wentworth, Montreal Maroon hockey stalwart of Grimsby, Ont., but had to play with borrowed clubs. Black's bag disappeared some time during Tuesday night. Wentworth won 4 and 3 and then was eliminated in the afternoon round by Dick Lutz, 5 and 4.

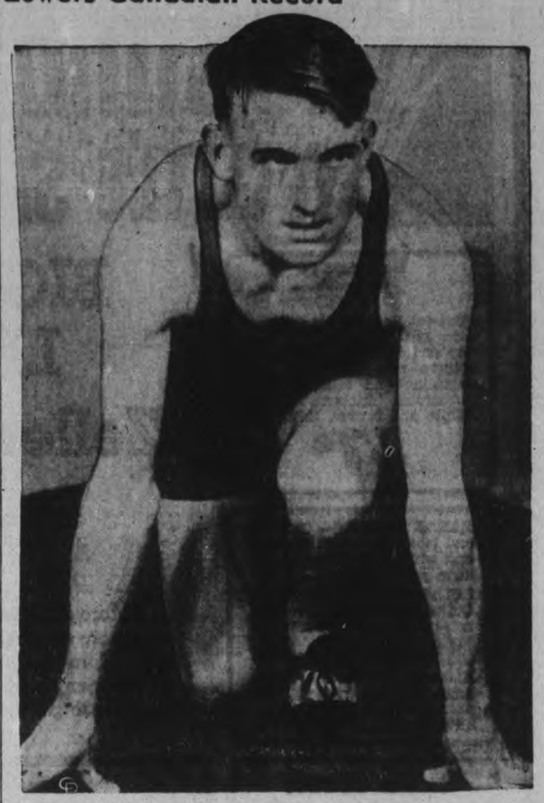
Lowers Canadian Record



One of the best feats turned in by a Canadian athlete in recent months was that of Art Clarke, ABOVE, who ran the mile in 4.16.9 at the Ontario track and field championships, to set a new native Canadian record for the distance, bettering the old mark, which he had also set, by 9-10 second.

Keene Lasses Grab Honors

The scrappy Keene girls' softball team won the first-half playoffs last night over Westclox by a 12-3 score before a big crowd of fans in the Bowl. It was the third and deciding game to declare a winner in this half, to enter the finals at the completion of the schedule. Keene handed Westclox their only two losses of the season in this playoff series.

Bea McDowell did the iron-man stunt by twirling her second straight game in two days, going better last night than in the previous tussle. She hurt her arm in the seventh inning of last night's game but stayed in there to finish. She allowed nine hits, scattered but for three in the third, and six walks while fanning seven in a good performance, and had fine fielding support from her mates as well as an eight-run lead in the first to work on. Marg Snowden started for the losers, allowing six hits and one walk in the first when Barb Blade relieved her with one out. The latter gave up nine hits the rest of the route and two walks, fanning four. Their support was poor.

Leads Hitters

H. Nelson led the hitters with a double and three singles, while M. Miller got three hits, and B. McDowell, D. Cocks and G. Nelson two each. For Westclox, D. Merrett, M. Ferguson and M. Allison had two hits apiece. Nice fielding was shown by G. Nelson, H. Nelson, D. Cocks, G. Mortimer, M. Allison and M. Ferguson. D. Cocks pulled off a catch of a tough foul fly, G. Nelson robbed M. Hawthorne of a hit with a running grab in the ninth, and a H. Nelson-to-Belle double play showed Keene's defensive ability. The teams:

Night Baseball Tilt Tonight

Night baseball returns to Peterborough for two nights this week, tonight and Saturday, when the House of David pro ballisters play the Petes in exhibition games at Riverside Park. The contests these nights will commence at 9.15, and will see the Michigan pepper-ball trio put on their act halfway through the tussle. The visitors will bring along a good lighting setup and a crowd of some 2500 fans is expected each night, city and district baseball enthusiasts. It will prove excellent practise for the Petes and first-rate entertainment for the fans.

The probable House of David lineup will be: Coombs, 2b; Oceak, 3b; Zackery, 1b; Zennelli, lf; Maloney, rf; Mollett, ss; Helwig, sf; Rhodes, c; Murphy, p. Manager Duke Kinsey, a former Milwaukee hurler, may also take the mound, while Decker, Smith Baikaitus and Sisler are also available as twirlers. The bearded wonders play fine ball, often beating Class "A" pro squads in exhibitions. However, they only beat Kingston by a 12-9 score Monday, with Bud Clancy hurling, so the Petes may hold their own. Lefty McNally will twirl for the locals tonight and the strongest Petes' lineup will take the field.

Cheap rubber shoes from Hong Kong, China, are reported to be flooding, England.

Leafs, Royals Divide Pair At Toronto

TORONTO, July 28—It was southpaw night at Maple Leaf Stadium last night as Montreal Royals and the Leafs split a pair of one-run verdicts. Lefty Harry Smythe for the fourth time this season put the hex on the Burnsmen for a 3-2 win in the seven-inning twilight affair, while Portsider Sullivan humbled the invaders 4-3 in the floodlight affair.

There were more screwy and peculiar diamond incidents packed into a hectic third session of that arc-light tilt, than are usually viewed in a week of games at Brooklyn where they say baseball at its dizziest can be witnessed.

Proceedings in that weird session were too involved to be explained briefly, but inasmuch as the inning produced the Royals' entire scoring efforts for the game and saw the expulsion of one Montrealer, they are worthy of recording.

It all started innocently enough when Schuster bounced a single off Gantenbein's shins with none out. Hooks then paved the way for the string of "Dodgerisms" which followed when he bounced a perfect double play ball to the Toronto third-sacker.

Everything Happened

Joe threw to Sheerin, and the latter relayed to Burns, but unfortunately the local shortstop forgot to touch second on the play and Schuster was safe at second. Not content with that 'life," the Montrealer started out for third, turned back and was caught in between. No fewer than five Leafs participated in the play, which came to a conclusion when Gantenbein tossed wildly, allowing the Royal to reach third.

Chervinko and Dunlop followed with singles and Wetherell walked to fill the sacks. Before he walked, Wetherell struck at a pitch which curved in and struck him on the thighs. Umpire Swanson first waved him on base, but changed his mind when his co-arbiter explained things to him.

At any rate, Chervinko scored on an outfield fly and Dunlap came home on Bell's clout to left. Wetherell, trying to reach third on Bell's drive, was thrown out by Manush, but so incensed was the visiting hurler at the decision that he slapped wildly from a reclining position and connected with Umpire Jorda's knees.

For that little demonstration, Master Wetherell was ejected from the proceedings and it just about meant the game for the Leafs.

Marvin Duke, his successor, walked Mayo Smith and gave up singles to Porter and Clifton before being relieved in the last part of the frame by Ed Clapman with one run in and none out. Chapman got by all right, although Porter came in after Sheerin flied out.

Chapman's wildness had him in trouble, but he lasted the remainder of the distance at the expense of only one run, which he walked on base and later wild pitched home. That run, the only one allowed by the veteran right-hander, unfortunately cost him the game, although only baseball rules prevent official blame from resting on Duke's shoulders.

That was another peculiar frame. Burns walked, Manush and Smith singled, and the bases were loaded with none out. Then Burns scored on a wild pitch, but Porter and Clifton struck out and Reiber flied out. Before he was retired, Reiber lifted a high pop which Chervinko and Hooks both sought to catch, and which both let drop on fair soil Manush and Smith crossed the plate, but the ball rolled foul.

British Firm Will Film Titanic Wreck

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., July 28. — Alfred Hitchcock, who carries more weight than any other living British director—and probably will until his diet shows results—said he thought Hollywood was wonderful. Of course, he admitted he hadn't seen much of it— the pavement between his hotel and Myron Selznick's office, a series of steaks, one or two studio sets and a dotted line on a contract binding him to return next January to direct Alfred Hitchock, who carries more (with options for three other pictures.)

A diplomat—he already has convinced the Cunard people that a film of the Titanic disaster would be excellent propaganda—he not only said Hollywood was wonderful, but insisted he be quoted to that effect. That duty discharged, he dared confess that his eyes did not bug out with amazement at the film city's technical resources. "One set-up is pretty much like another." And he was puzzled and pained to discover that studios still were shooting pictures from uncompleted scripts. He never would think of it.

It was, by the way, the first time "Hitch" ever had seen another director at work. He didn't enjoy it at all, said it made him as nervous as a motorist with his wife at the wheel. He wanted to sit beneath the camera himself, change a line or two in the script, break a teacup. He couldn't estimate how many teacups he breaks per picture, but suspected he set the record when he was shooting "The Thirty-nine Steps."

"Good for the nerves," he says. "Relieves the tension. Much better than scolding the players."

Had "Titanic" reached the script stage? He shook his head.

"Quite obvious what the last two reels will be. Beyond that nothing."

He intends to work the story out himself, leaving the dialogue to a script-writer. It will be melodrama, naturally. The question was raised whether the title would not be a giveaway, militate against that principle ingredient of every Hitchcock picture—suspense.

"The contrary," he beamed. "Every one in the world knows what is going to happen to the Titanic. The question is 'when?' There's your suspense. 'When?' It's better that way. Look at 'Mutiny on the Bounty.' If it had been called 'The Jolly Old Bounty' or 'Rovers on the Bounty,' audiences would have become restless during the early reels. They'd have been wondering why all this repetition of scenes showing the brutality of the captain, the resentment of officers and crew. But 'Mutiny' on the Bounty—they knew what was coming, but they didn't know how or when. There was your suspense."

Life Imitates the Movies, Not Art Males Doff Undershirts Like Gable

NEW YORK, July 28 — Gable was explaining how men undress. Every one, it appeared, has a different technique. He illustrated his own by removing his shirt and exposing a brawny torso in the raw * * * for Clark never wears an undershirt.

When the scene had been played to its conclusion Director Frank Capra ordered it printed and went on with the business of completing a picture that was to win practically all the Academy awards, and made enoromus profits for the Columbia Pictures Corporation. It never occurred to him, to Robert Riskin, who wrote the script, to the stars or anybody else that the sequence would cause commercial repercussions. Why should a bit of smart comedy have anythink to do with chartring the rise or fall of an industry?

Yet that is exactly what happened. When "It Happened One Night" was released the Jones family went to see it, Pop and Mom and Sister Elsie and little Johnny. Several millions of other Jones families went, too.

The undressing scene on which Gable and Colbert had worked with such professional skill caught their eyes. Whatever implications it might have had escaped the youngsters, but the hero's lack of underwear did not. Next morning, while preparing for school, Johnny insisted that he would not don an undershirt. Since the weather was warm, mother raised no objection. When wash day came she found that her husband was one with her son in following the star. He had not worn an undershirt, either.

This innocuous little drama was repeated in countless homes. Within a little while the haberdashers began to complain that they were overstocked with men's undershirts. They wouldn't move any more than an ice jam. Inquiries were instituted—not only by the retailers, but by manufacturers as well.

They found that "It Happened One Night" was their undoing. The boys wanted to be like Clark Gable—and cut their underwear equipment to a pair of shorts. There was no way to fight a situation like this. A business is utterly helpless in the face of what amounts to a spontaneous boycott.

$3,000,000 Damage Done By New England Floods

Whole communities in the New England states were marooned, roads washed out, and crops destroyed, by cloudbursts and floods that have swept the Atlantic seaboard of the United States. Eight persons are known dead and countless others injured, homeless or missing in the floods, which have done damage estimated at $3,000,000. This automobile was pictured, twirling around and around, as if it were a mere pebble, as the overflow from the Willowemac River at Liberty, N.Y., roared across the surrounding countryside.

"Baby Hitler" Killed

CLEVELAND, July 28.—(CP)—Donald Warren, the boy whose retouched baby picture was published as a photograph of Adolph Hitler in his infancy, was killed today when he fell from his bicycle. He was riding with a candy sucker in his mouth and a milk bottle in his hand. The bottle smashed and a splinter of glass penetrated his chest. It never has been explained how Donald's picture got into a newspaper photograph service files as a likeness of Hitler. The publication was denounced in Germany.

Montreal Police Capture Laurels

MONTREAL, July 28. — (CP).—Montreal police won their annual tournament Wednesday for the first time since 1932. They took the Montreal Police Athletic Association title from the Toronto policemen, who had captured it five successive times.

Sergeant Raymond Guidon, veteran of several police track and field meets, and a newcomer, Gangling Ian Hume from Foster, Que., paced the winners to victory before a crowd of 10,000 in Molson Stadium. Both had fifteen points and shared equally eight firts, four seconds and two thirds.

Montreal piled up fifty-three points against forty-nine for Toronto and were exceptionally strong in the field, winning eight of thirteen tests, while taking only one of the six track events.

The powerful Guidon provided the outstanding performance of the meet, shattering the record for the javelin throw with a heave of 192 feet and 2 inches, 24 feet better than the existing Provincial record.

Slot Machine Men To Ask Refund

WINDSOR, Ont., July 27 (CP).—Windsor civic authorities debated today whether slot machine owners were entitled to a return of part of $4,180 licence fees paid on 271 machine operated here this year because slot machines will be illegal after August 1, under a recent amendment to the criminal code.

Several Ontario communities have written Attorney-General Gordon Conant asking if the slot machine owners should be given a rebate on 1938 licence fees because of the new law.

Slot machine owners here have not asked City Council for a return of part of the money, but they will shortly, according to one operator.

Police here said the new law would lessen their difficulties in handling slot machine cases. Previously, police had to prove a machine operator had given cash or merchandise in return for slugs from the machine, before a charge could be laid.

Merchants expressed mixed opinions regarding the expected disappearance of the machines next week. Hamburger stand owners said revenue from the machines was sufficient to pay their rent, and that it would be missed. Other merchants said they were opposed to the machines, but carried them because their competitors did.

Owners of establishments where 39 slot machines were found last weekend will appear in court Friday on charges of operating gaming houses.

A Real Program

OMAHA, Neb., July 28 (A.P.). — Listeners of radio station WOW of Omaha had a wow of a time the other night. The station's line crossed a private circuit during the broadcast of a nationally known orchestra and an unidentified housewife and her husband cut in with an animated discussion over what the husband should eat. Telephone calls to WOW piled up for a few minutes before the homey talk was cut out by switching to an emergency station line.

Record Entry For Canadian Henley

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 28 (CP).—Canada's greatest rowing extravaganza—the Royal Henley—opened today for the 56th time with a record entry and a distinctly United States tinge.

Defending the senior open singles title and expected to retain it is Joe Burk of Philadelphia. And highly favored for the club honors are Buffalo Westsiders with their huge entry of 160.

Five hundred oarsmen will compete during the regatta which ends Saturday. The entry list represents 18 clubs from as widely separated points as Regina and Boston.

Toronto Argonauts, winners of the club championship last year, are considered the best bet to turn back Westsides and it is just possible their Johnny Coulson may be the man to take Burk's measure. It has not been announced definitely if Coulson will compete in the singles as Coach Ted Punchard is depending upon him to pull an oar in the eights.

MORE ABOUT—

Ilmoyle swore that he was not the second of the two men Bruce Menzies saw trying to force an entrance into the shop.

As reported yesterday, the charge made by Mr. Wheeler was to the effect that police officer should not permit the commission of a crime if they had knowledge of its planning before hand.

Giving the details of the robbery of Payne's butcher shop at Perry and George streets, October 1, 1937, Wheeler said in evidence Wednesday afternoon that Constables Piercy and A. Menzies came to the station about 11.30 p.m. October 1st.

"Piercy called Sergeant Wigg out to the sidewalk. When Wigg came back I asked him what was the matter. He said no one was to go south of the C.P.R. that night. The next thing about it was when Payne came into the station and said his store had been busted in. He said he believed McIlmoyle was in on it because he had seen him standing in front of the store when he was going home. P. C. Clarke came in and said they'd look for a man named Roland Miles. He was arrested two days later.

Tom Lansfield told me a week later that Norman McIlmoyle had told him Payne's shop was going to be knocked off, and Lansfield told Bruce Menzies, a county constable."

Wheeler said Bruce Menzies acted on the information, got in the store and caught a man but he got away when Constable A. Menzies and Piercy enttered the shop and tangled with Bruce Menzies.

"Bruce Menzies told me afterward he would have got the man if they had left him alone."

Wheeler said his charge was that Piercy and Archie Menzies could have prevented the break in, but they didn't do so.

He admitted to Mr. Carley that the two constables doubtless made an honest mistake.

"Bruce Menzies had a gun poked in his ear by his son. No man would do that to his father except by mistake."

Wheeler's opinion was that the affair had been purposely delayed by the two constables "to get some added glory for P.C. Piercy and Archie Menzies."

Reference to the police record books by Mr. Carley showed that Wheeler was on station duty from 12 to 2 on the night of October 1, 1937, and that his beat did not extend south of Sherbrooke street, and added: "Why should Sergt. Wigg tell you, as you say, not to go south of Sherbrooke street when he knew you would be in the station two hours, and that your beat did not go south of Sherbrooke street?"

Wheeler replied that Wigg seemed to be surprised that night when he was called to the sidewalk.

Admits An Error

Mr. Carley pointed out that the records showed Roland Miles was arrested at 3.45 a.m. the night of the break in."

"So you must have been wrong when you said Miles was arrested two days later?" Mr. Carley suggested.

"Yes, I must have been," Mr. Wheeler acknowledged, saying that the records were correct.

Mr. Carley reviewed Mr. Wheeler's record on the force including several warnings leading to his final dismissal.

Mr. Carley—"Your charge about the Payne butcher shop was mostly a suspicion that Norman McIlmoyle had given Piercy and Menzies a tip off he didn't give to you. And your complaint is that they didn't parade up and down in front of the butcher shop to prevent a break in?"

"Oh, no it isn't," Wheeler replied. He denied that he ever asked a youth named Joe Fontaine to stage a break in.

Thomas Lansfield, the next witness, said he knew Norman McIlmoyle. He was a young man of about 25 years, living on the street near Mr. Lansfield's shop.

He declared that he did not tell Bruce Menzies there was likely to be a break in at Payne's butcher shop.

Mr. Frost—Did you give Menzies any information about a break in?

"None whatever."

Mr. Frost—You know that you are in no way involved in this matter.

"Yes, I realize that."

"The last witness said he understood you passed the word to Bruce Menzies?"

"No I did not."

Mr. Lansfield said Bruce Menzies' daughter was in a contest at Brock street rink that night. "I had sponsored her for an advertising stunt and I found out she won. So I went up to congratulate her and her father. At the rink Mr. Menzies asked me to drive him down George street to Lake street. He also asked me for my overcoat and hat as he was going to watch Payne's store."

"Did Menzies say when he heard there might be a break in?" Mr. Frost asked.

"I'm not sure. I think he said he heard it the night before."

"When you went with Menzies did you know there was going to be a break in?" Judge Deroche asked.

"I did not know it."

"Are you sure about that?"

"I'm positive."

Mr. Frost—"Did you tell Wheeler, any time, McIlmoyle had told you about a break in, and you told Menzies?"

"No; that's an absolute lie."

Mr. Lansfield said his recollection of subsequent conversations was hazy, "but my memory is that when I spoke to Wheeler I said I was sorry he had lost his job."

Mr. Frost—And that must have been after December 22 last nearly three months after the Payne shop affair.

Mr. Lansfield said there might have been some mention then of the Payne break in, but he couldn't recall what was said in the talk with Wheeler.

Was Tipped Off

Bruce Menzies testified that about 8 p.m. on October 1 last, Norman McIlmoyle had told him there was going to be a break in at Payne's and that the police would be there. Witness got Mr. Lansfield to drive him south on George street. He watched the place from a distance of 75 feet.

"I saw two men go up to the side door. One would watch and the other would heave on the side door. One of them broke a window. When the door was forced with a loud crash the police raced from somewhere to the door. By that time I ran out from behind a fence and when I got up to the store, Piercy and Archie Menzies grabbed me outside. I shouted who I was. We looked inside the store, but the two men had got away. The police seemed vexed at me for butting in. They didn't know I was going to be there."

Mr. Frost—I congratulate you on your miraculous escape.

Mr. Menzies said he didn't know Miles, and his name was not mentioned by Piercy and A. Menzies.

Constable A. Menzies

Police Constable A. Menzies filled in the picture of the Payne job with a few details.

"I got the information a day or two before October 1, told the Chief and he detailed Piercy and me to it."

Mr. Frost—Who told you?

"Do I have to answer that?"

Judge Deroche—Yes.

It was Norman McIlmoyle."

"Whot is he?"

"A friend of mine."

"How old are you?"—"Twenty-eight."

"And McIlmoyle?"—"About 26 or 27."

Witness said: "McIlmoyle used to box for me about seven years ago when I had a boys' club."

"McIlmoyle told me that a fellow had suggested a day or two before that they break into Payne's shop. I took McIlmoyle to Chief Newnall and he told McIlmoyle to lay off it, but to let him know if he heard any more about it."

"Did you go to the Chief for instructions?"

"No, sir. I was working with Piercy."

"Have you any knowledge whether officers were told not to go there?"

"I believe the instructions were that the police car was not to cruise south of the C.P.R. that night."

Constable Menzies said he thought Miles was alone at the store, broke a side window and crawled in. "I saw only one man. Piercy took one door and I another, but Miles must have got out a third door. Just then my father rushed up from some place and we jumped on him. A few minutes afterwards McIlmoyle came up from somewhere and told us which way Miles had gone."

"I had never seen Miles before that night. He had stolen the police matron's car, and left it down on Perry street. He may have driven down in it."

Constable Menzies said Piercy and he had an idea where Miles might go. Later that night they went to the house and found him in bed.

Mr. Frost—"You say you didn't know Miles?"

"I'm only speaking for myself, not about Piercy and maybe others."

"Did Piercy mention Miles before you went down there?"

"We hoped it might be Miles."

Witness said Miles pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering the shop and was sentenced to the reformatory at Guelph.

To Mr. Carley's query he said he had not spoken to his father about the information he had received from McIlmoyle.

"Our information was that Miles might try one or two places. That explains how we go to Payne's shop as soon as we could."

A Wedding Present

Mr. Frost—Did you ever give McIlmoyle any money or clothing?

"Yes, but that will sound tough on McIlmoyle. I gave him some money to get married. I gave him $8 and a suit of clothes I had."

"When was that?"

"About five months ago."

"That would be after the Payne affair?"

"It had nothing whatever to do with that. It was a gift because he was going to get married, and I had known him so well about seven years ago when he was in our boxing club."

Constable Piercy

Constable William Piercy was called as the next witness. He related that Constable Menzies had told him about a conversation with McIlmoyle. The information was that the fellow named Miles was going to break into Payne's or Hudson's store.

"We interviewed McIlmoyle about it. He said he didn't know the name of the fellow (Miles) who had told him about having done other jobs, one of them Hood and Cumming."

Constable Piercy said he had heard of Miles only by name. He was then wanted for theft of a car. The officer went to the house where Miles was supposed to be staying but the people there didn't know where he was. Witness recounted his arrival with Archie Menzies at the Payne store, and the sudden rush by County Constable Bruce Menzies with a gun in his hand."

Mr. Frost—Did you see any other man there than Miles?

"No; only Bruce Menzies."

"How long after Miles crashed the door or window was it until McIlmoyle appeared?"

"That would be hard to tell."

"At any rate McIlmoyle knew the culprit had gone and also which direction?"—"Yes."

"Did you ever pay McIlmoyle anything?"—"No sir."

"Did you ever have any transaction with him?" "I think he washed my car once."

Proposal By Miles

Norman McIlmoyle, 22, told Mr. Frost he had been twice in trouble, once for vagrancy, and once for theft. "That was when I was younger." He added that he had been farming for the last few weeks. In 1937 he did whatever odd jobs he could get, sawing wood, washing cars and so on.

"Where did you meet Miles?"

"He came to my home, said he was looking for me, and wanted to ask me a few questions."

"What did he say?"—"He asked me if I'd go and rob a couple of stores. I didn't give him any satisfaction. Then he came around and told me he was going to rob Payne's store, and asked me if I would go with him. I told him I didn't know. I thought it over and decided instead of getting into trouble I'd tell the police. He told me about a lot of crimes he had done, so I told Menzies. I thought the best place for a fellow like that was in jail."

Witness said Miles came to his house again the night of the Payne break-in. "I said I'd be down there I went down and stayed about half a block from the store. I saw him get in the store, then all of a sudden there was a lot of noise. I ran across the road and told Piercy and Menzies which way Miles went."

"Did you tell Lansfield anything about it?"—"No."

"Did you tell Bruce Menzies?"—"Yes, early in the evening."

Mr. Frost—"I suggest that you were the other man Bruce Menzies saw at the store?"—"No sir. I was walking up and down George street."

"If it was not you, who was it?"—"How do I know."

"You admit you were near there before the break in?"—"Yes."

"And you were on hand soon enough after to tell the police the way he had gone?"—"Yes."

Mr. Frost—"And you never saw any unknown person in communication with Miles. I ask you again if it wasn't you, who was it?"

"I don't know."

"That's the riddle that's got to be solved?". "Yes."

Mr. Frost—"Are you sure you didn't make the suggestion to Miles to break into the Payne store?"

McIlmoyle—"Yes sir."

"You deny you suggested that he break in?"

"I told him I didn't want to break in."

Mr. Carley—"Did the gift of clothing and the $8 from Archie Menzies have anything to do with the information?"—"No."

"What was it for?"

"To help me get married."

Constable Menzies had explained that McIlmoyle had come to him and said he needed eight dollars to make a sum he needed to get married.

Sergeant Wigg

Police Sergeant Wm. Wigg testified that the instructions were given to the men in charge of the police car not to go south of the C.P.R. at the request of Constable Piercy.

"I didn't see the Chief about it. I thought they were watching a place in the south end, and didn't want any interference."

Mr. Frost—"Did you tell Wheeler you had instructions from the Chief for the men not to go south?"—"No sir."

Sergt. Wigg said he had been twenty-three years on the force and had never heard any complaint about his record. He added that Wheeler was "a very capable officer when he was not drinking, but he drank a lot of the time."

Constable Rogers

"I met him at George and Brock streets about 1.30 a.m. He said I should have been down at the King street wood yard, there was a mixed party. I said "You know a lot about what's going on" and he answered "I know more than you fellows do." I told him he had better be careful or he was going to get himself in trouble.

McIlmoyle asked me if I could shoot straight I said "pretty straight"'

He said "you'd better be certain because some of those fellows can shoot straight."

I asked him what he meant, and he said he knew more than the police about what was going on.

I said "it looks to me as if you have a finger in some things. Do you find them jobs?" He laughed and didn't commit himself.

I asked him how did he work it. He said if there were three men in on a job the money was split four ways, "and I get a fourth." I didn't know whether to take him seriously or not. I took it with a grain of salt, but I thought about it quite frequently. I told the Chief I thought Menzies was making a mistake trusting McIlmoyle as much as he did, or having anything to do with him."

Mr. Carley—"McIlmoyle wasn't talking about spoils from the Payne store?" "No, just in general. I thought it over more, subsequent to the Fitzpatrick and Geraghty affair."

Judge Deroche—Don't go into that now. We shall take that up later.

Mr. Frost called McIlmoyle again and asked him if he wished to say anything about Constable Roger's evidence.

Mr. McIlmoyle—"I was just kidding him. He's one of the new men."

Mr. Frost—"Did you think you could kid him?"—"Sure."

"Did Constable Rogers truthfuly relate what you did say?"

"Yes, in one way."

"That is, except the kidding?"—"Yes."

Judge Deroche—That is serious kidding, boy. Don't do things like that.

Ontario '37 Births Lowest In History

TORONTO, July 28. — (CP). — The 1937 birth rate in Ontario will be lowest in the history of the province, vital statistics officials at Queen's Park estimated to-day. The complete figures will not be ready for release for another two months.

As legitimate births drop, records suggest a substantial increase in illegitimate births during the year, in line with the trend of recent years.

It is expected the 1937 birth rate will prove to be about 15 for each thousand of population, compared to 16.7 in 1936, and 25.3 in the peak year, 1921.

Wood Ordered To Pay Only $2667.50

In publishing a cable report of the decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in London re Wood vs. Wood, it was erroneously stated in the Examiner that "an order should be made substituting for the judgment pronounced by Mr. Justice Makins—an order on the defendant to pay into court to the account of the plaintiffs $267,750 with interest of five per cent."

The amount mentioned should read $2,667.50 instead of $266.750. In the copy coming to the Examiner there was not sufficient clarity in the punctuation marks within the figures, and that is how the much larger sum happened to gain insertion. It will be noticed that the same figures when punctuated differently, create an entirely different meaning.

Mr. J. F. Strickland, K.C., in referring to the report by which it was made to appear that Mr. Gerald A. Wood is required to pay into court the sum of $266,750 with interest, said:

The facts briefly are these: The plaintiffs sued for an accounting in respect of the holdings of four hunhundred and eighty-five shares of Canada Cement common stock and claimed to be entitled to one-half the different between $102.00 per share and $250.00 per share, namely, a difference in their favor of $74.00 per share, or the sum of $35,890.00 plus interest thereon and an accounting in respect of any dividends in connection with the said stock.

The Privy Council has varied the judgment of the Hon. Mr. Justice Makins, the trial judge, who found that the plaintiff were entitled as above indicated, by ordering the defendant to pay into court the sum of $2,667.50, together with interest at five per cent from the 30th of September, 1925, until the date of payment.

Your report also contained the following paragraph:

"Having said this much, Their Lordships think it right to add they make no suggestion against the defendant's honesty in this matter. He seems to have acted with good faith and to have relied upon his lawyer."

Mr. Strickland is counsel now for Mr. Gerald A. Wood, but was not in any way associated with the case in 1925, which was the time on which Their Lordships based the above comment.

NO ROTARY MEETING.

Members of the Peterborough Rotary Club are reminded that because next Monday is Civic Holiday, there will be no Rotary meeting next week.

IT'S AN EPIDEMIC.

The redecorating of town buildings which got under way with the repainting of the City Buildings and of the Peterborough Club, is assuming epidemic proportions. The latest building to get its face lifted is the Bank of Toronto structure upon which the painters are now busy.

HOLLYHOCKS DAMAGED

Tall hollyhocks which yesterday stood straight and dignified in city flower gardens took a beating from the wind and driving rain which struck the city at noon. Many of the taller spikes were smashed to the ground and the gardeners report that lilies and gladiolas were flattened but not damaged to any extent by the wind.

LANDMARK TAKEN DOWN

The large tree which stood on the road in front of the court house fell before the axes of workmen this week, who were preparing the road surface for pavement. This tree almost a century old has felt the impact of many cars particularly during the winter months when the surving road was icy.

FAR FROM ENOUGH.

Through an unfortunate misunderstanding it was published that when the barn of W. J. Davis, on Highway 28, R.R. 3, Peterborough, was burned to the ground on Tuesday, it was completely covered by insurance. Mr. Davis carried only $1,200 not nearly enough to cover the loss.

POLICE COURT DESERTED.

The investigation in the Council Chamber into the administration of Peterborough's Police Department stole the show away from the Police Court this morning and all but a handful of the usual patrons of the spectators' rows deserted in favor of the probe. The few faithful got a poor reward, for the Police Court docket was extremely meagre.

FINED FOR DRUNKENNESS.

A truck driver who first pleaded not guilty to a charge of being drunk in a public place on Wednesday night afterward changed his plea to guilty, before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., and was fined $10.00, and 75 cents costs. An argument with local Chinese as to why they were not back in China helping to fight the Japanese was responsible for his arrest.

R.C.M.P. INVESTIGATING

Corporal Jack Wood of Lindsay is reported to be investigating the recent theft of dynamite caps in the village of Lakefield. It is stated storage of explosives comes under the jurisdiction of the Federal police, hence the presence of the Mountie. So far there are at least fifty of the dangerous dynamite caps missing and villagers are walking and driving carefully. Any person finding a cap is urged to get in touch with Constable Hendren at once.

HARRY KESTER IS IMPROVING

Dr. Bob Young reported today that Harry Kester, Toronto furniture salesman who almost drowned in the Canal two weeks ago is making steady progress to complete recovery. The 21-year-old youth came to Peterborough seven months ago and had been living with Bob Hotrum on Park street. Ernie Hotrum, a son, was the rescuer and many local citizens are clamoring for a decoration in recognition of the heroic effort. It is expected that Kester will be able to leave the hospital next Monday.

A GOOD GARDENER

Mr. Fred Mahood has been successful in raising vegetables in the past years on a vacant lot on the east side of George street between London and Dublin streets. His ambition to continue shows no signs of surrender. He has the lot all planted again this year with such a variety of vegetables. The rows are perfectly straight laid out by line and measurements, and it gives pleasure to those who are passing on their routine of business to pause and enjoy looking at his work, which shows much skill and taste.

Aquatic Meet

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 28. (CP).—The 56th Royal Canadian Henley Regatta opened today on the old and abandoned Welland canal with invading crews from Buffalo, Detroit, Winnipeg, and Lachine, Que., scoring wins in the morning heats.

Buffalo West Sides, whose array of oarsmen are warm favorites to capture the aggregate points title in the three-day regatta, sent out the first winning boat, A West side 140-pound four defeated St. Catharines Rowing Club by more than four lengths in the opening heat.

Placing one-two on the second heat, Detroit and Toronto Dons also qualified for this afternoon's final. Toronto Argonauts were eliminated in the second heat.

Winnipeg Rowing Club's junior four won the first heat of the junior fours in seven minutes, 10 seconds. Con. Riley, Jr., stroked the western boat that finished ahead of University of Toronto, also qualifying, and North Bay rowing club.

Lachine, Que., made the fast time of 6:55 in winning the second heat from Fort William and Buffalo West Sides.

Memories of two decades ago were revived for Henley old-timers when Con Riley with his younger brother in the bow swept down to impressive victory in the junior four heat. Con Riley Sr. was a famous Henley competitor in early post-war years.

A North Bay crew, making their first bid as new members of the Canadian Association of amateur oasmen, staged a courageous battle against two fours that outweighted them considerably. The North Bay boys, stroked by W. Roynon used a heavy boat borrowed from St. Catharines Rowing Club.

Feder Not Skipping Out Of His Sentence

TORONTO, July 28 (C.P.). — Manny Feder, convicted keeper of the Brown Derby as a gambling place, abandoned his appeal last week, but has not yet begun to serve his four-months sentence, it was learned at Queen's Park to-day.

Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, explained it was the custom to give a man some time to get his affairs in order, pending which bail granted at the time of notice of appeal held good. In Feder's case bail was $10,000.

"No doubt he will surrender himself shortly to serve his sentence," Mr. Nixon said. "He must do this within a reasonable time or necessary steps will be taken.... Feder will serve his sentence. Make no mistake about that."

C. F. Neelands, Deputy Provincial Secretary, said Feder would probably serve his term at the Jail Farm.

MRS. J. J. BRECKENRIDGE

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, July 28.—In accordance with her wishes, the funeral of the late Mrs. John J. Breckenridge, was held privately from her late residence in Asphodel, on Tuesday afternoon, July 26.

The service was conducted by the Rev. F. W. Newell, of Hastings, pastor of the Westwood United church of which deceased was a valued member. Rev. Newell chose as his text one of her favorite verses of scripture taken from St. John 2: 14, "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so, I would have told you, I go to prepare a place for you." He also read two of her most loved hymns, "Rock of Ages" and "Abide With Me."

The deceased, formerly Hannah Shearer, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Shearer, was born in Otonabee on Sept. 23, 1871 and was highly respected. Her radiant personality and warm hospitality won for her many friends who regret to hear of her demise following a short illnses in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on Sunday morning.

Besides her sorrowing husband she leaves to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother one son, William John, at home, and three daughters, Helen, Mrs. Eric Merrils of Dartford; Grace of Toronto and Elizabeth at home; also two sistegs and one brother, Mrs. William Porter, Mrs. Andrew Evans and James Shearer, all of Otonabee.

The pall-bearers were five nephews Roy Porter, Joseph Porter, Fred Fife, John Evans and Arthur Shearer, also Eric Merrils, a son-in-law. Interment was in the Westwood cemetery.

Aged Farmer Dies In Fall Off Mow

(Examiner Correspondence.)

KEENE, July 28.—A pioneer resident and one of the most popular of the older generation in the Keene district, Hugh James Nelson, 76 died instantly when he toppled from a mow at his son Fred's farm and received a fractured skull on the barn floor.

Mr. Nelson lives in Keene village but yesterday morning went to visit his son's farm, about a mile east of Lang village. He was assisting in the barn mow when he is believed to have tripped on a sling rope and fell to the floor. Dr. H. Wright of Keene examined the body and notified police and coroner. No inquest will be held.

The diceased is survived by his wife, two sons and two daughters, Fred of Otonabee, Stewart of California, Mrs. J. Gail, Otonabee and Mrs. F. Moffat, in the West.

THE BIRDS HOLLYHOCK.

Kitchener isn't the only town that has tall hollyhocks. The birds dropped a seed in the middle of Mrs. R. Parnell's flower garden at 789 Water Street last fall and to-day the solitary double pink stalk is almost touching the 13-foot mark.

New Sitting Record

TORONTO. — "Sailor Jack" Docherty perched at the top of a flagpole at Sunnyside Beach here from June 30 until last night, but he didn't get his name in the newspapers until today, and few were aware he was out to break the "world record." Today he claimed he broke the previous "record" by almost four days by sitting on the flagpole 27 days and 41 minutes.

Youth Drowned In Pond; Body Recovered

An unidentified youth was drowned in the pond near the C.P.R. subway at Norwood this morning, the body being recovered at 10.00 o'clock.

The young man, apparently about 20 years of age and 125 pounds in weight, had brown hair and his left elbow as stiff as if from the result of an operation, the scar of which is quite apparent.

The tragedy was discovered when a small boy heard sounds as if some one were in distress and then saw bubbles on th surface of the pond. William Rogers dived into the water and recovered the body, which was clad only in a bathing suit.

The drowned man had been wearing dark trousers of duck material, a grey sweat shirt and grey cap and black shoes, and in his pocket was a deck of playing cards with the initials "F.D."

Coroner Dr. H. G. Charlton was notified and had the body removed to Tedford's undertaking establishment, where it is being held for identification purposes.

Douro Girl Has Close Escape

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, July 28. — Margaret Coughlin, 21, of Douro, had a narrow escape from drowning in the fast-flowing Otonabee River about a half-mile south of this village on the River Road last night when the light roadster she was driving left the road and plunged into the water.

Miss Coughlin was alone at the time, and it believed a piece of shelving rock on a sharp curve threw the car out of control. Miss Coughlin reached shore unassisted. The car dropped into six feet of water and was recovered by garage men to-day.

Officer Praises Battery Unit

Col. S. A. Lee, M. C., of Kingston spoke highly of the efficiency shown by the Fourth Field Battery R. C. A. at the Armouries last night after he had inspected the unit. The 30 men under command of Captain J. A. Harstone and put through their paces by Sgt. Major J. V. Weyer, paraded like veterans. Their gun practise described by the inspecting officer as "quiet and efficient" was particularly good.

Col. Lee was accompanied by Major G. G. Simmons, of Kingston and by Col. F. P. Lloyd, V. D. of Cobourg, officer commanding the 4th Field Brigade, and Reg. Sgt. Major Hanks of Cobourg. The battery went through gun drill, battery drill and gun practise and will go to camp down east within a week.

Public To Have Inside View Of Laboratory

A glimpse behind the heretofore barred doors of a great research laboratory will be afforded residents of Peterborough and vicinity next week when "Previews of Progress," famous circus of science produced by General Motors, visits here under the sponsorship of The Examiner in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club, Kinsmen Club, and Wisemen Club.

Experiments now being conducted in great research laboratories will be publicly displayed to give people an insight of the progress that may be expected in the next generation. No technical matter will be used in the demonstrations, and all subjects will be dramatized in such a way that even a child will understand and enjoy them.

Many of the exhibits will be used in the 1939 New York World's Fair, where visions of the future will be featured. Peterborough's advance glimpse of the marvels of modern science has been made possible through the co-operation of the local civic organizations and the Examiner.

On a stage to be erected opposite the grand stand at the Exhibition Grounds a series of amazing feats will be performed. Much as the magician of a few years ago bewildered audiences with mysterious disappearing acts, sleight of hand and other tricks, the science commentator in "Previews of Progress" will mystify thousands by the performance of almost unbelievable scientific miracles.

Merely by waving his hand in the air the lecturer will cause music to issue from an unseen source, and by moving his hand will cause the music to become loud or soft, or to disappear entirely.

A million volts of electricity will crackle across the improvised stage to illuminate electric bulbs held in the air without wires to connect them. Ma's first "cold light" recently discovered by research scientists, will be displayed. The light is the first that has ever been artificially produced that does not waste most of its energy in heat.

Only one performance will be held each night. No tickets is absolutely free. The curtain rises at 9 o'clock and the show lasts nearly two hours.

PETITION CIRCULATING

Several Westclox employees who are residents of Ashburnham are making a thorough canvas of the east end homes seeking signatures to a petition which will be placed before the council asking that the London Street Dam be reopened to pedestrian traffic. The sponsors of the drive claim the check taken by the city to determine how many people used the structure was an unfair one and that a census should have been taken for a week and an average struck.

Pioneer Campbellford Couple Live Again In Memories

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 28.—Living in this town are one of the oldest couples in the Dominion of Canada in the person of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Moir, Centre street. Their combined ages total 182 years and they will celebrate their 70th wedding anniversary this coming December.

Mr. Moir, who came out to Canada at the age of 21, will celebrate his 92nd birthday on November 11, and up to the present time he is in the best of health, with only slightly-failing eyesight to mark his declining years.

It was in the same year that Confederation was signed that Benjamin Moir boarded the old sailing vessel, Transatlantic, along with one hundred other passengers, who had each paid the sum of $20 for the 33-day crossing. But it was a joyous trip for these young adventurous souls who were leaving for a land of cold winters, of vast lakes and vaster forests, and the passengers made the trip seem shorter with dancing to the music of the fiddle, and playing cards. Mr. Moir landed at Montreal with $5.00 in his pocket and immediately began his search for a job. He landed his first position in Ingersoll, where he made bricks at 10s per 1,000, and during the spring of the following year came to Campbellford where he worked as a blacksmith for several months and then went to the woods where he cut cordwood into four foot lengths at 25c a cord. A good man could cut two cords in a day, and 50 cents was considered a good day's wages by these hardy pioneers. And you weren't paid in cash; a trade bill on one of the stores in the village was the nearest most got to currency.

For three years Mr. Moir, who has never been out of work since he came to Canada, worked on a farm at $10.00 per month, which was increased to $200 a year when he got married and boarded himself. His wife, the former Anne Buchanan, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Buchanan, pioneers of Seymour Township, and it was in 1868 that they plighted their troth in her parents' home on what is still known as the English Line. The late Rev. Robert Neil, pastor of Burnbrae Church, officiated at the ceremony which has kept these two joined together in holy wedlock for a few months less than 70 years. Mrs. Moir, who is still able to perform her ordinary household duties in their comfortable little home here will be 90 years of age next April.

Two-Room Cottages.

Their first home was situated on a 50-acre farm and consisted of two room which were in those days jokingly referred to as a "butt and a bin" (a kitchen and a bedroom). There were no cellars in these old log houses and for heatin ga range in the kitchen and a fireplace kept the temperature livable even on the coldest days. For fuel, wood was used and though most farms had their own wood lot there was plenty for sale at $1.50 a cord, if you wanted to buy it.

Wheat and barley were the principal crops of these people, who for 50 years made a Seymour Township farm their home and the home of their six children, four of whom are living.

In those days, when they made their own tallow dip candles, did all of their own baking, sewing and still found time to go to the neighbor's house for the occasional dance, and if the neighbor happened to live five miles away they thought nothing of walking the distance, returning with the first streaks of dawn in the sky and starting their day's work in another hour. Neither has had any serious illness during their lives, despite the rigors of the climate, particularly the winters which Mr. Moir claims are to-day not a patch on what they used to be. He remembers one back in 1870—it was on March 16, when it snowed all one night to a depth of three feet, and another heavy storm a week later added an equal amount. It was the funeral of the late John Diamond that indelibed the date on his mind for he, like all of the other neighbors, turned out to help dig a trench a quarter of a mile long so deep that a man could not be seen when walking in it, for the corpse to be borne to the cemetery.

It is amidst the wealth of such memories as these that this fine old couple still live and enjoy life. Both with keen minds and bodies strong enough to enjoy a few more years of sweet old age.

Leader Entertains Millbrook Club

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, July 28.—Mrs. W. H. Armstrong, for the past three years the popular and efficient leader of the Girls' Klim Club, entertained the members, their mothers, and the hostesses of the past year, at a picnic on the lawns of her home, Fourth line Cavan, on Tuesday, over twenty-five being present.

Pictures were taken of the various groups as the initial event of the afternoon, after which adjournment was made to the kitchen of the large homestead, when two girls, Kathleen Smith and Jean Belch demonstrated "How to prepare milk for the invalid's tray."

Following this, two other girls, Marian Belch and Ruby Fallis, repeated the same demonstration, only doing it in the way they considered best. The mothers and other guests looked on, as interested spectators, and at the close voted on which two they considered the winners, Marian and Ruby receiving the most support.

In view of the fact that the County Achievement Day is to be held at Millbrook on Saturday, July 30, the two chosen at Tuesday's gathering will uphold the honors for the local club, in competition with other entrants from Durham girls' organization. Some of the other clubs of the county have taken "Cottons may be smart", instead of the milk study as their project for the year, and both will receive demonstration on Saturday.

The leader collected the "Record Books" which the girls have kept through the year and these will be sent to Miss Greta Pollard, home economics' secretary, of Bowmanville, who will judge same and announce results at the Achievement gathering, when awards will be given.

While the mothers enjoyed a social time on the lawn, with their work, and social converse, the girls held an informal meeting indoors regarding preparations for the competition on Saturday, after which Martha Belch read an appreciative address, and Laureen Henderson presented Mrs. Armstrong with a handsome china vase. The recipient replied suitably, and a picnic supper was enjoyed before the guests left for home.

Millbrook Plans To Hold Reunion

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, July 28. — The meeting called by the Business Men's Association, and held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, gave an enthusiastic response to the suggestion that Millbrook and Cavan combine for an Old Home Week, sometime in 1939, practically everyone present endorsing, by a standing vote, the motion to carry on with this undertaking providing the general public will give it hearty, and practical, backing.

R. A. Ford, president of the B. M. A., was in the chair, among those who spoke in favor of a reunion were ex-Wardens P. Stinson and W. T. Wood; G. E. Burnham, Reeve Arthur Wood and Deputy-Reeve Garnet Shield; H. A. Kerr, and others.

In 1923, August 25, 26, and 27, Millbrook and Cavan held their first and only Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion, the event being a marked success, financially and otherwise. The minutes of the organization meeitng for that occasion were read, dated February 2, 1923, and the same procedure followed of having representatives in each ward of the village and township to ascertain the feeling of the people in regard to going on with the runion proposal, the Reeves and Councils of the two municipalities being chosen for this service.

A public meeting will be called on August 23, when these men will report results, and election of general committees will follow, the chairman in each case, to choose his own helpers, this being decided upon on motion of Ivan L. H. Gray, seconded by ex-Warden W. T. Wood.

Referring to the financial report of the initial reunion, it was found that total receipts were $1,740.84; total disbursements $1,097.70; balance $643.14, which was finally voted to the Agricultural Society for the specific purpose of erecting a grandstand at the fair grounds, the lack of such a convenience having been keenly felt during the reunion. By volunteer labor the society built the grandstand, estimating its cost, had all work been actually paid for, at $1,500.

A number of the speakers, on Tuesday evening urged setting the actual dates for the Old Home Week as soon as possible, and sending out the invitations several months ahead, "so former residents may plan, and save, in order to be here for the get-together."

Providing the response of the general public is favorable, and attendance at the general meeting on August 23 is large and interested, organization will be at once proceeded with, chairman and other officers elected, committees appointed, invitations drafted, dates set, and other important details given immediate attention.

Those voting in favor of the Reunion at Tuesday's meeting were: R. A. Ford, H. D. Bigelow, H. A. Kerr, P. Stinson, H. A. Fallis, W. T. Wood, G. E. Burnham, Ivan Gray, G. Ellsworth, P. I. Bentley, Barringer Brothers, D. K. Chiles, H. Nattress, Reeve W. E. Ball, F. L. Edworthy, F. A. Kidd, F. C. Scott, A. H. Jeffrey, Reeve W. A. Wood, Deputy-Reeve G. Shield, C. B. Sutton, W. W. Brown, J. J. Clarke.

FICTION AND FEATURES

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, is in love with Dr. Julian Paige, a serious-minded young physician who declares he will not permit himself to fall in love with Noel because of the contrasting world in which they live.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 2

THE MORNING after Julian's call Noel started burning all her bridges. She was the type of girl who never did things by halves. When she found that her uncle was in financial difficulties she turned over to him $100,000 in cash and negotiable securities. This represented a year's income, and left her with a very small amount indeed.

Then Noel went shopping. She bought a cheap tweed suit, a pair of low-heeled oxfords, and a small felt hat. Then a few blouses of linen and near silk. Things in direct contrast to what she wore.

When she had finished shopping, she realized with a little thrill that she was close to the Medical Arts building where Julian's offices were located. So she went and waited just outside the big revolving doors, and it wasn't very long before she saw Julian coming through them, a pretty dark-haired girl beside him, talking animatedly.

He would have walked past Noel without seeing her, but she put out a hand and called his name. He stopped short and smiled. "Why Noel, what a pleasant surprise!"

The dark girl stopped, waited a moment, then went on. There was something about the way she held her head that showed she wasn't any too pleased because Julian had stopped. "She's in love with him," Noel told herself, conscious of a sudden jealous pain.

Then she turned her eyes to Julian. "Thought you might take me to lunch."

"Gladly, only we'll have to go across the street, as I haven't much time."

They walked across the street.

The De Luxe Cafe was one of those paper-napkin kind of places, Julian explained, but added that it was quitesanitary and the food was well prepared.

Noel looked about the neat white-tiled place with interest. This was something that belonged to Julian's world. The place where most of his meals were eaten, as she found out later.

As soon as they were seated, Noel told him that she had changed her plans about going to California, and later to Paris with her aunt.

Julian looked questioningly into the sweet, ardent face under the smart hat, which hadn't cost less than $35, though of course he hadn't any idea of its cost. He only knew in his man's vague way that it was a very fetching hat indeed and that it enhanced the delicate gold of Noel's haid and the dreamy blue of her eyes.

"You see," Noel went on blithely, "it just struck me that I know absolutely nothing of this city where I was born, and which my grandfather helped to build. I haven't spent more than two weeks here since I was a child."

Julian did not meet her eyes. Perhaps he was afraid she could see that her news brought him an undeniable happiness. The thought of an ocean between himself and this slender girl, who meant a great deal more to him than he would acknowledge, had been disturbing, though he knew for his own peace of mind, it would be far better for her to go.

"You'll find it very dull here, I'm afraid," he said at last.

"Oh, no, I shan't." Noel said quickly. But her underlip was trembling slightly. She was thinking again of the pretty dark girl, who already had such a start over herself when it came to winning Julian's interest. Perhaps his love. Or at least they had seemed to be quite old friends. Perhaps they went to lunch together every day. So she began a little timidly, "That pretty girl who was with you—is she—I mean, are you—" but she couldn't finish. After all, it was a silly question to ask. But she wanted to know so very much.

Julian's eyes met hers frankly. "That's Ruth Chester, a nurse. She's studying bacteriology in the clinic next to my office. We're naturally interested along the same lines, and so we're quite good friends."

Noel's questioning gaze did not leave his face. And she received his words with reservations. Love was so important and she knew it often intruded into places where it was the least expected.

"Of course, if we had any attraction for each other beyond that of friendship," Julian went on unexpectedly, "it would be very suitable. But unfortunately, it looks as if the unsuitable people are always falling in love with each other."

"Perhaps that's the way nature meant for love to be," Noel said. Julian's frankness had made her feel better. But she was certain as long as Ruth Chester worked by Julian's side, she'd always be jealous of her.

Julian was looking at her now with from his career, or any other woman, could turn any man's thoughts away a smile that was both grave and tender. "You're so lovely, Noel. You if there should be another."

"But you're still determined not to fall in love with me?" she asked archly, a wave of happiness suddenly flooding her heart.

"I could give all the hateful money away, you know," Noel said thoughtfully. Of course in a way, she had done that already.

"Don't be absurd," he said with tender reproach. Then looked at his watch. "I've only a few minutes left. Perhaps you'd better tell me of your plans. I have a feeling that I'm going to disapprove."

"You probably will," she smiled. "You, see you told me you could never belong to my world of extravagance and frivolity. So I'm going to belong to yours."

"I'm going to get a job," Noel went on. "I'm going to find out about the kind of world you live in. I'm going to learn things about life and living, things I couldn't learn ay other way."

He shook his head. "Eve if it's only a lark or a sudden whim, Noel, I think the idea is absurd."

She gave him a sweet, willful smile. Then they rose and left the cafe. Out on the sidewalk, Julian looked at her, his face a little stern. "You're too attractive, Noel, and too inexperienced. I'd much prefer that you give up this rather reckless idea and go on with your aunt."

She shook her head. "Too late to change now. I've burned by bridges." Just how late it was for her to give nup her plans, she did not intend for him to know. But when she had tnurned over all her money to her uncle, the die had been cast. She couldn't turn back if she wanted to. It would be a year before she'd have money again.

"You're very stubborn, Noel," Julian began. 'I'm afraid the trouble is that you were not spanked enough when you were young," he finished with a tender, unwilling smile.

"Perhaps not," she agreed with a little flush.

Julian was ready to cross the street now. He turned back for a minute. "If you do insist on carrying out this whim, you mnst promise to keep in close touch with me. So I'll know your impetuosity is not getting you into trouble."

"I'll promise that," Noel smiled. Wasn't that one of the objectives she had formed in her hurried campaign? To be closer to Julian—to learn to live in his world and take care of herself?

Julian said goodby then and left her. After which Noel walked thoughtfully up to Main and Madison streets. As soon as she managed to get her aunt, Frankie, off alone, she knew the real adventure would begin.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—I have studied food values, balanced meals and child care, and keep my husband and children healthy and happy. I am only a fair housekeeper, but I read the papers and good books so that my husband will have a companion for a wife and not just cook. All would be well except that every once in a while my mother-in-law descends on us and tries to regulate us. She cooks my husband what she calls a "decent" meal that is guaranteed to give any one dyspepsia. She rocks her poor little mistreated grandchildren to sleep. She cleans the house from attic to cellar and misplaces everything. She feeds the kiddies pie and fried chicken, tells me how I should raise my babies and that I should never leave my children with a servant but drag them with me wherever I go. And when she leaves the kids are sick, all of the furniture in new places and I am a nervous wreck. How shall I meet this problem? Shall I tell her to mind her own business and that I am going to run my own home in my own way? Or shall I descend on her house, drag out her precious old junk, burn half of it, tell her about vitamins and balanced rations, tell her that her family needs sleep, deride her old fashions as she does my modern ideas, and tell her she is fifty years behind the times, upset her house and her regulations and her family as she does mine?

MRS. K. L.

ANSWER:

Of course, it would be nothing but poetic justice for you to pay your mother-in-law back in her own coin and for you to upset her manner of living just as she upsets yours, but justice is not a domestic virtue and it never prevails in the family circle. We cannot give tit for tat to those near and dear to us, no matter what they do to us, when we know that their offenses are prompted by love and interest and a desire to help us. We can only take it and pretend we like it.

I grant you that well-meant meddling is a trial that it takes the grace of God to endure, but few of us escape. We all have relatives and friends who are always urging us to give up our own doctors and go to theirs; who think we should move out of the neighborhood we are in to some other; who arrange our furniture a different way, feed our children the way they feed theirs, manage our husbands or wives according to their recipe, etc., etc. If you live in a family you are told when to go to bed, what to eat, whether or not you should go out to the movies, and you are helpless to resent the interference in all your plans because you know is it being done for your own good.

So there you are, Mrs. K. L., and you are in no worse fix than millions of other women who have mothers and mothers-in-law only descends upon you every once in a while the wise thing to do would be to let her have her orgy of cooking and cleaning in peace. When she is gone you can move back the furniture, give the children a dose of castor oil and resume the even tenor of your ways.

Having a sense of humor, as you evidently have, you can reflect that some twenty years hence you can be compensated by having your turn in trying to make your daughter-in-law cook your way and bring up her children according to your theories.

We all do it. Age seems to bring an egotism that none of us escapes that makes us feel that we are the people and wisdom will perish with us, and that our ways of doing things are the only right ways.

You will have another compensation for dealing patiently with your mother-in-law in the enhanced affection of your husband. There is nothing on earth for which a man is so grateful to his wife as for getting along with his mother.

But doesn't your problem show how impossible it is for two women to get along in peace in the same house? For both are determined to run it and their ideas about it are as far apart as the poles, or say a spinach diet and one of pie a la mode, or whether you should rock a baby to sleep or put it to bed by its lonesome.

* * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—Does the modern man no longer expect to support his wife? I am a good-looking girl with a good job and I have had several proposals of marriage, but in every case the man has added: "I shall expect you to keep your position so that we can have everything we want and run around and have a good time." Several of these men have been well-to-do, amply able to take care of a wife, but they evidently had no intention of doing so. When I marry I want to be a homemaker and to have children and to devote my time to them instead of being an office worker. I want a husband who will bring home the bacon while I fry it. What is the matter with the modern man, anyway?

MODERN GIRL.

ANSWER:

You can't have your cake and eat it, too, and when Mary showed that she could support herself, George just let her do it. Of course, the man argues that the girl who supported herself before marriage can just as well do it after marriage, and that there is no reason for him to toil to pay for the bread and butter of one who can perfectly well provide herself with cake. Also, he argues that their combined earnings will give them many more luxuries than they could have if he footed all the bills.

All of which is true enough in theory, only it doesn't work out well in practice. In the first place, it is giving the girl a rotten deal because it is forcing a two-time job on her, for the man who expects his wife to pay half of the grocery bills also expects her to make a home for him. He expects her not only to make the dough but also to bake it. He feels as much defrauded if she isn't a first-class cook and homemaker as he would be if he were married to a domestic woman who had nothing to do but keep house.

Nor does it make for the happiness of a marriage for a woman to have to work outside of the home as well as in it. It puts upon her a burden too heavy to bear and under which her nerves frazzle, her health gives way and her good looks go. There is a limit to human endurance. No woman can toil all day in an office or shop, come home and clean up the house, get dinner and be a bright and vivacious companion with whom her husband will enjoy stepping out of an evening.

The old order was that the man should be the provider and the woman the homemaker. You can't get behind that, nor improve on it.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, July 29.

This should be a very lively and enterprising day, according to the astral influences, with much movement in connection with letters, writings, publishing and promotion. Both old and new matters are under stimulation for profitable deals, yet there are signs of difficulties or misunderstandings with elders or old institutions. Complications and perplexities and also an element of romance or advaneture loom, with perhaps a dramatic experience in the social life. Employment is fairly aspected for prosperity.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of very progressive and profitable conditions in employment and also in all involving writings, publication, advertising and publicity. However, there are entanglements or anxieties concerning elders or old institutions. In private affairs there may be adventure or romance of a thrilling nature.

A child born on this day may be mentally keen, versatile, enterprising and ambitious, attracting its employers by its attention to detail and system. Although critical and calculating, it possibly will have success in writing and publicity or in commercial lines.

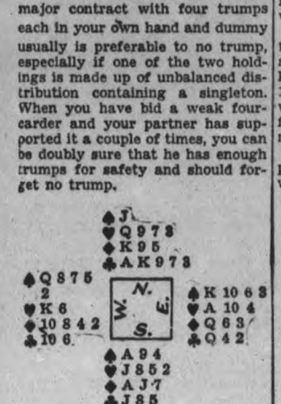
BACK YOUR JUDGMENT

EVEN IF the suit is weak, a major contract with four trumps each in your own hand and dummy usually is preferable to no trump, especially if one of the two holdings is made up of unbalanced distribution containing a singleton. When you have bid a weak four-carder and your partner has supported it a couple of times, you can be doubly sure that he has enough trumps for safety and should forget no trump.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

When North opened the bidding on this deal with 1-Club, South responded with 1-Heart. After a bid of 2-Hearts by North, South went to 2-No Trumps. In spite of a 3-Heart bid by North, South went to 3-No Trumps. His insistence No Trump was due to the fact he felt North could not realize how weak the suit really was.

He made a mistake by making the contract into no trump, as a spade was led and won with the K. This was followed by the 4, a 10 and then the 6, which he won with the A. He tried the finesse and, when that failed, no more spades were lost.

Had South allowed the first play in hearts, only three would have been lost.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

"I DON'T want to stay in this aquarium! I want to go somewhere else! I won't stay here a minute longer!" Alphonse, the goldfish, cried unhappily. He swam up and down behind the grass front of his aquarium, trying to make the children hear him. But none of them did. They just saw bubbles coming out of his mouth, and that made them laugh. "Don't laugh at me, please," he begged them. "Listen to me."

The only persons in the whole house who listened to poor Alphonse were Knarf and Hanid. They weren't really persons, either. They were only the shadows of the two children.

When will they come for me?"

"Don't be so sad," Hanid said to him with her lips pressed to the glass. "One of these the children will hear you, surely will."

And when they do," Knarf they'll take you down to the on the other side of the r then you'll be able to take long swim."

Makes Him Happy

You really think so? can't tell you how happy that me feel," Alphonse exclaimed denly he felt hopeful again me when you think they'll c me?"

Latest Millinery

Nearly all the French mannequins turn out in gala regalia to attend the Grand Prix at Longchamps, Paris, the last event of the French social season.

The young woman pictured wears one of the newest chapeaux created by the Paris milliners. The forward-tipped, peaked little concoction is topped with peacock feathers which spiral and curl, and is tied under the chin with velvet ribbons.

Grey Hair May Me More Becoming Than Former Shade

It's all very well for the 25-year-old to say, "I'll never dye my hair," or "I think gray hair is beautiful, and why in the world do women hate it?" But it is true that the day a woman notices that she has not just gray hairs, but gray hair, there's an important decision to be made.

To dye or not to dye. That's the problem. And it's one to be weighed carefully. There are so many advantages and disadvantages on both sides.

In the first place, hair dyeing is a job for an expert—not an amateur. One should go to a very good beauty shop, put herself in the hands of an experienced operator, insist that the graying locks be dyed to match exactly the hairs that are not yet white. It is a mistake for a woman whose brown tresses are streaked with gray to have her hair dyed red, or black, or blonde. When the job is finished, her hair should be simply brown (as it once was) instead of brown and gray.

Only the most experienced operators should be allowed to put a permanent wave in dyed hair.

However, if a woman holds a job where a youthful appearance is an advantage, all of the trouble and expense involved may be very much worthwhile. Or if white hair makes a young woman look more like her husband's mother than his wife, she certainly is justified in dyeing it. Perhaps it doesn't. Perhaps it only serves to soften her features, makes her more attractive than ever.

Only she can decide. And if her decision is in favor of dyeing, she need never be ashamed to admit it. Any beauty routine that makes for a lovelier appearance and more happiness certainly is worth a trial.

Make-Up Kit For Light Travel

Beauty preparations which take up little space in her luggage find favor these days with the vacationist whose holiday will be pretty brief. She likes large make-up kits, completely equipped with a lavish array of everything anybody ever would hope to own, and huge, luxurious jars of her favorite creams, of course. But she appreciates the importance of "travelling light" and, therefore, decides to shop for a small, compact makeup kit, small jars and bottles of creams and lotions.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"In life's small things be resolute and great
To keep thy muscles trained, for knowest thou,
When Fate thy measures takes or when she'll say:
'I find thee worthy, do this thing for me'."
—Bishop Berkley.

Dear Friends:

Do you keep yourself in readiness for the larger things in life to come along by doing the smaller things as best you can. Or do you say to yourself, "what's the use? Nothing good will ever come my way."

When a builder starts to build, no matter how many men he may have working for him, each of them can only lay one brick at a time, or one stone upon another. They do not just get a lot of them and throw them in a heap and say "there is your building."

And we too, must build one day's work upon another, cementing it well with the day before, and getting ready as best we cant for the day after.

So many have no plan for life, no design for living, that it is no wonder their lives are a hodge-podge of things begun but never finished. They are unsatisfied with things as they are, but do nothing to improve them.

One thing makes me see red, and that is when I read of the few opportunities there are for youth nowadays. Why, there are a hundred chances to our one when I was young. Think we never had strikes or shortness of work, or little pay? Don't be silly.

Even with talents like singing and playing musical instruments, we have amateur hours, talent scouts for the movies, talent scouts for advertising, for playing games like baseball and hockey. Nothing like that when I was a girl.

The other day a group of us were talking about men coming to Canada from other countries and after a few years owning homes or land or bank accounts. And some of them wondered why these men could do that, while our own Canadians were without work.

And the cause? Well, because dad worked in his shirt-sleeves he wants his son to have a job where he will wear a collar and tie. Where dad sweated, he wants it soft for his son.

And the son wants to win a sweepstake, or on the horses, or a car, anything and everything where he will win without effort. I say without fear of contradiction there are more chances of getting or making a job than there ever was before in the history of the world.

But, if we educate our children above these things, if we are too osft with them, if we always talk of how few chances there are, we send them out defeated before they begin.

Where there used to be one weaver who generally wove heavy cloth now there are thousands who can weave any weight or width. Jobs in stores for there are more of them, jobs digging, for we make more and better roads.

But they are not to be found in an arm chair, neither are they found if you are not capable of handling them. Utilize your time to be proficient in some one thing, be better at it than average, and you will find some employer who wants your services.

When an employer asks what you can do, don't say I will do anything, for then you put him on a spot. He deosn't know if you are good with metals, with machinery, with book-keeping, with woodwork. You are the one who should know that and be able to tell it too.

Get the knowledge of what you can do, keep in practice, don't shirk or let yourself go soft, and one day Fate will say to you, "I find thee worthy, do this thing for me."

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Mary Moore Tells How To Make Headcheese At Home

Here's the story: I have mentioned my German butcher before (I can't unearth any Naziism in him so I guess I am still safe for democracy). While waiting to be served in his store I saw him come through a door from the back wiping his face and hands with a clean towel; he had been washing, but was wiping perspiration from his forehead. He said it was 120 deg. Fahr. in their sausage kitchen. Naturally I wanted to see the said 'sausage kitchen," heat or not. It was a revelation.

The sausage meat in its mincer or sharp bladed revolving knives did not fascinate me nearly so much as a boiler full of pigs' heads. They were being made into headcheese, which the butcher sold for 20 cents a one-pound mould. My curiosity piqued I asked him to save me a head next time he had some so he did. I made it up this week—it weighed nine pounds and cost 90 cents.

Emem's Headcheese

(Set squeamishness aside and) Scrub the head well—your butcher will have removed the eyes and tongue—you will have to tell him to leave the jowls on. They will come to you split—it is really no major problem to prepare it for boiling. Using a hard brush, for the skin, and clipping any hair left on by the butcher is all you have to do. Now put it in a large kettle and cover with water, add 2 onions sliced, 2 cloves and 8 pepper berries, 1 tablespoon salt and 1 tiny hot red pepper. Bring slowly to boiling point and let simmer until meat drops from bones. Skim out meat and much of the fat, strain the liquor to get rid of bones and other sediment. Run the meat and some of the fat through the grinder. While doing this boil down the strained liquor. To every four cups of ground meat add 1 cup of liquor which should be boiled down to about 1 quart. For safety's sake I added ½ tablespoon gelatin to each cup of water—figuring it would not add flavor and would make the meat plenty stiff enough to slice thinly. Soak the gelatin in ¼ cup cold water and when soft add to the hot liquor and stir until dissolved. Taste the meat before you mould it—you may want a little more salt and black pepper. It can be quite strong with these two flavors while hot—for the flavor is submerged when the loaf is cold. When cool put in ice box to set and chill.

The market reports pork as "firm" —I call it high in price—but a pig's head would be a mighty good buy in the late fall when prices are down. In the cooler weather it will keep well if nearly (but not quite) frozen, the broth making grand split pea soup. Your pup can have a feast on the bones.

The split pea soup makes a good hot feature for a summer meal when the other courses are cold or salad and fruit dessert. Add 2 ground onions, 1 bay leaf, 2 stalks celery to 2 cups peas which have been soaked overnight, then add 1 quart stock from cooking pig's head—cook until peas become mushy. Salt and white peper are all the other seasonings needed.

Scotch Plaids To Honor Queen

The fashion wave of Scotch plaids which swept the American market just before and after the British Coronation is sweeping up again. The reason: The official visit of the King and Queen to Paris this summer. Forecasting style consequences of this visit, many fabric houses in the American market are adopting attitudes of having inside information and assert that members of the Paris couture will show clan plaids in their fall collections out of compliment to the Queen's Scottish birth.

Authentic patterns are woven in actual size in spun rayons for sports, in miniature sizes in silk taffeta for daytime wear and girls' dresses, and in a flood of dress weight woollens for the college trade.

Paris makes her grand gesture in tartan and roses.

Tie silk plaids are up-stage for town frocks. Frenchwomen are wearing them short and cut like schoolgirl "best." Plain bodice, gathered skirt, dazzle white line collar and cuffs.

English roses trim every other hat Record orders have been placed for buttonholes and posies to be delivered during the days of the Royal visit.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Would you be so kind as to give me your recipes for canning Brandied Peaches and Brandied Cherries? I looked for the above recipes last year but either I missed them or they were not included in your preserving curriculum.

This method of preparing suckling pig that you so generously forwarded me last December was a huge success for which many thanks.

With every good wish for many more years of this delightful page, (Mrs.) A. L.

ANSWER: Thank you for your charming letter.

Brandied Peaches

One peck peaches, half their weight in granulated sugar, 1 quart high-proof brandy. Remove skin from peaches by dropping them in boiling water, then peeling. Put alternate layers of peaches and sugar in a sterilized stone jar; when all are added pour over the alcohol, pouring it over slowly so that it touches all of the sugar and dissolves it. Cover closely, having a heavy piece of clean cloth under cover of jar. These are best if used after they have stood at least one month.

Brandied Cherries

Both Montmorency (sour) or Windsor or Royal Anne (sweet) are good for pickling or brandying. Wash cherries well, leaving the stems on. Proceed as for Brandied Peaches (above) adding one-quarter more sugar if sour cherries are used. Serve pickled or brandied cherries with the stems on. We hope you like these and that we can help you again.

QUESTION: Would you be kind enough to send me a menu for dinner, supper of luncheon for a whole week for a man of 80 years of age and any other suggestions will be very much appreciated. Thanking you, Mrs. E. M.

ANSWER: If the gentleman to which you refer is weak, and has poor digestion you might give him a diet similar to a young child's—vegetable and other mild soups, soft cooked eggs in the shell, poached eggs on toast, broiled lamb chops, chopped boiled buttered vegetables, tomato juice and fresh tomatoes in every form, all the fresh fruits, especially oranges, peaches, ripe pears, ripe bananas, whole wheat porridge and other whole grain cereals with brown sugar or honey and cream, plenty of milk, cocoa, very little (if any) tea or coffee.

Th following would be a few sample menus:

BREAKFASTS

1
Berries and Cream
Poached Egg on Toast Warm Milk

2
Orange Juice
Cornmeal Porridge with Brown Sugar and Cream
Rye Bread Toasted Raspberry Jam
Cocoa

3
Ripe Banana Sliced in Cream
Broiled Side Bacon Bran Muffin
Comb Honey Cocoa

LUNCHES

1
Split Pea Soup
Sliced Tomatoes and Lettuce
Thin White Bread
Peanut Butter Sandwiches
Half Cantaloupe with Ice Cream
Lemonade

2
Soft Cooked Egg in Shell
Buttered Spinach
Whole Wheat Toast
Half Grapefruit Weak Tea

3
Cream of Tomato or Vegetable Soup
Ground or Finely Grated Cabbage and Carrot Salad With Mayonnaise
Oven Toast
Peaches and Cream or Pears in Orange Juice Milk

DINNERS

1
Steamed Whitefish or Salmon or Lake Trout with Egg Sauce
Creamed New or Mashed Potatoes
Shredded Yellow Beans
Warm Apple Sauce Cocoa

2
Broiled Lamp Chop Green Peas
Boiled Rice Buttered
Raspberry Whip Lemonade

3
Creamed Chicken on Toast
Lettuce and Ripe Sliced Tomatoes
Homemade Ice Cream
Crisp Cookies
Weak Iced or Hot Tea

While the above is not a week's menu it does give you a good outline to work from—eliminate completely, if you can without causing your patient distress, pastries, fancy breads, rich puddings, etc.—food should be simple and simply cooked, and eaten under pleasant conditions —just as you would coddle a child—a warm drink on waking is a great comfort to an aged person—the ideal drink being hot water with unsweetened lemon juice.

We hope this helps you—write again if you need us.

ANSWER:

Watermelon Pickle

Five pounds white rind, well trimmed and cut into squares or square strips, 3 pounds sugar, 1 pint white vinegar, 1 oz. each whole cloves and stick cinnamon. Soak prepared rind in brine overnight—using ½ cup salt to 2 quarts water—rinse well with cold water in morning. Cook until tender in clear water (but do not allow to become soft.)

Tie the spices in a thin bag, add them to the sugar and vinegar, which have been made into a syrup by boiling together 3 minutes. Then add rind and cook until rind is transparent. Remove spices and seal. If not removed the spices make the pickle too dark.

Summer Is Time To Cut Down On the Calories

If you are bent on a campaign for keeping your weight down, the summer is an ideal time to take yourself seriously. One has not the natural appetite during the hot weather; one's body doesn't crave warming fat; one exercises and perspires without going to the least trouble to do so.

For your information, it is an approximate 1,400 calories a day which makes up the average, jog-along proper diet, and here is a "find" which will make you feel more at home with the notion of measured calories: An orange and egg and toast adds up to about 300 calories—and the usual division of calories per diem is 300 each for breakfast and luncheon, 800 for dinner. Well, isn't orange, egg and toast plus coffee, the great Canadian breakfast? But if you add two teaspoonfuls of sugar and one teasponful of cream you will get an additional 100 calories.

Suppose the above breakfast menu strikes you as too futile—which it may if you never got the snatch-and-run breakfast habit. You can have a chop, toast and coffee with all the trimmings and not run over your daily calorie allowance.

A grapefruit, an apple, berries without sugar and cream and two whole pears— are each worth 100 calories, and make a handy change in the breakfast menu. Prunes, however, run you up 50 extra calories, and you'll have to shave that off one of your other dishes, if you like prunes for your breakfast.

Luncheon is a wee bit trying, when counting the calories, although you can fall back on a chop. You can even have 100 calories worth of potato with it, which is a medium-sized potato. Finish off with any of our 100-calorie fruits.

Sliced cucumber and lettuce — no oil dressing, of course — with four sardines, a slice of bread and two squares of milk chocolate candy sounds pretty good for a hot day, and it is yours for a measly 300 calories. If you are saving up for a big dinner, or if you over-caloried at breakfast time, an apple and a piece of cake will cost you only 200 calories and kee pyou from feeling abused.

Iced tea, four crackers, and a helping of cream cheese is an appetizing luncheon—for 300 calories. Baked beans and coleslaw and a roll comes to the same total. A slice of ham, baked beans, and whatever amount of tea you like, just so you don't include more than two teaspoons of sugar, is a good enough lunch for anyone, and it contains 300 calories.

You have 800 calories to look forward to for dinner, if you've kept within 600 up to that point. Steak, a half of potato, tomato, and lettuce, bread, butter, and jelly is within that count.

One-half grapefruit, chicken, mashed potato, gravy, cauliflower, bread, butter, and a nice piece of pie is 900, but you can pick up that extra hundred on one of the earlier meals; it will be worth it. Another 900 meal, a "company" meal, you might say, includes hamburg steak, a cup of macaroni and cheese, one tomato, and one cucumber, a baking powder biscuit, butter, jelly, coffee, and a piece of cake.

Capetown, South Africa, has started a colony where "won't works" must work.

The new wool knit bed jackets for the first cool fall days have a bulky softness that has strong feminine appeal.

Red as a Rose, Red All Through, Best for Salads, Best for You

It's the close association with my offspring that has "teched" my mind —Marianne has reached the riddle stage so I make them up in my sleep—that's my only excuse for that feeble title.

But the arrival of field tomatoes on the market is enough to make me a little fey—I love them so.

First I serve them as often as I can peeled and sliced thickly. My next best way is to slice them thickly and put them between wafer thin slices of white bread for the very most favorite sandwich. Running a hard third is tomato and cottage cheese salad—use the bottom two-thirds of a big tomato—peel it carefully, pile the cut surface high with cottage cheese made creamy with cream—and flavorful with a bit of grated onion, salt and white pepper. This is a very nourishing meal and easily digested when plenty of lettuce bear it up.

Two Favorite Ways To Stuff and Bake Tomatoes:

Baked Tomatoes Vegetarian

Boil 1-3 cup rice in 1 quart of water with 1 teaspoon salt—boiling it hard all the time until rice is tender. Saute 1 tablespoon finely chopped green pepper in 1 tablespoon butter for 2 minutes. Scoop out large tomatoes. Mix rice and butter for two minutes. Scoop out large tomatoes. Mix rice and butter and peppers, moisten with broth if any is at hand. I used a little veal broth—chicken would be better—warm water would be all right), season all with salt, pepper and 1 teaspoon onion juice. Fill tomatoes without packing them, with this mixture and bake all in covered dish until done—it doesn't take long, about 25 minutes at 350, for you don't want your tomatoes to collapse with too much baking. If you want to go a little further the tops could be sprinkled with old cheese grated, and garnished with a sprinkling of paprika.

Baked Tomatoes Stuffed With Minced Liver

(Here's the old liver pep talk again—much of its delicacy and nutriment is impaired by the intense heat of saute-ing—that is why we print every liver recipe we have that is not fried).

Precook beef or calves' liver by pouring boiling salted water over it and letting it simmer gently for 5 minutes. Pour off water, then put liver through food chopper. Mix this (one pound) with ¾ cup thin white sauce seasoned with salt and onion juice. Scoop out large ripe tomatoes and fill centres with the creamed liver. Place in covered baking dish and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 25 minutes. Remove cover last 5 minutes to brown top. Tops may be covered with buttered crumbs which when browned add to the attractive appearance of this dish which may be used in place of meat (if beef liver is used it makes an economical meal if served with baked potatoes and soleslaw).

There is no meal in the day, nor time of day when tomatoes are out of place—served with bacon and eggs, they make a hearty meal and the fruit course can be eliminated, for breakfast.

Style Whimsies

Black elastic satin bathing suits are flattering to the larger-than-average figure.

Pastel washable suits are very summery in appearance, also very practical. And they can be worn without blouses to look like dresses.

The college girl who wants something extra smart for fall will select a camel hair suit in natural color. A lightweight camel hair is used for the gored skirt than for the jacket or topcoat, in order to avoid a bulky appearance.

Sixty-five to seventy per cent of the summer shoes purchased are of the open-toe variety.

Your Business Manners

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Is it good business manners to have an office (into which outsiders come) reeking with smoke?
2. Should you press a cigarette stub against a lamp base or any ornament near at hand?
3. Should you talk with a cigarette in your mouth?
4. Is it necessary for an employer to rise and place a chair for a woman employee whenever she enters his office?
5. Should a young woman who answers an office telephone refer to herself as "Barbara Wayne" or "Miss Wayne"?

What would you do if—

You are smoking at a table in a friend's house and there is no ash tray for you?

(a) Use your plate or saucer for the ashes?

(b) Get up and look for an ash tray?

(c) Ask your hostess for an ash tray?

ANSWERS

1. No.
2. No.
3. No.
4. No.
5. The latter.

Best "What Would You Do" solution—(c) or, if the occasion were very informal and you knew your hostess well, (b) would do.

Fleeing Germany Grows Harder Daily For Jews

BERLIN, July 28 (A.P.). — Jews themselves predicted to-day that finding emigration opportunities for them would be an almost insurmountable task for the International Refugees' organization recently established in London.

There are some 300,000 to 350,000 Jews in Germany. George Brandt, observer making a survey, here for the organization, is seeking to determine how many want to leave with the aid of the international body set up at the recent refugee conference at Evian-Les-Bains, France. Brandt is a member of the United States consular service.

Influential Jews are sceptical. They point out that fewer than 150,000 have been able to leave the country since Chancellor Hitler assumed power in 1933, despite the expressed German wish that they go.

Emigration was comparatively easy then, but it is increasing daily in difficulty.

The Jew can take little with him in cash or goods he might sell—If a Jew goes to the border with a new suit or other personal object, he must leave with customs officials a sum equal to the article's cost. If he takes a field glass, camera or other luxury he must deposit twice or three times its value.

The authorities thus far have shown little inclination to speed emigration by financial grants; diminishing business is shrinking the potential wealth of Jewish storekeepers.

Because the Austrian situation presently is confused, one cannot say how many of the 200,000 Jews living there when union with Germany was affected March 12 have been able to leave.

150,000 Still Left.

And even though 300,000 to 350,000 Jews have moved eventually from Germany, the Reich still would have 150,000 subjects who can neither be German citizens, because of semitic origin, nor acquire other citizenship.

These include people too old to emigrate or with infirmities barring their entry to other countries.

One of Brandt's first concerns apparently was the fate of Jews held in concentration camps in Vienna, Berlin and elsewhere since an outburst of anti-semitism in June.

Estimates put their number at 3,000 to 8,000. Jewish circles consider well-authenticated their estimate that Buchwald Camp, near Weimar, contains 2,000 Jews.

Top Scientists Thinks For War

PARIS, July 28 (C.P.).— France has mobilized her best scientific brains to back up her armed forces.

A national centre for applied scientific research has been created by Premier Edouard Daladier. There France's leading scientists will seek to put their country out in front of the world's fighting powers with new and deadlier weapons for war.

Professor Jean Perrin, winner of the Nobel Prize for Physics in 1926, is credited with proposing the centre to Premier Daladier. President of the French Academy of Sciences, the professor told the Premier that the young French scientists should devote their talents to their country's defence.

Each year, Perrin pointed out, France pays 1,000,000,000 francs royalties to foreign countries for industrial patents, most of which are used in manufacturing for national defence.

Fifty young scientists will compose the permanent staff of the centre. Leading French scientists such as Prof. Perrin, Georges Claude, inventor of the Neon light, and Edouard Branly of motion picture fame, will co-operate with them. Three hundred investigators will work with France's armed forces in the field, bringing back to the laboratory problems to be solved.

Remain On The Land French Canada Urged

PIERRESVILLE, Que., July 28.—(CP).—Salvation of French Canada, Premier Duplessis believes, is in the soil its people till and to ensure their prosperity they should remain on the land.

"We in this province suffer from centralization," the Union Nationale government leader said last night at the laying of a cornerstone of a powdered milk factory in this little farming village south of Lake St. Francis.

He said the province suffered from centralization of wealth and of power and the government was pleased to note evidence of development of local initiative.

"It is to be encouraged," the premier said, 'especially in local industries such as this one which will be of direct assistance to farmers in providing another outlet for the milk their cows produce."

Officers and directors of the company, the Supreme Food and Milk Products, Incorporated, were French-Canadians, he said, and he wished to advise them to "show the world French-Canadian business enterprises are sound and stable," and "prove to the world that French-Canadians have as much ability as anybody else."

Looking Back
On This Date

JULY 28

It was on this date (July 21) in 1840 that the great Ear lof Durham died at Cowes on the Isel of Wight, whither he had gone after presenting his report upon conditions in the Canadas to Queen Victoria in February. Never strong physically, his health and his morale had both been shattered by the refusal of the British government to follow his advice as to reforms, and when he retired to mid-channel he was a very sick man.

Many tributes have been paid to John George Lambton ("Radical Jack"), Earl of Durham. One of the best in my mind is that of the late Professor W. L. Grant, who wrote:

"Had it not been for him, the moment might have passed without the man; it was the supreme good fortune of Canada, and of Greater Britain that the hour and the man coincided.

"As Durham lay dying at Cowes, he whispered: 'I would fain hope I have not lived altogether in vain. Whatever my enemies may say, the Canadians will some day do justic to my memory.'

"That justice has been done. If to the world beyond can come tidings of what is thought and felt in this, surely his great and greatly injured shade is now appeased. If, as the great Greek statesman said, all earth and sea are the grave of those who fall for their country, then a loyal and contented Canada is the monument to Durham, and what man could desire a nobler;

"And perhaps not Canada alone is his monument, but Australia and New Zealand and a united South Africa, all of which won their freedom as a result of the great movement to which Durham gave clear expression. Never forget that, though much of history is the record of the little wisdom with which the world is governed; though it laughs at the many blunders of Englishmen, and Canadians alike, yet slowly, imperfectly, for the most part unconsciously, we have been working out a big thing.

"Will the British Empire survive? Only if its various parts work toward some combination of empire and liberty along the lines which Durham laid down—the line of freedom and yet of union.

Since these words were written, we have been granted our "freedom." Canada is "now a nation." What of the union of which both Durham and Grant wrote? Has it weakened? It is for the people of Canada, a century after Durham's death, to say. The time for answer may be not far distant. What will it be?

Says Varicose Veins Can Be Reduced

If you or any relative or friend is worried because of varicose veins, or bunches, as good advice for home treatment as any friend can give, is to get a prescription known as Moone's Emerald Oil.

Simply ask McDermid & Jury or your druggist for an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil and apply night and morning to the swollen, enlarged veins. Soon you should notice that they are growing smaller and the treatment should be continued until the veins are no longer burdensome. So penetrating and efficient is Emerald Oil that it also helps simple swellings due to strain to disappear.

Probe Poisoning Of Governor

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 28. — (AP).—Kentucky's highway patrol proceeded to-day with an investigation into the asserted "poisoning" of Governor A. B. (Happy) Chandler.

Major Joe Burman, chief of the State Bureau of Identification, said it was 'not the first time such a thing has happened during the campaign" Chandler is waging for the Democratic senatorial nomination against Senator Alben Barkley, senate majority leader.

"We have our suspicions," Major Burman said in promising an investigation "to determine who is responsible for the attempt on the Governor's life."

Chandler, ill since Friday when he was stricken in a Louisville Hotel, is the victim of water "doctored with poison," Dr. J. W. Bryan, his Louisville physician said in a statement. Dr. Bryan said he did not know what kind of poison it was but added "if consumed in sufficient quantities would have caused death."

Dr. Bryan said previously State Finance Commissioner J. Dan Talbott and State Highway Patrolman Jesse Wyatt "drank from the same pitcher of water" as the Governor and became ill at the same time, but not as seriously.

OTTAWA, July 28.—(CP)—Canada's June imports dropped $16,721,896 compared with June last year, the figure being $58,946,698 against $75,668,684, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. May Be Organizer

Dr. J. M. Robb, minister for health in the former Ferguson and Henry governments of Ontario, is reported to have been offered the post of Conservative party organizer by Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion.

Red Ryan Reward Still Unpaid

SARNIA, Ont., July 27—(CP).—Echo of the slaying of Norman (Red) Ryan and his companion, Harry Checkley, in an attempted liquor store holdup here several years ago, was heard at City Council meeting last night when Alderman Stirrett recalled that a reward had been offered and inquired if it had ever been paid.

Mayor Fred Pelling replied that the Police Commission had made several efforts to obtain the reward for the policemen who "shot it out" with the bandits but was informed officers were not eligible. The Mayor said further the chief of police had personally taken the matter up with provincial authorities without success. He promised to provide a more detailed report on the representations made at next meeting.

Alderman Stirrett said the Ontario government was apparently making use of a technicality to avoid payment. In addition to the two bandits, Constable John Lewis of the Sarnia force was shot and killed in the gun battle.

Cyclone Roars Over Ontario Unroofing Hotel Wrecking Cars, Barns

Ontario Farmers See Grain Crushed In Terrific Downpour, Lightning Kills 1, Sets Fires, Cuts Power

Hopes dashed, hundreds of farmland owners in Western, Central and Eastern Ontario surveyed fields of crushed and broken grain crops today, aftermath of devastating thunder and electrical storms. In scores of towns repair work was being rushed on damaged buildings, power and telephone systems. Total damage was estimated at many thousands of dollars.

Hardest hit district in yesterday's series of storms, worst of the season, was Lindsay in Eastern Ontario. There, one farmer was killed by lightning, two persons were injured, buildings were unroofed, several automobiles wrecked and a section of pavement caved in. Every factory in Lindsay closed when the wind, of cyclonic proportions, disrupted power service.

The storm appeared to strike first in the eastern section of the province, swept westward across Central Ontario — missing Toronto — hit Barrie, 60 miles north of the provincial capital, then struck at Midland and Penetanguishene on Georgian Bay. An offshoot of the storm swung southward and caused extensive damage in the London and other Western Ontario districts.

Each report from the storm-hit districts told of widespread damage to fast-ripening crops by hail and wind. Many barns were blown down and several were set afire by lightning. So heavy was the hail in Biddulph Township of Western Ontario a 12-acre field of buckwheat was said to have been "driven into the ground.

Lindsay Bears Brunt.

But the greatest damage was caused in the Lindsay area. Residents described the wind as a "veritable cyclone." A large section of the roof of the Benson Hotel was lifted and dropped into Lindsay's main street, flying planks and bricks crashing into parked motor cars. The Canadian National Railways round-house was unroofed.

Roy Windrim, Emily township farmer, was struck and killed by

B.C. Bush Fires Take Turn For The Worse

VANCOUVER, July 29—(CP). — The forest fire situation throughout British Columbia took a turn for the worse to-day as wind increased and humidity remained low.

Attention of fire fighters at the Vancouver Island blaze near Campbell River concentrated on green timber at the edge of Forbidden Plateau as forecasts for strong westerly winds were reported.

Meanwhile an extra crew and pump were rushed to the coal mining town of Bevan in the island fire zone to a battle a spot fire within a mile of the community. The new blaze covered two acres and forest officials said west winds would whip it into the town.

In the Similkameen district of southern British Columbia, 500 men in scattered groups fought blazes which officials said constituted the most serious situation in recent years.

Granby Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company operations at Copper Mountain, near Princton B.C., were idle as its crew of 400 aided by forest fire fighters battled a hot blaze that licked through 300 acres of tinder dry jack pine. The flames were within three miles of the camp.

An emergency call said the Coquihalla fire was surging into the narrow Bear Creek Valley, 150 miles northeast of here. The road through the valley was endangered.

Narrow Escape Roofs were blown from half a dozen barns near Downeyville by the hurricane that passed over the district on Thursday. The barn shown here belongs to John Scully, one mile west of Downeyville. The new roof was torn off, sailed one hundred and fifty feet through the air, and landed on both sides of his house, with debris scattered for acres. An entire crop of new mown hay was ruined. This picture was taken during the day's second storm in a violent cloudburst, and the fastest film ever to be manufactured was necessary to produce any detail. (Examiner Staff Photo.)

Canada Promises Full Aid To British Air Heads

Mackenzie And Aides Explain To Envoys Dominion's Aviation Structure

OTTAWA, July 29 (CP).—Full co-operation of the Department was assured to the two missions of the British Air Ministry by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie in brief conferences here today. The Minister welcomed the British envoys and told them all the resources of the National Defence Department would be placed at their disposal in order to facilitate their quest.

The first mission, a one-man affair in the person of Group Captain J. M. Robb, commandant of the Central Flying School of the Royal Air Force, met the Minister, with Air Commodore G. M. Croil, senior air officer; Group Captain L. S. Breadner, air staff officer; Group Captain E. W. Stedman, chief aeronautical engineer, and Lieut.-Col. L. R. Lafleche, deputy minister.

Group Captain Robb's purpose is to report to the British government what facilities exist for the training of pilots in Canada for the Royal Air Force. After being greeted by Mr. Mackenzie the British officer was turned over to the Royal Canadian Air Force heads, who will lay before him the lay-out of Canada's aviation structure.

The British emissary is approaching the survey on the accepted principle that the training in this country of men for the R.A.F. will be carried out under control of the Canadian government. Expansion of existing facilities may be necessary, and larger training schools may have to be established; but these will be administered as an integral part of Canada's own defence scheme.

Schools To Be Scattered.

Such schools, if approved, will likely be established throughout Canada rather than concentrated in any one section of the country. The British government may be required to supply some equipment and instructors.

The financial arrangements covering the project have not yet been reached. It is believed, however, a simple plan is being considered whereby the Canadian treasury may be reimbursed by the British gov-

Hawaii Clipper Overdue With 15 Aboard

Feared Down On Trip Guam To Manila, Search Is Ordered

MANILA, July 29 (AP).—Fears for the safety of 15 men aboard the Pan American Airways 26-ton flying clipper were expressed tonight when she failed to arrive or report long after the scheduled landing time here from Guam.

Nine hours after the last wireless report from the Clipper, United States army officers expressed belief the $450,000 flying boat was forced down on the Pacific ocean on its 1,600-mile flight.

They laid plans for a widespread aerial search to start at dawn Saturday (about 5 p.m. EDT today in cooperation with a hunt already started by army and navy ships.

The four-motored clipper's last report was sent at 12.09 p.m. (12.09 p.m. EDT. Thursday). She was flying south of her normal course to escape a tropical storm. At that time she was about half way through her scheduled 12-hour flight and was bucking 13 mile-an-hour headwinds at an elevation of 9,000 feet between two cloud banks.

Conditions Good

Flying conditions and visibility had been good, but the plane had flown through scattered showers.

No reason was advanced as to why she might have been forced down, but it was pointed out that if she made a safe landing she could float on the Pacific ocean as well as any boat.

The army transport Meigs, only 87 miles away from the clipper's last reported position, was ordered to search the area. The navy tender Penguin was sent from Guam at 9.20 p.m., Guam time (6:50 a.m. EST) carrying a Pan American radioman and an airways mechanic. She was expected to reach the scene Monday.

Seven army planes were ordered to take off from Cavite on Manila bay at Dawn Saturday for Legaspi, on the southwestern tip of Luzon Island and closest airport to the position given by the clipper.

MANILA, P.I., July 29.—(AP).—Pan American Airways' 26-ton Hawaii Clipper, with 15 men aboard, was many hours overdue to-night on her 1,600 mile flight from Guam.

Circling far south of her normal course to escape a tropical storm, the huge flying boat was fighting strong head winds when last reported at 12.09 p.m. (12.09 a.m. Friday, E.D.T.). She was about 500 miles out of Guam at that time.

As nightfall approached, about four hours after her scheduled landing, persons waiting at the Airways' Cavite Base across Manila Bay, became worried and excited.

The United States' army transport Meigs was within 87 miles of the Clipper when she last reported and was instructed to search for the flying boat. From Guam came word the navy tender Penguin had been dispatched from there to joint the hunt. Navy men said it would take the Penguin about three days to reach the position last given the Clipper.

Four army bombers and two army planes were ready to take off before dawn to-morrow to cover the probable area in which the Clipper might have been forced down.

Naval officials said three destroyers were available in Manila Bay—the Edsall, John D. Ford and the Stewart—to be thrown into the search if requested.

For several hours after the Clipper's usual landing time—between 2.30 and 3.30 p.m. (12.30 and 3.30 a.m. E.D.T) Pan American officials insisted they were not worried

Due at 6 A.M.

At 6.30 p.m., one official, although unable to explain the clipper's failure to report by radio at the regularly scheduled intervals, said: "She

Newhall Defends Practice Of Reducing Charges To Ensure Convictions

Judge Deroche Says He Would Summon His Chief To Commission If Same Tactics Were Followed

Chief Newhall's judgment in deciding the charges that were laid against Max Vincent in certain liquor cases was the subject of nearly all this morning's session of the inquiry into the police department by Judge Deroche, assisted by C. G. Frost, K.C., with T. J. Carley, K.C., representing the Chief Constable.

"Max Vincent was known to everybody as a bootlegger," Chief Newhall told Mr. Frost this morning.

"And a gambler," Mr. Frost added, the Chief assenting.

"Did the Police Commission ever press you to get after Vincent?"—"No."

The Chief said that at one time he heard, on returning from a convention, ex-Mayor G. A. Macdonald had urged Inspector Reid to raid a place owned by a man named Ferguson, near Vincent's.

"I didn't know anyone named Ferguson existed, but I learned boot-legging was high, wide and handsome in that vicinity."

Raid Badly Handled?

The Chief said that a raid there was "badly balled up." He blamed Wheeler for not cleaning up conditions. He said he had told Wheeler to get after Vincent and Fleetwood, Alex Lyons and others.

"I told him to get after bigger things and never mind small fry, petty things down town."

Mr. Frost asked the Chief why he had laid the charge of September 26, 1936, for illegal possession instead of selling by Max Vincent

"Simply because I didn't have enough evidence," Chief Newhall answered.

Money Not Seen.

"I questioned Wheeler about the evidence he had, especially whether he saw the money passed for beer, and he evaded it. He said the best thing would be to charge Vincent for illegal possession and he could be fined $100 and costs.

"You had Wheeler's evidence and Henry's admission he paid $1 for beer."

"Wheeler told me he couldn't

Ontario Decided On Building Falls Bridge

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., July 29 (C.P.). — Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Ontario Minister of Highways, said to-day Ontario and New York State intend to build an international bridge at Niagara Falls even though the International Bridge Company replaces the famed "Honeymoon Bridge," swept away in January by ice break-ups.

Mr. McQuesten's announcement followed a meeting last night of the newly-constituted Niagara Falls Bridge Commission, representing authorities for Ontario and New York.

"Action of the Senate in blocking Ontario's Bridge Bill is not going to stop us," the Highways Minister said.

"The Dominion Government has no right to interfere with the business of the Province. We expect to start construction of the new bridge before next spring. As soon as plans and engineering details can be completed, work will begin."

Mr. McQuesten said that although it has not yet come before the Commission, "it is probable" a settlement offer will be made to the International Railway Company, which has a charter to construct a new bridge.

"That has not been decided because it has not been before the Commission. But it is a likely development."

Mr. McQuesten said next meeting of the Commission would be held on August 12.

Bandit Scourge Of Brazil Shot After 20-Year Rule

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 29 (A. P.). — There was rejoicing in Brazil to-day because death had ended the career of One-eyed Lampeao. For twenty years he robbed and killed, cut out the tongues of garrulous women, and made them and their menfolk dance naked in the streets.

Lampeao, or Lampost, 38 years old, small and bespectacled, and his sweetheart and 11 of his gang were slain last night in a battle with police near Maceio, Alagoas State, North-eastern Brazil. One policeman was killed and several were wounded.

Villagers in the area celebrated in the streets, and joyful speeches were made hailing the end of the terrible bandit.

In nearly a thousand previous battles, Lampeao always had managed to fight his way clear of the law, to ram through the north-eastern hinterland, continuing to plunder and often cutting off ears or legs of those who fell into his hands.

Cruelty was his pleasure, and it was said to be his particular delight to take over a village and force the leading citizenry to doff their clothes and dance before him.

He had always a supply of women in his hideouts and authorities said many of them bore him children, to fill the ranks of his bandit army.

Raid Meant an Orgy.

Many are the tales of fantastic orgies by the bandits after a profitable theft.

Their tactics were to gallop swiftly into remote towns or attack small clusters of houses, to loot, violate, mutilate, kill and flee. Many of his victims never told of their terror. If they went to police, Lampeao always warned, "I shall return."

Born Virgolino Ferreira da Silva the robber chief signed his warnings "Virgolina Lampeao" after his nickname became notrious.

Three Storms In One Day Leave District a Wreck

A second and still a third violent storm broken over this district yesterday afternoon to add to the heavy toll of damage caused by the initial near-cyclone that burst in the late morning.

An Examiner reporter motored through the district following the first storm and found that its centre had been near the village of Downeyville, where trees were uprooted, rail fences scattered the full length of fields, crops flattened hard against the earth, roofs torn from buildings. From that point to Lindsay roads and fields were strewn with wreckage.

All along the way were, dozens upon dozens of uprooted tree, more than the district has experienced in many years, some of them tossed across portions of the roads almost blocking traffic. Lindsay itself had the appearance of a town after a wild centenary celebration. Its streets were littered with wreckage.

Between Peterborough and Omemee little damage to property could be observed except on the farm of Merton Storey, where three tall Lombardi populars had crashed to the ground across his front lawn. A few other trees were down, too, and young elms in a demonstration woodlot seemed to have suffered considerably.

In Omemee itself trees were uprooted and branches were strewn about the main streets. The highway from there to Lindsay was littered with broken branches and fallen trees and crops in the entire area were hopelessly flattened. Motorists said they had never seen corn so crumpled.

Between Omemee and Downeyville nine telephone poles were down in

THE STAGE, the movies and music were ordered today to observe new Fascist customs through which an attempt to transform Italian life is being made.

The Ministry of Popular Culture, in a new decree, ordered that the Fascist salute be substituted for the handshake in stage and screen productions, and that orchestra conductors at open-air concerts and operas wear the summer dress uniform of the Fascist Party.

Hotel Roof Lands On Lindsay Main Street In Storm, Wrecking Cars

Workmen in Lindsay spent most of the afternoon clearing up debris from the main street of the town after the roof of the Benson Hotel had crashed to the ground in Thursday's violent storm. A large section of the roof was listed in the air and some of it dropped through the top of a car, shown at LEFT. The woman driver, Miss Theo. Peacock of White River, Ontario, was taken to hospital suffering from shock. Men mounted the roof of the hotel and at great risk pulled an overhanging section of the roof to the rear. Lindsay's main street, littered with debris after the storm had abated, as is shown at CENTRE. At RIGHT is a view showing a section of the roof piled up against other cars, with the hotel at the centre of the picture.

Claim Vincent Protected; Wrong Charge

A charge by former constable Joseph Wheeler that Chief Constable Newhall "protected" Max Vincent by charging him as first offender under the Liquor Control Act when he should have been charged as a second or third offender occupied most of the time at Thursday afternoon's session of the police inquiry before Judge Deroche.

Wheeler told of three different occasions in which he had been active in causing the Vincents to be charged for liquor offences and declared that on the third occasion early in November of last year the charge hung fire from then until January 1 and that in the meanwhile the Vincents had appeared before the police commission and given evidence against him and as a result of that and other evidence he had been dismissed. Then afterward Vincent was fined $15 and costs for being an interdicted person and having possession of liquor whereas Wheeler claimed there was enough evidence available to have charged him with selling.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent when called upon for evidence declared that they had supplied Wheeler with beer on a number of occasions when he was on duty and Vincent swore that one occasion he had paid Wheeler $5 as his cut in a transaction in which a quantity of beer was sold to an American tourist.

When the Vincent phase of the inquiry was reached Wheeler was called to the stand and testified that so far as he knew Vincent had no occupation except that he worked for a man named Gray who was agent for a brewery and that before that he had worked for another brewery agent.

Vincent and his wife, Wheeler stated, had given evidence against him before the police commission.

"Do you say Vincent has been protected," asked Mr. Frost.

"Yes, inasmuch as he has not been properly charged in liquor cases."

"What members of the police department do you implicate in this charge?"

"The Chief Constable."

Watched the House

Wheeler told of Sergeant Thompson and himself watching the Vincent house in September, 1936, and arresting a man who came out of the place with three bottles of beer. The man afterward gave a statement that he had bought the beer from Max Vincent. He was not sure whether the man was charged.

A copy of the report made by Wheeler on that occasion was produced and identified by the witness and then read aloud by him. It showed that when Vincent's house had been searched 52 bottles of beer had been discovered.

"Are the facts in that report correct?" asked Mr. Frost.

"Yes," replied the witness.

"What charge was laid against Vincent?"

"I think it was illegal possession and he was fined $100."

"Your charge is that on this evidence a charge was laid that would entail a fine rather than a more

Three Townships Get Toll Gate Road

YORK, July 29.—An old plank tollgate road, which the County of York purchased from Eliza M. Rogers for $5,000 in 1917, has been handed back to the Townships of King and East Gwillimbury and the police village of Holland Landing, after a somewhat doubtfull existence for the past few years. The road originally formed part of the old Yonge Street Highway, and is now little used for travelling, but apparently well sought after by squatters, who have made their homes on the road itself.

After the county purchased the road, the Provincial Government took it over, and then built the present highway to the south, parallel to the old road, in order to avoid crossing a railway line twice within a short distance.

When the new highway was completed, the Province relinquished its rights to the plank road and its status has remained in doubt since, until it was decided to chase the squatters off the roadway. But no person knew whether the county police, the King, East Gwillimbury or Holland Landing police had the authority to do the chasing. Today's action by York County Warden and Commissioners, in denying all claims, closes another page in the history of the old plank road.

Two Barns Burned At Trent River

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, July 29. — Two barns and a stable were destroyed by lightning at 6 p.m. yesterday on the farm owned by Mrs. M. D. Knox of Picton, one mile west of Trent River. The season's hay, fall wheat and three pigs were lost, also, the property of Joseph Tedford, residing on the farm, but the machinery was saved. The barns were insured, but not the contents. Two stacks of hay between the barns and the house were on fire last evening, and efforts were being made to save these and prevent the house from catching fire. A large crowd had collected.

ST. LOUIS—(CP).—A home-made biplane, capable of 220 miles an hour, was built by Vincent Linberg, 25, here at a cost of $1,200. It is 12 feet long and has a wing spread of 13 feet.

Erect Tablets

SARNIA, Ont., July 29 (CP). — Bronze tablets, marking the Canada-United States boundary have been placed on the new Sarnia - Port Huron Blue Water bridge. Similar to those marking the boundary on the old Niagara Falls "Honeymoon Bridge," swept away by ice early this year, the tablets bear the seal of the United States and Canada.

Hepburn, Smith May End Trip By Boat

SKAGWAY, Alaska, July 29 (CP). —Premier Hepburn and Barnard Smith of New York were undecided today whether they would continue their 8,000-mile holiday trip through Northewestern Canada by plane or by boat.

The two men arrived here by train late last night from Carcross, N.W.T., planning to sail today on the coastal liner Princess Alice for Prince Rupert and Vancouver, but were met with the offer of Sheldon Simmons to fly them to Junea, Alaska, the place they set out for Wednesday, before bad weather forced them down at Carcross.

Premier Hepburn said he was "fussed by all this fuss," referring to the anxiety that had been felt when their plane went unreported for more than 14 hours until communication withCarcross had been established.

"I do not care for any more publicity. There was no cause for all this fuss," the Ontario Premier said as he refused to broadcast on a special program. Simmons broke through bad weather in flying the broadcasting apparatus here.

Wait On Fog To Clear

Meanwhile J. P. Bickell of Toronto and Pilot Jimmy Towne waited here for the weather clear to take Bickels big twin-motored amphibian direct to Vancouver where they will pick up the other two members of the party.

Premier Hepburn and Smith left here yesterday afternoon on the 80-mile trip over the White Pass and Yukon Route to Skagway, Alaska. There they boarded the Canadian Pacific coastal liner Princess Alice for Prince Rupert. From that northern British Colmubia town they will continue on down the coast to Vancouver.

Bickell and Towne started out on their jaunt to Vancouver shortly after the other two members of the party had left here yesterday, but were forced to turn back for the night when the silver-hull flying boat ran into bad weather. They lightning as he stood in the doorway of his barn watching the spectacular electrical display. In Lindsay, Miss Theo Peacock of White River, Ont., was taken to hospital suffering from shock after planks hurtled through the roof of her parked car in which she was sitting. A man also was injured slightly.

Water pressure on one street was so great after a cloudburst that accompanied the storm that the pavement caved in, carrying with it a truck. The driver was uninjured. Damage of hundreds of dollars was caused to furnishings in the Benson Hotel after the roof had been carried away. Manager Walter Hyatt was overcome when he surveyed the damage and required medical attention.

Station Blown Away

A Canadian National Railways flag station at Hillhead, halfway between Lindsay and Peterborough, was uprooted and deposited in a field.

More than three inches of rain fell upon Peterborough. A "parade of progress" was disrupted in Belleville where some streets were flooded. Approximately 200 calls reporting damage were received at the Kingston office of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission.

Within a few hours three cloudbursts struck Barrie, the last one coming late in the afternoon. Hail stones "as big as golf balls" were reported to have fallen in that district. Power lines were blown down and scores of store basements in the business district were flooded. Crop damage was extensive.

Hail Stops Court.

The worst storm in 20 years struck Midland, on Georgian Bay. Power service was disrupted for two hours when a 2,200-volt transmission line was blown down. Sessions in the county court house there were suspended when hail rattling on the windows prevented arguments of counsel to be heard.

Communication systems around London were crippled when the storms swept southward. Linemen worked throughout the night to repair damage. Several sheep were killed on Dougald McCallum's Sombra township when a barn and a driveshed were blown over. A hay loader was tossed into a tree by the wind.

All the shingles were blown from the roof of Joseph Stubbs' house in that township. Windmills on other farms nearby were flattened. Loss of 100 per cent to oats and corn crops was reported from Wilkesport and a half-mile of telephone wires and poles were blown into fields by the roadside.

prove the sale; he didn't see the bottle. The beer was found on Henry outside Vincent's house."

"Why did you charge Vincent with illegal possession instead of selling?"

"I'd have to prove that Henry bought it. If you knew how hard it is to get convictions even when you think you have a strong case you'd understand what I did. Only the other day and Mr. Carley was connected with the case, three men went back on their word and the accused person went free."

Mr. Frost: "You could have laid a charge of selling and the magistrate has the power to reduce the charge to illegal possession if he saw fit."

Chief Newhall said it was not his practice to lay charges he could not prove. "That's because it is so hard to prove cases in court."

Mr. Frost: "You didn't press the more serious charge in which he might have been sent to jail instead of fined?"

"Because," the Chief repeated, "the evidence was not sufficient."

The Chief said he would follow the same course again tomorrow if he had to do it.

Judge Thinks Chief Wrong.

"Well, I think you are wrong, Chief," Judge Deroche commented. "The more serious offence could have been charged, and the Magistrate could have reduced the charge if the other did not succeed."

In regard to cases of selling liquor, Chief Newhall said he didn't know anyone who was "harder than Mr. Carley himself to get a conviction on his clients. He takes advantage of every little loophole."

Chief Newhall said that it was a common practice in the province to press a charge which was likely to bring a conviction instead of a graver charge that might fail. He said it was done in Lindsay and Belleville.

"If Chief Kidd (Belleville) did what you did he'd be before the Police Commission the next morning," Judge Deroche said.

His Honor agreed with Mr. Carley that generally speaking the adopting of a lower offence was more or less common, "but not under the circumstances in this Vincent case."

Mr. Carley said he could endorse what Chief Newhall had said about a recent case in which witnesses had failed the prosecution, as to the difficulties the Chief Constable had to contend with.

Mr. Frost pointed out that Vincent was charged under a clause that would give him his liberty with a fine, instead on a higher charge with jail sentence as penalty.

Chief Newhall—"I had no evidence other than the charge laid. Mr. Henry said he wouldn't swear to anything and Wheeler said he couldn't prove a sale."

The Jail Switch.

Passing on to a March 26, 1937 case in which Wheeler arrested Mrs. Vincent on a selling charge and had taken her to the police station, Chief Newhall said she had been let out and Max Vincent put in her place before the Chief arrived at his office beore 10 a.m. The sergeant on duty would have the right to do so, he said and added that Wheeler was responsible for letting Mrs. Vincent go.

"When I reached the office she was gone," the Chief said.

"Did you take it up with anyone why she was let go?"

"I had Wheeler before me. I took up the selling matter with him, but he said he couldn't prove sale."

Mr. Frost — "And Mrs. Vincent didn't appear?"

"Yes."

"Taking the Rap.

However, a charge was laid against Max Vincent for illegal possession. Vincent had admitted he was "taking the rap" for his wife. The charge of illegal possession was laid against him because liquor was found in his house.

Mr. Frost—::Is it a practice to discuss with an accused and barter with him and turn the administration of justice so that it would suit the accused?"

The Chief said he often did talk matters over depending on the strength of the evidence he had. He was not blaming the magistrate, he said, but he felt that heavier fines would have had a stronger effect. The fine could have been made $400 or $500.

"Did you talk to Vincent to see what he was willing to plead guilty to?"

"I called him in to see if he'd admit selling, but it wound up by him saying he was willing to admit illegal possession."

Chief Newhall said it was one thing to get a constable's report, and another to get evidence that would convict. He said his custom was to show reports to the Crown Attorney.

Small Quantity of Beer

Referring to the report by Wheeler that 38 quarts of beer were found in Vincent's house on November 12, Mr. Frost asked Chief Newhall whether he though that was a large amount.

"Three cases were a small amount especially in his line."

"What's his line? Bootlegging?"

"You heard Vincent say yesterday he bought eight cases in August and had drank them down to three cases."

Mr. Frost—"Vincent was then on the interdicted list. Was it in your province to bring a charge not only for the illegal possession as an interdicted person, but also with selling beer? Wouldn't the magistrate be entitled to infer whatever he would wish to do in that case?"

Chief Newhall replied that he did not lay a selling charge on the fact of the quantity of liquor found in the house.

Mr. Frost pointed out that the report was brought in on November 12, but the charge was not laid until December 2, and it was not until January 12 last that Vincent was fined $15 and costs. In the meantime Wheeler had got into trouble, and Vincent appeared as a witness before the Police Commission giving evidence against Wheeler.

Chief Newhall stated that the Commisison matter did not influence him in any way whatever, nor when he stated in a case that he believed Vincent had always told the truth.

The Chief is Sorry

To Judge Deroche, witness said he had deputized Wheeler to special work in trying to stop bootlegging, "and I've been sorry for it."

"Why Chief? He got three convictions on Vincent?"

"Since then we've had the jail practically full of bootleggers, with only the Sergeant on night duty and one of the men being available for that work."

To Mr. Carley, Chief Newhall said the Crown Attorney was usually consulted in regard to the laying of charges. He was consulted about the adjournments in the Vincent case of November and the fine of $15.

Constable Puffer

Constable Gordon Puffer explained that reports brought in by Constables were in most instances shown to him, and he would proceed to prepare the case, deciding, for example, whether a charge of illegal possession of liquor was more likely to succeed than selling. He would then submit it to Chief Newhall for his approval.

In the one Vincent case, Mr. Puffer said "we couldn't have got to first base for keeping for sale."

Judge Deroche—What about the Mrs. Vincent case, could you have got to first or second base with that?

"She had been released."

"Yes, but she could have been rearrested."

"Yes, she could."

Constable Puffer said it was the consideration of doubtful features of a case, and its chance of bringing about a conviction that decided which charge should be laid and brought to court.

"Ninety-five per cent of the information by constables goes through my hand, and I use my own judgment as to what charges are to be laid, depending on the evidence that could be called."

Mr. Puffer declared that there was no difference in the handling of the Vincent cases and any others. He added that it often occurred that a defendant or his lawyer would say they were willing to plead guilty on a reduced charge, and often that was done. He said he did not know who released Mrs. Vincent and permitted the "switch" that placed her husband in the cell she vacated.

"The charge in that case was laid by the Chief after talking it over with Wheeler and me. Wheeler then had no complaint," Mr. Puffer stated.

Denies Discussing Case.

Joseph Wheeler, recalled, declared he had no conversation with Chief Newhall regarding the Vincent case of September 26, 1936, as to whether the charge should be having liquor illegally or selling it.

"That's a lie. I didn't discuss it with the Chief. I was prepared to go in the box and give evidence to convict Max Vincent."

Wheeler also said he had nothing to do with the release of Mrs. Vincent in March, 1937.

Mr. Frost: "She said something about you unlocking the door or being present?"

"I did not. I had nothing to do with it."

The former constable told of various work he had done watching houses of suspected bootleggers.

Mr. Carley: "What you said about Chief Newhall's evidence being untrue applies also to Constable Puffer's? He's lying, too?"

"Yes. He's got a job and is trying to hold it."

"And what he swore to was false?"

"Yes."

"And that applies to Inspector Reid in the Ferguson matter?"

"Yes. They're all afraid of their jobs, and I don't blame them for trying to hold their jobs. It's hard to get a job."

The Fourth Charge.

Mr. Frost informed Judge Deroche that this concluded the third charge. He read the fourth to the effect Chief Newhall allowed beer to be kept in the Long house, Murray Street, the night of the police ball, October 29, 1936.

"The Long home is next door to the Legion Hall," Wheeler said.

"Beer was put into the house. I drank some of it. I talked to Constable Naples who was placed in charge. He was there when I went in. He told me to have a bottle if I wanted. There were 10 or 15 cases. Naples was the only policeman I saw there. He was detailed to go there, by Inspector Reid and the Chief. The job was to take tickets at the dance hall door.

Naples was detailed to look after the beer because he doesn't drink. Two men on the force don't touch it Naples and Sergeant Meagher."

Wheeler said he saw Wigg and Puffer there drinking. The beer was placed there for the convenience of the police and their guests.

"Roy Lee and Alex. Lions told me they were going to put the beer there but I didn't see them do it. It came from the brewery warehouse, but I can't say the two agents paid for it. I saw a letter Puffer sent them thanking them for the beer."

Wheeler said Newhall knew and could see what was going on. "He asked me how everything was going and I said fine."

"You say Long got $10 for the use of his house?"

"Inspector Reid said $10 was to be given to him."

"Who removed the beer after the dance?"

Beer Went to Puffer's House

"Deannard and Puffer took it to Puffer's house on Water Street."

"When was the first time you complained about this matter?"

"When I came before the Police Commission."

Mr. Carley—"You are not suggesting anything about Mr. Long but that he is a respectable law-abiding citizen?"

"I don't know anything about him."

"Do you know personally if any beer was left over?"

"No you'll have to get that from some one else."

Civic Holiday Toll Figures Show 15 Doomed To Die

TORONTO, July 29. — Fifteen bodies will be lying on slabs in undertaking establishments and scores of persons will be suffering from painful injuries as the result of motor accidents after the holiday week-end, if average figures of the past four Civic Holiday week-ends are equalled this year.

With these facts before them, Toronto safety and police officials yesterday made a concerted plea for care and courtesy on Ontario highways this week-end and urged that motorists observe all traffic regulations in an effort to avoid fatalities and injuries.

Life-saving officials also urged that swimmers observe the regulations laid out for them and to stay in supervised areas. It was further suggested that persons contemplating swimming in unfamiliar waters inquire as to the depth of water and any other characteristics of the swimming hole.

Heavy Traffic Due.

On account of the Canadian Corps Reunion, which more than 100,000 ex-servicemen are expected to attend, officials look for the heaviest traffic in and around Toronto in history.

Aviator Escapes As Plane Dives In Lake

ORILLIA, July 29.—Fighting his way out of the submerging cabin, Dr. Walter Woodrow, Orillia eye specialist, narrowly escaped death yesterday afternoon after the cabin seaplane he was piloting dived from a height of 200 feet into Lake Couchiching.

Dr. Woodrow, a student flier of the recently formed Orillia Flying Club, climbed to the top of the sinking plane from which, five minutes after the crash, he was rescued by a passing motor boat. Except for briuses and shock he was unhurt.

The cause of the accident is not known. Dr. Woodrow said he did not know what happened. He was flying along and the motor, without warning, went dead. The seaplane rushed down to the water, striking it with great force.

Shortly after Woodrow's rescue the plane, which had started to sink as soon as it hit the water, disappeared entirely, turned over under water and floated suspended from the pontoons. The crash occurred about one mile north of the Orillia Park dock. The plane then drifted to a shoal on Chief Island to the north, where it was anchored by members of the club. It was not known last night whether it had been damaged.

Distress Signal

Anthony Easton, young research physicist of California Institute of Technology, is pictured with an automatic radio distress signal which, it is believed, will rid aviation of its "missing plane" bugbear. The instant a plane equipped with the device goes down in forced landing, even though it be demolished, the distress signal will begin to work. For as long as four days it will send out uninterrupted calls for help. Easton and a commercial airline executive, Major Daniel E. Ellis, U.S. Army Air Reserve officer, are its co-inventors.

Esso and 3-Star contain exclusive solvent that dissolves gum... fights carbon gives extra power and mileage

When the Government gives a patent, it indicates that the product has new, useful and improved characteristics. The new formula for Esso and 3-Star has been granted a patent by the Canadian Government. These gasolines now contain an exclusive solvent which dissolves gum and checks the formation of carbon. This is a definite contribution to the efficient operation of your engine.

This solvent should not be confused with lubricating oils sometimes added to gasolines. Ample lubrication is provided by Imperial lubricants. The sole purpose of this solvent is to dissolve gum and prevent sticky deposits from accumulating in your engine and robbing it of power.

If you use these new gasolines exclusively in a new car, it will retain its new, surging power indefinitely. In an old car you will notice a gradual but unmistakable improvement in performance. Esso and 3-Star with this new solvent are sold everywhere in Canada at no increase in price.

YOU HAVE TWO CHOICES OF PERFORMANCE

Esso The finest motor fuel Imperial Oil has ever marketed at any price. It contains sufficient tetraethyl lead for maximum power and economy and smooth, cool running without "knock" or "ping". Now it also contains the exclusive solvent which dissolves gum and causes it to be blown out through the exhaust. The finest motor fuel made still more efficient.

3-STAR This famous regular-priced gasoline has long been noted for its exceptional power and mileage. Now it contains the exclusive new solvent that absorbs gum and checks the formation of engine deposits.

Better Off On Relief

The report of the Unemployment Assistance Board in London reveals that Britain has men who claim they cannot afford to work, basing the odd claim on the fact that it would not be fair to their families. That may seem a trifle tough to understand but the explanation is simple enough.

Take the case of one to whom we shall refer as A. He is an unskilled worker, or a laborer, and when he is working he earns $9.50 per week. He has a wife and eight dependent children, and his pay as an employed person on the dole would be $13.50 per week. As this is $4 more than he could earn by working the Assistance Board scaled him down to $11.50 per week, but that is still $2 per week above what he could earn while working. On the basis of money it is actually more profitable for this man to loaf.

The case of B. is somewhat the same. He has seven dependent children and according to the scale of the Assistance Board he is entitled to draw $12.15 per week. He is an unskilled worker and when he is employed he can make but $10.10 per week, so he is $2.05 better off when he is loafing, and "loafing" is a word frequently used in the London report.

Now what should men like A and B do? Do not be in a hurry to answer that they should go to work. Consider it for a moment in the light of the dollars per week which they need in order to provide for what are admittedly large families. Two systems are in existence and both are legal, (1) the old plan of selling labor power to some person who needs it and is willing to pay for it, or (2) the newer system of calling on the Assistance Board and receiving so much per week.

Again—return to the problem in the sense of the number of dollars per week these men can receive—is there any incentive for them to keep themselves employed or to be constantly on the lookout for places where they can secure work? You say they should go to work, and admitting that to be right, they find they are worse off than when they are not working. One of two things is taking place—either the amount given by the Assistance Board is too high, or the money which they receive when working is too low, and we are inclined to believe the latter is the trouble.

The working out of natural laws makes it possible for relief to affect people in two ways. Take the man who previously received good wages. When he finds he has to accept relief he has experienced a distinct drop in his standard of living and he has to make a good many adjustments, none of which is acceptable to him. His desire above all else will be to get back to work so he can once more attain the level from which he has for the time been forced to depart. In other words, he has an incentive to try and get back to work.

The man who goes on relief and finds he is actually making more there than he would when working has not felt that jerk or drop by reason of living on the relief scale. It is really a little better than he was experiencing before. Therefore he has no incentive to try and go to work again, and incentive and desire are two powerful factors in determining what people are going to do. The basis of the trouble referred to by the Unemployment Assistance Board in London is undoubtedly the low wages received by the men while working.

Do The Experts Know?

John Warde, 26 years of age, gave New York its most sensational eleven hours of the season when he stayed on the ledge of the 17th floor of a down-town hotel building for that length of time and then leaped to death. A good many people, particularly women, who watched the scene, found it too much for them. They fainted and had to be removed in ambulances. After it was all over people started discussing that very natural question: "Why would a man do that?" Warde, we understand, had not been particularly successful at anything. Not at any time does it appear he was in any line of effort where he was making a go of it.

Several lecturers on psychoanalysis and psychiatrists joined the man on the street to try and reach an explanation. Dr. A. Arden Brill of Columbia University said Warde was not a maniac-depressive type who get into moods of highest exultation to be followed by a period of darkest depression. A maniac type would not hesitate for a moment if he desired to jump from a window. He would have done it at once.

Dr. Joseph Jastrow offers another picture. He sees young Warde as the self-embittered failure, the youth who had never dominated any one, whose every venture in life seemed doomed to frustration. Dr. Jastrow continues: "He stood up there at last looking down on the crowds. He was not afraid nor was he nervous. He was actually enjoying it because at last he was the dominant figure in the situation. Every person was paying attention to him and what he was going to do was for the moment of more concern than anything else within his vision. He would actually enjoy what to him seemed the great hour of triumph. When he found plans were being made to catch him in a net he jumped because he felt he was going to be cheated out of the one stiuation which ever satisfied him."

Whether an expert can properly read or interpret what is going on in the mind of another person is something which at best is debatable, but in this case they seem to have presented at least a plausible explanation of the question which would be running through many minds: "Why did he do it?"

How Long Is a Speech?

The Ottawa Journal professes to find joy, comfort and satisfaction in learning that King George VI. and President Lebrun of France spoke at an official banquet in Paris and said all they desired in not more than 15 minutes. King George used less than 500 words and the French President some 700. In all 1,200 words, and they should have found little trouble in doing it in ten minutes.

The Journal thinks this is something for ambitious after-dinner orators to keep in mind; a sort of pattern after which they should do their knitting.

All of which makes things rather confusing. Many times we have noticed writers taking harpoons and flinging them at speakers, urging that they talk too long and say too little. If we keep that up we will have our native speakers in such a state of fear that they will refuse to give utterance at all.

Then we have those who are always lamenting the fact that this country is producing so few dinner speakers; they are getting to be as scarce as a good stand of white pine. Others moan because our young men are not attracted toward public life, and public life means being able to rise on the hind legs and give sensible expression to thought, theory, attack or elucidation of something or other.

If the Ottawa Journal has its way and persists in the five-minute address idea we are not going to grow a new crop at all. The speakers will have to quit before they get well wound up. Most of the speaking which is done in the Journal's own bailiwick is of the 40-minute variety and the Journal would be doing a kindness in urging a shrinking treatment for many of the offenders. When it has that situation in hand it can start on the budding after-dinner orators. For our part we would like to see them allowed to have their fling for a little, otherwise the species may become extinct.

Wants To Be Hangman

Arthur Ellis died in Montreal last week, and he was known as the hangman of the Dominion. Actually it is some time since Ellis was active and he never was an "official." Such an office does not exist. When an execution has to be made it is the duty of the county Sheriff to make arrangements and for some years they found Ellis an acceptable person.

Already we read of people who are applying to the Minister of Justice for the position. They may get a reply to their letters but that will be all. Holgar Rorstrom of Stavely, Alberta, has his name in the papers by reason of saying he has made application for the position. He has been engaged at several minor occupations; has a desire to pose as a detective and is a boxer of some local repute. Also he has been the official who puts cats out of existence as under Alberta law a cat which does not wear a bell must be executed.

We admit to finding it difficult enough to understand why any man would desire the position of executioner even if he knew he could have it. We admit an execution is something which must be carried to completion; admit also that a man with skill and knowledge is required to attend to it, but just why there should be people anxious to do that work is something which cannot readily be explained.

It is worth considering whether the office of hangman should be made an official post because in that way responsible people would be able to make certain they were dealing with a man who knew his business. It would be one way of eliminating any chance of a sheriff being forced to secure the services of an untrained person.

Moving Out Of The City

Assessment departments of both Toronto and London report the same trend—the cities are not increasing in population but the district around the city is. It means that people are leaving the older and more closely settled portions of the city proper and making homes outside the city limits.

Undoubtedly they are doing that for two reasons, (1) they want to have more room for their homes and more open and pleasant surroundings, and (2) they are hoping they can live for less outside the city.

Whether moving out of the city is the permanent solution for cheaper and better living is uncertain. When a number of people move to any new district they will create sooner or later the same conditions which caused living to be too expensive for them in the city. They will find the need then of sanitary services, of schools and fire protection and they will have to pay for them.

Also it leaves the problem of two properties on the hands of a good many people. In the present market it is not likely the owner of a home in the city could quickly sell his place at a good price because he wanted to have a new home outside the city. In which case he would become somewhat burdened with real estate.

If a man who can afford it finds a better place outside a city for his home he will doubtless make a good move in going to it. Unfortunately there are people in all larger cities who would be better off out in a more open space where they could use ground to advantage, but they are not the people who are participating in the exodus. They have to remain where they are because they cannot afford to move out.

Thinking Of Farmers

Following the severe wind and rain storms of Thursday the Examiner heard several times this remark: "This is going to be hard on the people out in the country." And the people in the city were making that one of their topics of conversation; they were expressing sympathy for the people out in the country because they were likely suffering loss and facing a time when it was going to be difficult for them to get in the crops on which they had been counting so much.

Of course sympathy is one of those articles which has small tangible evidence of value, but it is well worth recording that the people in Peterborough were frequently mentioning the problem of the man out in the country. Nor is that at all strange. Many people in a city this size know some of the farmers in the district, perhaps many of them. Right now the farmers are facing a trying season and the people in the city are not unmindful of that fact.

WEATHER MAN

(By A. R. K.)

¶ The Weather Man I do not know, nor how he makes his business go, I'd like to talk with him; I'd like to find out his address, and then I'm willing to confess, I'd like to be asked in.

¶ He must have quite a large machine, a stranger one than I have seen, it may be old perhaps; I'd like to find out how he'd know, which way the gadgets there should go, or how to turn the taps.

¶ He'd pull some levers now and then, and have to push them back again, to make it rain or snow; I'd like to see him working there, and watch him make it clear and fair, and cause the clouds to go.

¶ If he were friendly in a way, perhaps he'd hear what I might say, he might be very nice; although he's lived for many a year, perhaps he might consent to hear, a little kind advice.

¶ I'd like to tell him how we stand, how crops and things look fine and grand, how we have cut the grain; suggesting that ten days or so, he might perhaps go kind of slow, at turning on the rain.

¶ I would not speak abrupt or scold, perhaps the Weather Man is old, needs crutches too and props; I'd just explain to him this thought, the biggest problem that we've got—is taking in the crops.

Would Britain Quit Gibraltar

Condensed from The Week, London (June 9, 1938) and Pariser Tageszeitung, Paris (June 4, 1938)

THE BRITISH Government's policy of "non-intervention" in the Spanish War has wrought havoc in the sphere of British imperial strategy. Indicative of this is the fact that the naval and military authorities 'in the know' are now discussing in all seriousness the advisability of abandoning Gibraltar in the event of war in the Mediterranean.

Recently a comprehensive report of the findings and conclusions of British agents investigating the situation was received in London. In spite of the fact that certain of the more incredulous elements wished to dismiss the report in its entirety as "alarmist nonsense, sir," it was, and is still being given the very closest attention.

It has been revealed that one of the first things the General Staff of the German Expeditionary Corps in Spain did at the beginning of the civil war was to install heavy artillery on the African coast of the Strait of Gibraltar. Since then these formations have been modernized, strengthened and improved. The munitions depots, motorized ground works and safety cellars offer the highest degree of protection because they are built in the rocks.

The batteries, consisting of four cannon, are distributed extensively and are well protected against aerial attacks. Each piece of heavy artillery is surrounded by a light anti-aircraft battery.

In the section west of Ceuta four heavy batteries have been installed. It is possible to shoot safely at a ship up to a distance of 11¼ miles. The maximum range is 15½ to 17½ miles. The cannon, which are of German origin and the very latest models, are manned by Germans exclusively.

Similar formations have been built on the European side of the Strait for a year now. These are arranged in two groups. The first, the Sahara-Tarifa-Algeciras section, forms the natural complement of the African system, and provides over four batteries with 21 cm. cannon. Such formations actually blockade the Strait of Gibraltar for a distance of at least 37½ miles. The batteries have been placed so methodically on both the European and African coasts, that there is no point which cannot be placed under fire. Telephone connections provide exact observations and information on battery and firing activities.

The second group of batteries on European soil encloses the fortress from the west to the north, and the harbor of Gibraltar. Here, too, are four batteries whose range is longer than the distance to Gibaltar. With these three artillery formations the whole length of the passage through Gibraltar can be blockaded from both shores. Such facts confirmed the Government's worst suspicions. The report declared that, in the opinion of the authors, Gibraltar would become rapidly untenable in the event of a major Mediterranean conflict; that the proposal to slip the British fleet past the German batteries under cover of a smoke screen was as fantastic as it was impracticable; and it was urgently necessary to locate and begin work on an "alternative base," preferably in Portugal.

So seriously has the report been taken that the necessary feelers were put out in Lisbon when the British naval delegation visited Portugal recently. As a result, negotiations for the establishment of the proposed "alternative base" at Faro, on the extreme South Algarve coast of Portugal are now in an advanced stage.

Needless to say, the very strongest criticism of this almost incredible development is voiced in many high naval and military circles, and it has grown in volume and intensity since Italian and Germans airplanes in General Franco's service have replaced the "unknown submarines" previously responsible for the widespread piracy directed against British shipping in the Mediterranean.

The feeling that the Government should once again give the Navy freedom of action to deal with the pirates, whether submarine or aircraft, and to follow this up, if the attacks continue, by "blasting the Germans to hell out of it," so far as Gibraltar is concerned, is consequently becoming more and more common.

IN THE DOLDRUMS.

(New York Times)

THE BOSS HAS gone to Canada on a fishing trip, leering wickedly as he announced that for two weeks he will be out of reach of every one except, possibly, Howard Hughes or Douglas Corrigan. The junior partner bids his time. He hopes it rains every day of the two weeks. He hopes the mosquitoes will be bad. The office manager has taken a cottage in New Jersey. He plans to get in a little golf. The file clerk has gone to the Catskills, hoping, but probably in vain, to catch up on his sleep. The No. 1 stenographer—the one with the dark hair and beautiful eyes—hasn't decided where to go, but she leaves at the end of the week— and some hearts are going to be broken, or at least dented, within the next fortnight. The junior executives bulge with folders. The office boy belongs to the Boy Scouts. He is going to spend two weeks in camp.

The junior partner says bitterly that no one seems to have his mind on his work. He says he doesn't know what's coming over the office. He says no wonder business is slow. The No. 1 stenographer caught him studying an air-line map when he should have been signing his letters. He blushed, she reported, as red as a beet.

COST OF HIGH LIVING.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

QUAINT customs are to be found where in the world but no more so in Hong Kong, where Cantonese restaurants have different floors, the higher the floor the higher the price. The food is the same but the roof garden level has the prettiest waitresses, best service, most cheering surroundings and real ivory instead of imitation chopsticks. So it's quite an inducement to go higher up and pay the higher price in Hong Kong.

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

HE WANTS A JOB

Editor Examiner:

Sir: I am an unemployed youth out of work, who has been trying for the last several weeks to try and get a job. One day this week I tried a large plant and counted 47 young men and girls outside in search of work. Another big factory there was 19 men and girls. At a construction job just starting I counted 28 men out of work. Everywhere you go you get the same answer "nothing-today." A construction company boaster of excavating a job in 16 hours. We have a lot of inventors to make jobs easier, saving work and labor, but instead of benefiting the workers they are becoming a curse and are being used to benefit just a certain class of men.

But if a war happened these young men who are unemployed would be the first to be asked to go and defend the interests of the certain class. I for one would not fight and throw my life away for a system that helps only a few and not the masses. The only war I would fight in would be one that would help the working men and for the workers rights. The present system of Government has outworn its usefulness. Not one step is being taken to put the people back to work. Nobody wants relief. Why isn't the money being used to build public works, and give the people fair wages. In the meantime our Prime Minister is flying around in the north with a big financier from New York, and another one from Canada. The old Governments are out of date what we need is a labor party with good social legislation such as New Zealand. Without a change of system to a labor party youth has a small chance to make a way in this country. It's up to the people at the next election to vote for a party that will help the workers.

UNEMPLOYED YOUTH.

HENS ARE DUSTING

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Your interesting paper, again gives a thought or two about old days on the Tenth Concession.

As I write I can see through the doorway, a few of the old fashioned comfortable hens, just fussing around a little burying themselves in the cool earth to do a little what you call "dusting". These hens would perhaps please you because they live a very comfortable old-fashioned life, not interested apparently in speeding up production, nor do they fear the axe. However pleasant that may be to contemplate, the fact is, every farm needs a cash product of some kind or other.

Some farmers have strawberries, a good many out this way have raspberries, some have butter, others eggs, and various other attractive vegetables and garden stuff all of which you will see on the Peterborough market from time to time. Often this extra money is enough to keep the house in groceries, or clothe the children for school. All of which speaks well for the usefulness of the Peterborough market.

I have just been reading an article in a farm journal which says:

"There is no unemployment question on the farm." Decidedly not—quite the reverse. The farmer is faced with a dozen tasks he should be doing, and farming has not been paying well enough that all farmers can afford to hire enough help. Consequently the hay crop and sometimes the grain, is sometimes injured by not going into the barn in the best condition, even apart from the fact that the rain sometimes spoils it.

And that brings me to what I was going to say. Surely, with so many men on relief, it would be possible to have groups of these men on call to go out into the country and help save the grain from destruction. Oh, but you say the men just "won't go out in the country," much less work at the harvest. Isn't that a very weak answer when the taxpayers help pay relief? Why should one man work from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. and help find those who do not work at all?

Yours truly,

MAN VS. INSECT.

(Toronto Star)

THE CASUALTIES incurred by the attacks of insects are extensive and costly. Between 1915 and 1926 insects caused a loss of $1,375,000,000 in Canada, which is almost as much as the Dominion spent on the war and demobilization. In the United States the annual loss is $2,000,000,000. In India insects kill 1,600,000 people, and do damage amounting to $75,000,000. Dr. A. S. Neave, of the Imperial Institute of Entomology, estimates that ten per cent. of all the food produced in the world is destroyed or lost through insects.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

THEN DREW near unto him all the publicans and sinners for to hear him. And the Pharisees and scribes murmured, saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them.

And he spake this parable unto them, saying: What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it? And when he hath found it, layeth it on his shoulders, rejoicing. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, saying unto them, Rejoice with me; for I have found my sheep which was lost.

I say unto you, that likewise joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance.—Luke xv: 1-7.

Britain Firms Foreign Policy Tones

LONDON, July 29—(CP Cable).—Great Britain's foreign policy is taking on a firmer quality.

While insistence is still laid on the theme of conciliation as a way to peace, evidence is not wanting that Prime Minister Chamberlain would resist strongly any challenge to vital Britsih interests.

(In his view of foreign affairs before the House of Commons Tuesday, Mr. Chamberlain said: "Though we seek peace, it would be a mistake to suppose we are willing to sacrifice British honor and vital British interests for peace.")

Despite pleas that the Anglo-Italian agreement should be brought into effect without delay, the Prime Minister declines to abandon the British prerequisite—settlement of the Spanish question, which in effect means performance as well as the promise to withdraw foreign troops from Spain.

Rapid expansion of the British air force, with strengthening of ties between Great Britain and France, has impressed Berlin deeply.

Chancellor Hitler—although the report lacks official confirmation—is said to be throwing out feelers for an air pact under which the chief nations of Europe would limit their sky armadas.

A Naval Understanding.

Great Britain and Germany already have a naval agreement. Under it German naval expansion is limited to 35 per cent of British naval strength.

The Spanish situation has clarified somewhat with the unconditional acceptance by the Barcelona Government of the proposal for a British commission to investigate the bombing of open towns and civilian populations. General Franco, insurgent chieftain, has accepted the proposal in principle, asking for widened application of the commission's investigations to include assassinations and other atrocities. The insurgent counter-proposals and reservations are under consideration.

At the same time, London and Burgos officials are working out the details of a scheme under which one British and one insurgent naval officer would investigate charges of deliberate bombing of British merchant ships in Spanish waters.

A disquieting note was sounded in Berlin to-day as Nazi newspapers opened new attacks on the Czechs.

The press was critical not only of the new Czech Nationalities Statute itself, but also of the Czech Government for permitted details of the statute to leak out.

The semi-official Diplomatische Korrespondenz, which reflects the views of the German Foreign Office, roundly declares that except for a few concessions the Czech proposals in the statute give no hope of satisfactory agreement.

6 Killed, 100 Hurt Rangoon Scrap

RANGOON, Burma, July 29. — (AP).—Six persons were killed and 100 injured to-day in savage street fighting between Bureme Buddhists and Indian Moslems.

Shops were looted and burned and prisoners fled the jail as the violence raged.

Armored cars patrolled the streets.

A tense situation developed today after police had stood by since Tuesday when 40 were hurt in disorders, following publication of a book by a Mohammedan allegedly insulting Buddhism, in the crowded bazaar area.

Troops of the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry were called out to assist police. Machine guns were posted in various places.

All business houses were closed. Traffic was paralyzed after noon. Many streets, strewn with brickbats and sticks after the Buddhist-Mohammedan fighting, were deserted.

Wild rumors of stabbings, murder, and shooting circulated. The Mayor's automobile was stoned. A big fire was started near Keighley street.

Carnegie Heiress Weds Scot Lawyer

DORNOCH, Scotland, July 29. — (AP)—The Highlands made merry last night in celebration of the wedding of the youthful granddaughter of Andrew Carnegie to a Scottish lawyer who dandled her on his knee when she was 3.

The biggest bonfire ever to light the burns and lochs of Northern Scotland was started by workers at the Carnegie estate in honor of the wedding of Louise Miller, New York, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roswell Miller, to 40-year-old J. F. Gordon Thomson.

While society toasted the couple in champagne in Skibo Castle, the Carnegie family's retreat, Highlanders did the same with a "wee drappie" around the bonfire of wood they had been collecting for months. It was a gala day for this picturesque Highland region.

The bride drove fifteen miles from Skibo to the ceremony at the Dornoch Cathedral under strings of flags hung across the highway. So great was the crowd that police had to call on farmers, taxi drivers and shopkeepers to help them keep clear the cathedral entrances. After the wedding and a luncheon for 1,000 guests, the couple left for a honeymoon on the continent.

The cathedral was chosen for the wedding because it was Carnegie's favorite place of worship when the steel manufacturer came back to his beloved Highlands after making his fortune across the Atlantic. Mrs. Andrew Carnegie, widow of the millionaire, presented to the cathedral a red carpet and a canvas canopy.

Martin To Reveal Red Control Plot

DETROIT, July 29—(AP) — The head of the United Automobile Workers of America said he would present evidence to the union's executive board to-day disclosing a deal whereby the Communist Party woud gain control of the Wayne County (Detroit) Unit of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Richard T. Frankensteen, one of four suspended vicepresidents of the union now on trial behind the locked doors of the board room, is county chairman of the league. The union president, Homer Martin, is the league's Michigan chairman.

Martin said the evidence was in the form of an affidavit by a woman who had been a member of the party and said she heard a report on "the terms of the deal at a Communist meeting." The U.A.W. head said her name would be withheld to avoid possible "retribution."

"The affidavit," said Martin, "will show that the Communist Party faction was going to run one of their own members for president of the league, but compromised on a trade agreeing to make Frankensteen president if he would create a new office—that of organizational director of the League—and that a Communist would be supported for that position."

Frankensteen denied Martin's allegations and challenged him to make the evidence public. Maurice Sugar, counsel for the men on trial, called Martin's remarks "damnable falsehoods."

The league's convention to outline plans for this fall's primary and general elections in Michigan has been postponed because of internal dissension in the U.A.W.

Those on trial with Frankensteen are Wyndham Mortimer, Walter N. Wells, and Ed. Hall.

Missing 2 Cyclists Injures 5 In Car

WINDSOR, Ont., July 29—(CP) —Five persons were injured, two seriously, last night when an automobile swerved suddenly to avoid hitting two youths riding bicycles and went out of control. The car went half way off the highway on its side.

Edward Joliffe, the driver, was most seriously injured. Hospital authorities said they believed his skull was fractured. His wife, in the front seat with him, suffered bruises and shock.

Richard Burke, 28, had the tendons of his right arm severed and other undetermined injuries. William Barr, 26, and his wife, 22, escaped with minor bruises.

The two bicycle riders were Frank Salayka, 18, and Dan Alice, 16, both of Windsor. They said the accident happened on No. 39 highway, Tecumseh Road, about seven miles east of Windsor. Neither boy was hurt.

Barr told police the two boys loomed up suddenly before the automobile passengers and the next thing he knew the car was swerving to the side and had overturned.

Cobourg Suspects Remanded Week

COBOURG, July 29.—Appearing in police court this afternoon on robbery charges, Ralph Smith of Toronto and Irvin Smoke of Alderville were remanded for a week. They were arrested Wednesday by Constable Tom Marsden and Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie, who were investigating the robbery of a general store Tuesday when $322 in cash and $490 in cheques were stolen. Police allege that Smoke entered Downs General Store at Roseneath, ostensibly to order overalls. During the interval that the clerk was getting the merchandise from another room, a cigar box containing the cash and cheques disappeared. When Smoke and Smith were later arrested $322 was recovered and the cheques were found hidden in the fair grounds at Roseneath.

Old Married Woman and Proud Of It Says Mother 12, Wed 2 Years

MRS. WILLIAM BENNINGTON, 12-year-old mother of a five-months-old baby, said today she didn't see "any news" about her being married, but admitted she had just paid 40 cents to see a vaudeville-touring Tennessee child bride but a year younger.

"I'm an old married woman and proud of it," said Mrs. Bennington nee Clara Parmer. "I don't see any news about getting married. Most everybody does get married."

The girl wife said she was just 10 years old when she left her fourth-grade schoolbooks in this hamlet about 35 miles southwest of Clarksburg, for life as the wife of a public works project worker, Bill Bennington. He was 23.

Southern Newsprint Discoverer Passes

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 29—(AP). —Dr. Charles H. Herty, whose development of a process for making newsprint from slash pine started a new Southern United States industry, died in a hospital here yesterday of a heart ailment.

Success of the slight, soft-spoken scientist in the making of newsprint from slash pine was widely heralded. Behind his experiments was the hope of making the United States independent of Canadian forests for newsprint. Herty conducted tests of his Georgia pulp in Thorold, Ont.

Dr. Herty reported that, even with the vast investment of capital required for manufacturing plants, newsprint could be produced from southern forests much cheaper than the imported paper.

Dr. Herty recently announced he had made paper from black gum and tupelo gum trees, and had begun experiments with soft maple. His experimental pulp and paper plant here was given State sponsorship by the Georgia Legislature last spring.

First of Mill Chain.

Less than two months ago the Southern Newspaper Publishers Association announced plans to build a $7,500,000 newsprint plant at Lufkin, Texas, the first unit of a proposed chain of mills designed to manufacture paper from young pine trees by the Herty process.

Born at Milledgeville, Ga., Dr. Herty was graduated from the University of Georgia in 1886. He received his Ph.D. degree at Johns Hopkins in 1890. He taught at the University of Georgia until 1892, when he left to work with the United States Bureau of Forestry. In 1906 he developed a special type of turpentine cup for the naval stores industry.

He later taught chemistry at the University of North Carolina, and then for five years was editor of the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry.

Manchoukuo Ready To Resist Invasion

HSINKING, Manchoukuo, July 29 —(AP).—Manchoukuo has no desire to fight Soviet Russia but is fully prepared to resist invasion, Naoki Hoshino, chief of the Manchoukuo General Affairs Administration, said to-day.

Recent troop clashes along the roughly defined Siberian Russia-Manchoukuo border created a period of diplomatic tension between Russia and Japan, Manchoukuo's protector.

"I do not believe these recent outbreaks can lead to serious consequences now," Hoshino asserted. "A negotiated settlement seems assured.

"Nor will war arise from incidents likely in the futufe, due to our 3,300 miles of poorly-defined frontier, unless Russia disregards the rules of International conduct too much.

"Relations theoretically are friendly, but they are very unsatisfactory due to the extreme isolationist policy regarding Manchoukuo."

'We Want Pop'

FLINT, Mich., July 29 (CP). — Twenty 12-year-old ball players picketed a bottling works here today, demanding the proprietor furnish them with four cases of soft drinks, instead of two. The boys, sponsored in two baseball leagues by the bottling works owner, carried signs reading "We want pop, not promises." They said the owner had not kept a promise to supply them with four cases in exchange for the advertising they gave his product.

'Softie' Burglars

PHILADELPHIA, July 29 (AP).— Arthur Flanagan took a look at the beds and decided the burglars who stole $1,000 in silverware while his family was on vacation must have been pretty tired. He said they evidently had donned his best pajamas and picked out the softest beds in the house, with signs that they had spent several nights in the place.

Tipperary Author Jack Judge Dies

LONDON, July 29—(AP). — The man who wrote the famous British war song "It's a Long Way to Tipperary"—died to-day in Birmingham. He was Jack Judge, 60, a fish salesman who became a British vaudeville headliner.

His publishers retired him on a life pension, saying Judge had written "a soldier's anthem which actually helped win the war."

Before he earned a fortune with one of the most successful song hits of the 20th century he had passed many years as a fish salesman in the Oldbury Market in Staffordshire.

This is how he told recently of writing "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," while playing in vaudeville.

"It was on New Year's Day in 1912, that someone bet me I could not write a song and produce it on the same day.

"I took on the bet, sat down and wrote the words and music. That night I sang it at the Stalybridge Grand Theatre.

It was a grand success. I had to sing it time and again. In fact, we had great difficulty clearing the theatre for the second house.

"I was booked immediately to appear for two weeks at a theatre only five miles away. 'Tipperary' has been a success ever since."

Stork Prefering Boys To Girls In 1938 Visits

TORONTO, July 29.—Four hundred and forty-four babies have made their entry into the world via the maternity wards of the Salvation Army Grace Hospital since the beginning of the year, Brigadier Adelaide Hollande, officer in charge, reports. Of this group 233 babies were boys and 211 were girls, and states Brigadier Hollande, "they are still coming thick and fast, although July may slacken off a little. There were seventy-nine births in May, seventy-four in June and sixty-two so far in July."

In Grace Hospital nursery, which accommodates forty babies, there is at present the smallest inmate they have ever cared for. A baby boy who weighed only two pounds, eleven ouces at birth, but who now, at one month old, weighs three pounds, ten ounces. Incubators are not used at the hospital, but Brigadier Hollande reports much success in raising premature babies by mean of special electric appliances placed under the cot. "We have eight premature babies in the hospital right now. We don't get a bit excited about them. With extra care they are soon past the danger stage," she said.

Heaviest baby born in the hospital recently weighed ten pounds eleven ounces, but the staff still talks about a baby born four years ago who weight fifteen pounds, three ounces. "This was the largest baby ever registered, so far as we know, and medical men from all over the city came to see it. Unfortunately it did not live," the Brigadier stated.

If prospective fathers keep calm they are allowed to remain in the hospital and read while waiting for the news of their baby's birth. "Sometimes we send them out for a walk. Sometimes we get mad at them and send them about their business," said the hospital director.

Want Boy First

Brigadier Hollande believes that the majority of men prefer their first child to be a boy. "After that it doesn't matter much, unless there be few of either boys or girls in the family," she stated.

Pre-natal and post-natal clinics are held at the hospital each week. The rule that patients must return to the clinic for at least six weeks after an operation is strictly adhered to.

While the bulk of the hospital's work is with maternity cases, the surgical room is seldom idle, and this year 222 surgical operations have been performed.

The hospital, which now contains acccmmodation for 55 patients, has two operating rooms, a laundry, large kitchen, clinic rooms and staff quarters, began operating in 1907 in a large house. At that time it merely gave assistance to single girls. In 1925 a new section was added to accommodate 18 patients. Revenue from paying patients aids in the upkeep of services for the needy.

"Spirit of the women in hospital this year is brighter and more optimistic than it has been for the past seven years," Brigadier Hollande declared as she paid tribute to the Women's Auxiliary of the hospital. "Last year they made 1,000 garments for the nursery. They supply all the equipment we require to maintain that department and have supplied us with four new cots," she said. The women meet every second Tuesday at the hospital and spend the entire day sewing. Money to finance their work is raised by means of teas, garden parties and bazaars. "Being a Salvation Army hospital we do not believe in raising money by means of dances, raffles or card parties," the Brigadier said.

Chicago's Syphilis War Spreads Fast

CHICAGO, July 29—(AP).—Chicago appreciably was closer today to its goal of eradicating syphilis. The city's intensive campaign, directed into one of its most vital phases a year ago, has become, in the opinion of health authorities, the spearhead of a National movement in the United States to wipe out venereal disease.

Polled late last July on the question of whether they would submit to free, secret blood tests by their family physicians, 93,031 Chicagoans voted in the affirmative.

Concurrently, 7,000 physicians along with hospitals and clinics, were asked by Mayor Edward J. Kelly's committee for control of venereal disease to mobilize in the fight against syphilis.

Rebels Prepare To Flood Loyalists Out

HHENDAYE, France, July 28. — (AP). — Insurgent plans to blast dams of the Ebro river and its tributaries in a desperate effort to halt by flood a four-day government offensive were reported to-day.

Dispatches from insurgent cities behind the 90-mile front lines continued to insist the government drive, which started with a surprise crossing of the wide Ebro Monday and in which the government yesterday reported the capture of 15 villages and 4,000 prisoners during a thrust into Gandesa, was checked and the entire territory "cleaned up."

Observers with the advancing government armies reported men and guns still were being poured across the Ebro in support of advance guard units fighting their way to Gandesa, a town of 3,700 normal population about 90 miles southwest of Barcelona.

Strategically located in Southern Catalonia, Gandesa was an important link between the insurgents' Catalan line and armies thrusting toward Valencia. It has been General Francisco Franco's regional headquatrers since April 2.

Although insurgents said continued relays of their warplanes succeded in blowing up the government's pontoon bridges across the Ebro, they were reported ready to dynamite dams as far north as the Pyrenees mountans to try to trap militiamen who already had crossed.

Bert Collyer, Track Expert Dies Suddenly

CHICAGO, July 29—(A P)—Bert E. Collyear, 61, nationally known horse race handicapper and publisher of "Collyer's Eye", a sports and turf information paper, died last night.

Born in Durham, Ont., Collyer ran a print shop in his youth before going to Alaska during the gold rush of '98. It was there he gained recognition as a newspaperman for his exclusive dispatch on the Chilkoot Pass avalanche April 4, 1898. Sixty persons were killed at the pass and many injured.

Employed by Hearst newspapers on the Pacific Coast, he subsequently was transferred to the Chicago American and named turf editor. In 1914, he established his publication, which he claimed, was the first to disclose the Chicago Black Sox baseball scandal in 1920.

In addition to winning recognition as a gentleman rider Collyer had owned many horses, both jumpers and flat runners.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Frances L. Collyer; a brother, Lally Collyer of Covington, Ky.; and two sisters, Mrs. Eve Elz of Burlington, Ont., and Mrs. Mildred Hendy of Guelph, Ont. Burial will be in Guelph.

Members of his publishing firm said the paper and the syndicated handicap column Collyer conducted would be continued.

"Washboard" Eggs

Greyhound Turns Back the Clock

The horse is familiar and his driver's familiar, but what's the vehicle in the picture? It's a hand-made sulky dating back to 1885 being given a trial spin by the world's champion trotter, Greyhound, as a feature of the recent Grand Circuit meet at Goshen, N.Y. Sep Palin, of course, is handling the reins, and the sulky he's mounted on tips the scales at about 90 pounds in contrast to the modern affair weighing between 20 and 30 pounds.

No Front Page Stuff For Aching Arms In Old Days, Says Gabby

Used To Pitch Kinks Out Of Rusty Elbows

CLEVELAND, July 29.—This is the year of sore arms. Elbows and shoulders have been creaking all over the sports pages. One costly flipper after another has been placed in cold storage. Doctors and bone-setters hae been reaping a harvest of lame muscles and twisted joints.

First it was Dizzy Dean. Then Lefty Grove's leathery wing went dead in the middle of a ball game. Bob Feller pokes his head out of the dugout to announce that his fast ball has gone away and that when he winds up his elbow makes a noise like the corner pool room on a Saturday night. Red Ruffing suddenly quits in the middle of a ball game with misery in his shoulder. Down in Texas Schoolboy Rowe and Paul Dean, heroes of a world series three years ago, engage in pitcher's battles, using desperately what they have left of once great arms. Brooklyn's Van Lingle Mongo comes up with a great performance, then is on the bench nursing an aching wing for weeks.

Softer Nowadays?

Your guess is as good as mine as to the cause of the ailments to which so many star flingers have fallen heir. Perhaps the boys are softer than they were in the days of Iron Man Joe McGinnity, Cy Young, Grover Alexander and Walter Johnson. Gabby Street, the venerable manager of the Browns, is one who thinks so.

"Nowadays a pain in the neck is worth a fancy medical name, a couple of x-rays and a prescription," says the old catcher who managed the Cardinals to tow championships and a world series victory over the Athletics. "A sore arm now is worth a column in the sports pages. In my days a sore arm simply meant an extra day's rest on the bench.

"Sure, pitchers used to get sore arms when I was catching. I've caught a lot of ball games behind pitchers that had to start warming up underhand because they couldn't lift their arms. And numb! I've seen Burleigh Grimes got out and pitch nine innings when his arm was so numb he could stick a pin in it anywhere and not feel a thing.

Grimes' Great Feat

"Seven years ago we played the Athletics in the world series. In the deciding game, Grimes started for the Cards with two days of rest. His arm was as numb that day as a frozen ham. Along about the seventh or eighth inning he had to set down out on the pitching slab to rest his arm on his leg. Otherwise I think it woulda fell right off his shoulder.

"I caught Walter Johnson for years. He would come up with a sore arm once in a while, but he didn't need any doctor's diagnosis. He just r'ared back and pitched it out. But then Walter was an exception. Like Lefty Grove. These two guys had a smooth motion from start to finish, without a jerk in it. That's why they kept their speed for so long. No effort or strain.

"There are two kinds of pitchers. Fast ballers and curve ball pitchers. The fast ball pitchers get sore shoulders and the curvers get it in the elbow as a rule. A sore shoulder is bad stuff. Rowe and both of the Dean boys had it in their shoulders. But it isn't always fatal. Mel Harder couldn't comb his hair two years ago, but his arm has come back.

Too Many Fireballers

During the last few years the tendency has been to throw fast balls, especially in the American league. The National used to be a curve ball league, but there are so many fast ballers in that league now that you can't call it that any more. The two Deans, Schoolboy Rowe, Mungo, Lefty Gomez and others set a style for pitchers to follow. A lot of guys have been throwing fast balls who shouldn't do it. Their constitutions weren't fitted for fast balls, and they just threw themselves out. Maybe that has something to do with it.

"Some of it is in the mind, too. I think pitchers should be handled a little tougher. Their sore arms get too much attention. That's my guess."

Minnie Located

DETROIT, July 29 (CP).—Detroit police have returned to normalcy after an unintentional kidnapping of Minnie, the office cat. A woman found Minnie outside the police station, and, for her daily good deed, took her to the Michigan Humane Society office. When police found Minnie hadn't arrived to feed her four three-weeks-old kittens, they were all upset. Finally they telephoned the Humane Society for a substitute. Minnie was sent as the substitute.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

DOWN IN THE GUTTED-STICK corral, opposite Little Lake's wharf on George St., there will be a lacrosse match tonight, Provided it doesn't come up some more rain. It's slated for nine o'clock and is an O L. A. senior "B" contest betwixt Woodbridge and the Petes, with a midget tilt on first. Should be buckets of action again and it rates another biggish bunch of customers. The gutted-stick warriors (when they have any opposition) really turn on the heat and dish up platters of excitement for the fannettes and fans. Woodbridge ought to give 'em the necessary opposition, if they've bolstered as much as they claim. Any team that can hold Brooklin to a draw in Brooklin's back yard isn't coasting. Woodbridge did it a week ago.

YOUNG PETES play Cobourg tomorrow after luncheon at three bells in Riverside Park. Last scheduled scrap in the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League, with the site of the semi-final playoff games depending on this tilt. Herb Ralph will send Bob Todd to the hill top with Condon in reserve. After dropping a 5-4 heartbreaker a few nights ago in the Lakeshore town, the Y. P. players will be battling to even that up and maybe get the nod on where to park for the playoff, and payoff, serial. Ought to be a nice junior ball game before a sizeable gathering.

Thrills, Spills, Chills

CLOSE FOLLOWERS of Motorbike racing, pro and amateur, will recognize the names of some of the stars coming here Civic Holiday for the championship races at the Exhibition Grounds. Names like Harold Bain, Cy Henry and Johnny Millett, pros, with George Day, Irwin Knight, Sam Davis, Romeo Masse, Bill Matthews and Bill Sturgeon. They're from Hamilton, Toronto, Montreal and other spots, the pros having recently toured England. Besides a local race, and it'll be a hot one, these gents will buzz their bikes about that dirt track with speed to burn, thrilling a couple or three thousaand spectators as they hit the corners on high. It ought to be quite an afternoon's attraction for the holiday.

* * * * * *

SPEAKING OF SPEED, we noted the other day some comparative rates of velocity, which may be interesting. For instance, Feller, Vander Meer or any speedball twirler can blaze the apple from the mound to the plate in 1-3 of a second or 127 miles an hour. Dempsey using a 10-inch punch sent it travelling at 135 miles an hour; Sarzen was tested driving a golf ball 120 m.p.h., and Tilden smacked a tennis pill 118. A human can sprint about 29 or 30, while an antelope will do 62. Birds do up to 200 m.p.h., while a seaplane did 440 and a car well over 300. The tortoise isn't listed, nor several of the lumbering laddies who run bases for the Petes!

The Park Was a Lake

HOUSE OF DAVID pros had to postpone their tilt ala exhibish here last night owing to the heavy all-day downpour of rain. The park was pretty nearly covered with water, the ground as soggy as a swamp and two young lakes cut off the dugouts from human habitation! When it gets wet in the park at Riverside, it gets very wet indeed. The bearded boys strolled up and down the main stem last evening and left today for Oshawa. They play in the Motor City tonight and tomorrow afternoon. Then, the Benton Harborites return to take on the Petes here Saturday night at 9.15, and will stay over and play the postponed fray in Riverside on Monday night. That is, if it doesn't rain anymore. We didn't mention the possibility of rain when mentioning these tussles for several days, thinking we might put it over—but nossuh, just advertise the fact that the Petes have a home game, and it comes down rain!

DOWN IN NAPANEE night before last, Walt Gerow's gang lost by a 7-6 score to the Davids in a good game. Spratt started and pitched neat ball for a time, but later the clubs changed batteries. A fair-sized crowd saw the exhibition. Incidentally, seems to be a lack of co-operation in the Bay of Quinte intermediate loop. In the pro game at Belleville Tuesday, the district teams were asked to send players but none of the Napanee guys showed up, a Picton-Belleville bunch playing the Whiskerinos. Then on Wednesday, a district team was supposed to play the Michigan men, but none of the Picton or Belleville boys were on hand—and Napanee had to do it alone. 'Tis said the Quinte gents lost their shirts staging the contest, and we doubt if the Naps spooned in much gravy, either.

Never a Grid Murmur

ALL QUIET IN THE Orfuns' quarters these days, at least so far as news for the public goeth. We haven't heard anything lately regarding the Peterborough entry into the senior O. R. F. U. of 1938. Except that application letters continue to come in from out-of-work gridders, wanting a job and a chance to play for the Orfuns. Some of 'em shoot quite a line about their Big Four experience, etc., and much of it can't bear the light of close investigation. However, some real established rugby stars are available, too. Haven't learned yet what the club colors will be, but we hope sincerely they are not black and blue! Incidentally, Cobourg columnist slaps out at the Oshawa writer for saying Meikle of Cobourg will try out with Regina this year—adding that Meikle will be back in the Lakeshore town ere autumn.

Sandy Is Lone Canadian Left In Semi-Finals

LONDON, Ont., July 29—(CP)—Sandy Somerville today carried Canada's hopes for retention of the Dominion's own Amateur Golf Championship.

Down to the semi-finals, believed unparallelled in International make-up, the 1938 tournament offered an all-United States affair in one half and an International fight in the other.

Three young players from across the border, one of them only 21 years old, have marched steadily through five rounds of play and have stood the test when pitted against some of Canada's best known golfers.

Two of this trio are pals from Salt Lake City, Ven Savage, 26, and Ed Kingsley, 23, have had their eyes on the Canadian Amateur Crown since playing in this year's trans-Mississippi tournament at Lincoln, Neb., where Savage defeated Kingsley in the final.

From Columbia, Mo., A city of 15,000 came Ted Adams, just old enough to vote in his country, with a ready smile, a pleasing drawl in his speech and a yearning for the Canadian Crown that dates back to early last winter.

Against this golfing trio stands Somerville, London's pride. A real veteran of golfing tournaments, Sandy is after his seventh Canadian title. He won the United States Amateur in 1932 when 27 years old. Sandy and Savage meet today in one half of the two-star attraction.

BOSTON RED SOX SLUG WAY TO DOUBLE WINS OVER CHICAGO

Runs Count As St. Louis Browns Beat Circuit-Hitting Yanks

Hubbel Halts Cards For Giant Victory

NEW YORK, July 29—(CP)—For years, one of baseball's universal beliefs—like three strikes are out—has been that a club entertaining hopes of figuring in the money must have strength "down the middle."

Such being the case, it has become increasingly amazing now that Lefty Grove's wing is laid up for repairs, how those Boston Red Sox continue to hang right onto the Yankees and Indians in the American League pennant party.

When this season got under way, few thought the Sox had much of a chance. The "experts" refused to see moneybags Yawkey's boys because of that middle line. And when Grove went into drydock two weeks ago, everyone immediately foretold their finish.

But since that time, the Sox have won seven and lost three, the latest a doubleheader beating they handed Chicago White Sox yesterday, 13-8 and 8-5.

Unknown Centre Line.

Now, that "middle line" represents the portion of a ball club, which, laid end to end, runs from the catcher out to the centre field. In back of the mask and pads, the Sox had Gene Desautels, who is strictly no bargain. On paper, the pitching staff, aside from Old Mose, was largely a collection of young unknowns. In centre field, Doc Cramer didn't figure to be any world beater, but he has been a pleasant surprise, batting .315 for the season and .341 in the last 10-game stretch since Lefty's been gone.

But it has been at second base and on the mound where things have been popping. Manager Joe Cronin decided to string along with young Bobby Doerr last year, despite all kinds of criticism. And the kid finally has come through, for the past month or so he has been travelling at a .400 clip, and, for the final 10-game run since the Sox were counted out (by expert opinion) he's been going at .368 and fielding A-1.

On top of that, the rookie pitchers have been fooling everyone, for which give a large assist to old Herb Pennock, the one-time ace of the world champion Yankees, who's taken youngsters like Jim Bagby, Emerson Dickman and Dick Midkiff in hand and taught them the tricks. The result is, Bagby and Dickman, between 'em, have won 13 games and lost but seven. Dickman sports a five-game winning streak.

Of course, it's always nice to have fellows like Foxx and the speedy Ben Chapman around. Foxx belted homer No. 28 in yesterday's opener and Chapman drove in four runs, the Sox winning with a five-run blast in the 10th. In the nightcap, Midkiff, tossed in when the White Sox got tough in the fifth, pitched one-hit shutout ball the rest of the way.

Three Games Behind.

This left the Sox only two games back of the Indians, whose game with the Athletics was rained out, and only three back of the pace-setting Yankees, who dropped a 4-3 decision to St. Louis Browns despite three homers. The Tigers belted Washington Senators 12-4.

The Giants ended their five-game losing streak by nipping St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, and, naturally, it was King Carl Hubbell who did it with a seven-hit pitching job for his 12th win. Linus Frey's three-run double gave the Cincinnati Reds a 4-2 victory over Boston Bees. The Pirates pounded out seven runs in a big seventh inning to trample the Phillies 9-2. The Dodgers and Cubs weren't scheduled.

SPORT SPICE

NEW YORK, July 29—(AP)—Ambers and Armstrong may lay one of those great big eggs from a financial standpoint...In the four night games at Ebbetts Field so far the Dodgers have pulled in 117,369 fans and got the club out of the red... Jimmy Johnston flew to the coast to make arrangements for Bob Pastor's fight with Maxie Rosenbloom next week...One expert writes the Yankers are running the bases worse than the Dodgers of old these days ...Some of the schools in the south which have been trying to be amateur (and stay in the football biz) will untie the bankroll and go after the freshmen in a big way this summer...Business is off 50 per cent at Tony Galento's joint since Tony has been laid up and can't get around to bellow greetings to the customers.

Charlie Grimm probably will have another big league connection next summer...Around Broadway they'll bet you John Henry Lewis doesn't get to first base in his proposed suit against the New York Athletic Commission—which is to say it'll never reach the courts...After all, the commish merely told John he'd have to come in and fight a guy, or else—and John Henry rode the else... The Yanks are finding out rookie pitcher Steve Sundra can kill something beside egg omelets—same being a horseshide...Young Bobby Riggs has unsheathed his racquets in no less than 18 tournaments this year already.

Hard Worker

OSSIE SLOAN

Local lacrosser who will probably be in action with the Petes here tonight when they tangle with Woodbridge in an O.L.A. senior "B" struggle.

Local Pilot

EDDIE MURPHY

Manager of the Petes, who also plays in the infield. He and his gang will tangle here tomorrow night under the lights with the House of David bearded ballsters.

Lacrosse Game Here Tonight

Weather permitting, an Ontario Lacrosse Association senior "B" scheduled fixture will be staged in Peterborough tonight (Friday) at nine o'clock under the lights in the George St. arena. It will be between the Woodbridge outfit and the Petes, and should be an exciting contest all the way. The Woodbridge crew have bolstered and promise to send their full squad and to get here on time. The Petes recently complained to the O.L.A. regarding visiting teams coming shorthanded and starting games late. It is hoped this will be eliminated in future. A midget melee between Kiwanis and Kinsmen goes on before the senior scrap, starting at 8.15 o'clock.

The Petes expect to field a full lineup, with all their regular players on deck tonight. The locals have been hitting a fast clip and winning nearly all their home games and a good percentage of road tussles. The strong Woodbridge team should extend Frank Randle's outfit all the way and the game promises to be a pleasing contest, full of action, for the fans. Weather being right, the game will no doubt draw another big crowd of gutted-stick sport enthusiasts.

Canada Fails In Davis Cup

MONTREAL, July 29.—(CP)—The lid of the ash can was clamped almost tight today on Canada's 1938 Davis Cup bid. Failing broken limbs among the invading Japenese or a minor miracle, the Domnion's first try in three years seems certain to be tossed out in the first round.

Her doubles forces go out today to attempt, in a last-ditch stand, to beat off elimination. A loss in the doubles play, tacked on to the twin straight-set defeats given Canada's two top singles players yesterday, will move the swarthy men from the Orient into the second round of North American zone play.

Even if Laird Watt and Ross Wilson take the measure of Jiro Yamagishi and Fumiteru Nakano in the doubles, few experts will concede Canada an outside chance. For the sure-stroking Yamagishi is still to be considered in Saturday's singles, and his opponent is Toronto's Wilson.

That Japan's most dangerous court man is almost surely Wilson's master he pointed out yesterday as he outclassed in straight sets, Bobby Murray of Montreal, No. 1 in Canada. The scores were 6-1, 6-3, 6-3. Lending emphasis to Yamagishi's superiority was Wilson's 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 defeat at the hands of little Nakano, whose play is not up to his teammate's standard.

Lawn Bowling
By HERB MARTIN

In endeavoring to put over the biggest bowling tournament ever attempted in Central Ontario, the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club has went to no end of trouble and expense in their efforts to accomplish this purpose.

The committee in charge of this event have worked hard and long and have spent many, many hours in preparing every detail that would in any way help to bring the tournament to a successful conclusion. Details such as the early advertising, the sending of letters out to every bowling club in the province, the receiving of the entries and the uncertainty of some of them, the arranging for parking space for the visitors' cars, the arranging of tents, tables and chairs for the ladies whereby they will be able to look after the needs of the inner man, and a hundred more items that take up somebody's time and patience. But all this has been done with one thought in mind, namely, to establish in Peterborough with the co-operation of sister clubs, a lawn bowling centre that not only our own club will be proud of, but will be a credit to all clubs of Central Ontario.

In printing the draw for Civic Holiday we make this appeal to our local bowlers: Please be on time and co-operate with the committee. Their task for that day will be a long and hard one. Extend the hand of fellowship to all, make everybody feel at home, so that when they go back home they will be glad of having come.

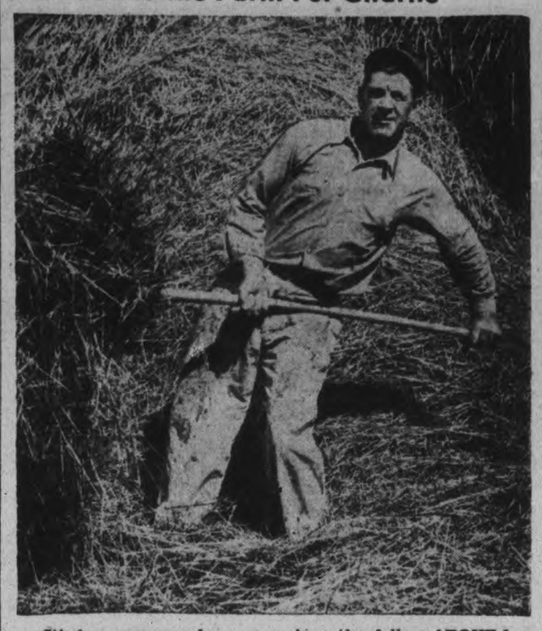
It's Back to the Farm For Charlie



It's been many a long year since the fellow ABOVE has been pitching hay at this time of year. The hay may have needed pitching, but someone else had to do it, because for more than 20 years he was playing ball all summer. Of course, by now you've recognized Charlie Grimm, deposed manager of Chicago Cubs, who hustled back to his farm after the appointment of Gabby Hartnett to succeed him in control of Phil Wrigley's team. Charlie didn't stay on the farm, however, and for the rest of the season will announce the Cubs' games over the radio.

Newark Hopeful To Support Parent Yanks Next Season

Chuck Keller Sets Gaudy .377 Pace

NEWARK, July 29.—(CP)— This may be another Newark year as far as the International Baseball League standings go, but almost every team in the circuit is figuring on shoving a few of their hopefuls up in the big leagues when the season's campaigning is over.

The Bears are expected to provide quantity and quality again for the parent New York Yankees, but a few of the clubs, notably Syracuse Chiefs, are not far behind in that department.

At least six of the Bears' current crop, headed by clouting Charley Keller, are marked for the Yankees in 1939. Charley, who walloped out a gaudy .353 to lead the International League batters last season, is hitting at a .377 pace in his second year in organized ball.

Buddy Rosar, the 23-year-old backstop, is counting on his phenomenal .409 average to boost him into the job of first assistant to Bill Dickey. Jimmy Gleeson is hoping he'll be the third member of the outfield that started the season for the Bears, to go big league. Bob Seeds was sold earlier in the season to New York Giants and several scouts have passed the "ok" sign on Gleeson.

Chance For Donald.

Three pitchers with a combined record at present of 35 wins and eight defeats, round out the Bears' half dozen. Atley Donald, with a won-lost record of 21-4 wants another chance, while a pair of 23-year-olds, Marius Russo and Jack Haley, want the records to talk for them. Russo, a southpaw, has a mark of 13-3 and Haley, a husky righthander, is tops with 11-1.

Long Johnny Gee and Red Barrett, a pair of hurlers, and Outfielders Nino Bongy and Jimmy Outlaw, are Syracuse's bright lights, all apparently headed for Cincinnati.

Rochester offers a crack battery in Lefty Ken Raffensberger, who has won 10 and lost three, and husky Sam Narron, who is carrying a .360 hitting mark. Montreal has a hard-hitting infielder in Bill Schuster to offer, while Baltimore already has made deals for Pitcher Johnny Wittig and Catcher Dick West, who is now with Chattanooga.

The players had a day off yesterday, when the Buffalo-Rochester tilt, the only game on the schedule, was postponed because of wet grounds.

Coast Court Threat

One of Canada's most promising tennis players, who will take part in the Dominion championships at Toronto, beginning July 29; is Bill Pedlar (above) of Vancouver. William is but 17 years old and last year won the Canadian junior championship which will be defending.

Western Oarsmen High Up In Point List For Honors at the Canadian Henley

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 29.—(CP).—As in previous years the 56th Royal Canadian Henley developed to-day into a duel between Toronto Argonauts and Buffalo Westsides for the club championship honors.

But unlike former regattas was the appearance well up in the point list of Fort William's Navy Blues and Regina A. C.

When the points were compiled at the end of the first day's competition yesterday Westsides topped all others with 14—one more than the second place Argos.

Tied for third with eight points each were the Navy Blues, the Albertans and New York A.C.

Westsides earned their points by winning the junior 140-pound fours and placing second in the junior 150-pound four and quarter-mile open race. Argos picked up their baker's dozen when three of their oarsmen placed first, second and third in the 140-pound, quarter-mile event, won by Jack Flavelle.

Each of the three clubs tied for third won a final event.

Cobourg Juniors Here On Saturday

Herb Ralph's local Young Petes have a Junior Lakeshore Baseball League fixture here tomorrow (Saturday) afternoon at three o'clock in Riverside Park, playing the Cobourg crew. It will be the final scheduled Lakeshore Loop tussle and ought to be well worth seeing. A loss for the locals would give Cobourg choice of the extra game in the league semi-finals, these teams being slated to tangle in playoffs, winner to meet Oshawa in the finals for the right to enter O.B.A. junior playdowns. The game should draw a good crowd of fans.

The Young Petes dropped a tough 5-4 decision in Cobourg two nights ago but claim they were outlucked and should have won. These teams have been putting on some fine baseball battle through the schedule and the final one tomorrow here should be no exception. Bob Todd will twirl for the homesters, with Lefty Condon held in reserve. It is uncertain what flinger will take the mound for the Cobourgites. McNabb will probably catch again for the Y.P. team with Hollingsworth on second. The locals are determined to pull out a victory this time.

Steers Advance, Hogs Drop $1.40 In Week

TORONTO, July 29 (CP).—Prices were up 25 cents cwt on a small proportion of good killing steers and heifers with inferior cattle slow and barely steady on the Toronto Livestock market this week, the Dominion Livestock Branch reports.

Cattle supply included 1,200 from the West, mostly plain stockers. A holdover of 1,400 cattle from Monday was reduced to about 300 head at the close. Calves held steady throughout the week as did sheep. Hog prices took a sharp drop, going down $1.40 cwt for the week. Lambs were up slightly.

Several lots of good to choice weighty steers sold at $7 to $7.50 with three loads at $7.85 to $8. Common, rough steers sold downward to $5 cwt. Good butcher steers and heifers brought from $6.25 to $6.75 with common as low as $4.50. Butcher cows were mostly $3 to $4.25 with a few up to $4.50. Caners and cutters traded from $2 to $2.75.

Butcher bulls dropped 25 cents after a steady opening, closing at $3.75 to $4.50 with bologna bulls at $3.25 to $3.50. Choice fed calves ranged from $8.50 to $9.25 with mediums down to $7. Light stockers of plain quality went slowly at $4 to $5 cwt and a few picked native feeders reached $5.50. Milkers and springers of good quality were stronger at about $65 for tested crops.

550 Go to Britain.

Exporters shipped 550 cattle to Great Britain, but no shipments are scheduled for the near future.

Choice veal calves were $8 to $8.50 with the bulk of calf sales between $6 and $8. A few common grassers moved at $3.50 to $4.50 cwt.

Hogs opened the week at $12.35 to $12.40 and closed at $11 off-trucks for bacons. Sows were taken at $7 cwt. off-trucks for both grades. Several hundred feeding pigs found no buyers and were unsold at the finish.

Sheep and lamb receipts were light. Lambs started firm at $9.50 for good ewes and wethers, with bucks at $8.50. Closing lamb prices were up to $9.75 on ewes and wethers, with culling very light. Sheep were unchanged at $2 to $4 cwt., according to quality, with some culls at $1.50.

Bolt Plays Havoc In Marmora Home

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, July 28. —Lightning struck the home of Sanford Lawrence, in the south of Marmora, shortly before 6 p.m. on Thursday, in freakish mood. Mrs. Lawrence, who was alone, was sitting in the southern end of her verandah calmly reading her newspaper when the crash came. The aerial of her radio was stripped and the radio shattered simultaneously with smashing of the glass of a window in the south end and of another in the north end of the house.

Furniture was overthrown and glass in a panel of the south bedroom window was also smashed.

In the kitchen, which is to the east of the rooms atected, the telephone was torn of the wall and the clock ceased in movement. Miraculously though smoke appeared and wall paper near to where the radio stood was scorched, there was no outbreak of fire though dompened clothes on the clothes line of her neighbor to the south, Mrs. Ella Lawlor, were burned.

Mrs. Lawrence received no concussion ands was sot the least agitated as she described the occurrence to the various visitors who called at the same time as the Examiner representative.

Claim Max Vincent

serious charge involving imprisonment?"

"That is right."

The information in this case was produced and it showed that Vincent had been charged with illegal possession. Wheeler said he should have been charged with selling.

Mr. Carley suggested that Wheeler was now making a new charge, one outside the jurisdiction of the inquiry and it was a question of how far the charges were to be extended at the instigation of Wheeler.

"I think you are absolutely right, technically," agreed Judge Deroche, "but now that the matter has gone this far it would be better be cleared up."

Another Occasion

Wheeler described another occasion in March, 1937, in which Vincent's house had been watched and a man had been arrested with beer in his possession and had made a statement that he had bought it from Mrs. Max Vincent. This time Vincent who was charged, instead of his wife, was arraigned as a first offender while Wheeler declared he should have been charged as a second offender.

The original information was produced and showed that Vincent had been charged with illegal possession as a first offender and had been fined $100 and costs.

Wheeler said in November of that years, while searching Vincent's house for coats stolen from Millbrook, police had discovered a quantity of beer and Max Vincent was arrested on that occasion. 36 bottles of beer had been found.

"As a result of that report going in," asked Mr. Frost, "what charge was laid?"

"It took so long that I was off the department before it was disposed of."

"In the meanwhile Mr. and Mrs. Vincent appeared before the police commission in December and testified against you."

"Yes."

"And then the case was finally disposed of in January?"

"Yes, Vincent was fined $15 and costs."

"Still A Bootlegger"

Cross examined by Mr. Carley, Wheeler said that Vincent was a bootlegger now and he had seen liquor coming out of his house recently.

"In regard to these charges do you know whether the Crown Attorney was consulted or not."

"I don't."

"Do you remember telling Mrs. Vincent at the police station to bring her $104 with her?" "I do not."

"Do you deny that?" "I do."

Wheeler said that he had been given the names of Ferguson and Vincent to investigate as bootleggers, the names having been given him by Inspector Reid who got them from Judge Smoke. The chief constable was out of the city at the time.

Witness said that he did not know Alex Lyons was a bootlegger. "I knew he was suspected of it."

"Do you remember saying in Fleetwood's house that you were going to knock off Vincent within a week?"

"No replied Wheeler.

"Were you in the Ferguson house, intoxicated and talking to and dancing with a young lady?" "I was not."

Mrs. Max Vincent told Mr. Frost her husband was not working just now.

"I understand that just now extends back about seven years," said the examining counsel.

Witness admitted that her husband had not had a steady job for six years.

"Yet in that time you have created a new home and bought a car," remarked Mr. Frost.

Witness admitted that to be the case.

Questioned as to the incidents mentioned by Wheeler, Mrs. Vincent said in regard to the case in March 1937 that she had sold beer "that night."

Not Selling Beer

Have you sold beer since?" "No."

"Has any beer been sold in your house?" "No."

The witness said in reply to a question from Mr. Frost that every time her house was searched by the police Wheeler had been a member of the party.

"And had it been searched since Wheeler left the force?" "No." Mrs. Vincent said that Wheeler had come to her place on other occasions.

"What did he come for?" "He came to buy beer."

Witness said that one time Wheeler had been friendly toward them but afterward had turned against them. She told of meeting Wheeler on the street and of his going with her to a place behind Nicholls Hospital where he consumed two bottles of beer she had secured for him. On another occasion he came into Fleetwood's house while she was there and demanded beer and she had gone outside and listened and heard Wheeler state that he was going to "knock off" Vincent.

Mrs. Vincent declared that when she had been arrested for selling beer she asked that her husband be allowed to take her place and Wheeler had told her to go home and get $104 to pay the fine.

Max Vincent was the next witness and he was closely examined by Mr. Frost and Judge Deroche as to his occupation. Vincent said that he had done odd jobs wherever he could get them.

"Give us the names and the amounts," pressed Judge Deroche.

Witness was silent for a moment and then made the statement that he had been doing a lot of gambling and got the money in that way.

Questioned as to the beer found in the house in November of last year Vincent maintained it had been purchased before he was put on the interdicted list.

"But you were put on the interdicted list in August," pointed out Mr. Frost. "Are you asking me to believe that beer was in your house from August to November?"

"That's what it was."

18 Cases a Year

Vincent maintained that he had not been selling beer in the last year and questioned as to his wife said that she might have been, "I only bought about fifteen cases in a year."

Vincent declared that he only got beer from the brewery warehouse."

"Are you getting that," Judge Deroche inquired of the court reporter and then looking toward Chief Newhall remarked, "That is something you should take note of."

"Have you ever paid money to any member of the police force?" Vincent was asked.

"Only to Joe Wheeler."

Witness told of receiving an order from Wheeler to supply liquor to an American car and of Wheeler saying afterward "How about my cut."

"I threw him $5," said Vincent, "and ever since he has hounded me for beer."

"Did you ever serve beer to any other member of the police force?"

"I have never served any present member of the force."

"Has Chief Newhall ever given you any special consideration in regard to liquor cases?" asked Mr. Carley.

"No, he's the crossest chief that has ever been on the force."

Not Ordered to Lay Off

Sergeant John Thompson was examined as to the occasions he was with Wheeler and watching Vincent's house. His evidence in that regard breaking no new ground. In answer to a question as to whether Vincent's place had been watched since Wheeler left the force Sergeant Thompson said that whenever he was on night duty, Vincent's house and other places were regularly inspected and watched.

"Did you have enough evidence in your possession to have laid charges of sale against Vincent at any time?"

"I did not."

"Did you ever hear any instructions given to members of the police force to "lay off" the Vincents?"

"No sir, I did not."

"Did you ever hear any instructions to lay off any persons suspected of bootlegging?" "I have not."

Constable John Naples who helped to search Vincent's house on one occasion said that he had been on the police force seventeen years. He declared that he had never heard any orders given to any member of the force to take no action in regard to any person believed to be selling liquor.

The session adjourned at this stage with the understanding that Chief Newhall would be called at the beginning of the Friday morning session.

row across the highway. Barns were roofless, crops sodden and flattened. Ditches overflowed across the road, fields were flooded as in spring thaw.

Trees Litter Streets

Most spectacular damage in Downeyville was at the Roman Catholic church where four trees were uprooted, one of them narrowly missing the church in its fall. That entire street was littered with trees, branches, shingles, and loose wire. On another street parts of the roof of one barn had been blown across the road into adjoining fields.

West of Downeyville roads were flooded at half a dozen points, and streams that normally carry an inch of water at this time of year, were raging torrents that had broken their banks and were racing across flattened grain fields.

One farmer a mile west of Downeyville, John Scully, had a narrow escape from death when a new roof was ripped from his barn by the gale. The roof travelled through the air for a hundred and fifty feet, came down on both sides of his house without striking it. Wreckage was strewn all across his fields. Rail fences were scattered and corn was flattened as though by the back of a shovel, grain were almost totally ruined.

In Lindsay about 5 o'clock, where there semed to be more trees down than standing, the second storm of the day struck shortly after five o'clock. Rain and hail were so dense that all traffic was halted. On the wide main street cars were parked three and four deep, just where their drivers had been forced to stop. Wreckage from the Benson House had been removed and no damage was apparent downtown.

The deluge lasted half an hour and then the sun shone brilliantly for a few minutes. The third cloudburst came soon after, missing some parts of the district, and lasted in varying degrees of intensity of a considerable length of time.

After leaving Dawson, Y.T., en route to Juneau, the party decided to stop here when the weather turned bad. They spent a comfortable night while all efforts to contact them from outside failed until anxiety was relieved when daytime communication were opened yesterday morning.

From Vancouver, it is expected the party will fly to Campbell River, on the eastern shore of Vancouver Island for fishing before turning eastward home to complete their 8,000-mile holiday jaunt.

When Beards Were Beards

STRATFORD. — Days when men were men and whiskers were whiskers were recalled at Stratford police headquarters yesterday. Chief Constable R. J. Beatty unearthed a 40-year-old regulation warning constables not to wear beards so long as to hide their collar badges.

Abbott May Gain $500 On Deal If Council Buys

Sam H. Abbott will make a profit of $500 on his purchase of the Point St. Charles property, formerly occupied by the McDonald Lumber Company, if the Council changes its mind and buys it from him for $1,500 after letting lapse an offer from the Peterborough Lumber Company who had acquired it, to sell it to the city for $1,000.

It should be explained that since that opportunity slipped by, the Council has been informed that the Federal Department of Public Works is willing to extend the riprapping of Little Lake from its present northerly end around Point St. Charles to the George Street Wharf. That work will cost approximately $8,000, possibly $10,000, provide employment, and remove some men from the relief list.

Alderman Gordon said there was no assurance the Government would spend the money.

"If I was as sure of getting $10,000 as Mr. Duffus is, I'd feel very much assured," Alderman Glover observed. "If we had a chance of getting any $10,000 spent here that would employ so much labor at a cost of $1,500, I think we would jump at it."

"What would you do with the property if we did buy it," Alderman Bradburn asked. Mayor Hamilton replied that it might be put to various uses, including an extension of the Board of Works yard. Aldermen Wilson and McCannan said they would be in favor of the project if $10,000 would be spent on the lake front.

Alderman Glover's motion was seconded by Alderman Juby proposing that an option on the Point property be obtained from Mr. Abbott and also assurance of Government work from Mr. Duffus, and that Mayor Hamilton and Alderman Dutton consult them. The motion carried.

Alderman Gordon declared himself opposed "to the transaction altogether."

"Even if we get $10,000 spent here?" Alderman Glover inquired.

"Yes," was Alderman Gordon's reply.

Gravel on Street Line.

Gravel and broken stone used by three or four service stations for surfacing their property was mentioned by Alderman Gordon as a hazard to pedestrians by pieces of the stone being carried on to the adjacent sidewalk. One woman had broken her leg and another was otherwise injured. Alderman Gordon moved, seconded by Alderman Bradburn, that gravel placed outside the street line be removed or the intervening strip paved. The motion carried.

Alderman Stocker suggested that the Jackson Park Creek north of Charlotte Street should be cleared out and deepened while it is accessible, to provide a freer flow for freshets, but City Engineer Parsons said the creek was on J. T. Braund's property, and the city had no right there.

Ice Cream Case Before Court

Two lawyers, two government inspectors and Magistrate O. A. Langley delved into the mysteries of walnut ice cream and maple walnut sundaes in police court this morning when a restaurant proprietor was charged with selling food products artificially flavored with maple without stating on his menu and bill-of-fare the fact that artificial flavoring was used.

The charge was laid under the Maple Syrup Industry Act and regulations and the complaint of the inspectors was that mapleine an artificial maple flavoring was used in the manufacture of maple walnut ice cream, instead of a pure maple flavoring.

The defendant had as his counsel W. B. Gordon while Jacob Low was present on behalf of the department.

Orloff May, Dominion government fruit and vegetable inspector and Clarence Stevenson, senior fruit and vegetable inspector for Eastern Ontario were the witnesses called by the prosecution and May declared that the man had admitted to him that he had been using mapleine in flavoring ice cream. This artificial product, May said, was made in St. Louis.

Stevenson testified that he had warned the proprietor last year and the year before that if he wanted to use artificial flavoring he must state the fact on his menu so that the public would know what is is buying.

Magistrate Langley reserved judgment in the case which has a large number of technical points.

Wonders Of Scientific World Unfolded To Startled Audience In Showing At Belleville

Preview Of Progress Has Many Strange Developments

"Well, sir," writes Andy Rutter, "we spent last night in Belleville previewing the General Motors "Previews of Progress" and the scientific revelations were so startling that we are actually walking in a sort of ethereal fog today."

Our assignment was to bring back a story so readers of the Examiner might get a general idea of what to expect when the "circus of science" opens here Thursday and Friday of next week, at the Exhibition grounds. It's a miniature "world's fair on wheels," and the entire show travels by motor vehicle.

Folks, you can expect anything to happen—anything startling and unusual—things that make you think and wonder at the unlimited possibilities of science. Not merely the great strides that have been made to date, but what great accomplishments are in store even for this generation.

The show opened with a bang and figuratively knocked our hat askew when Ernest Foss, the able demonstrator who handles the show, made a flame travel down a long glass tube and explode with a resounding pop. The explosion was of sufficient force to turn a bicycle wheel several revolutions.

It looked like magic, but it wasn't magic, of course. There was a reason, as there was for all the startling demonstrations, and they were clearly and concisely related by Foss to a capacity audience in Belleville's big Hume Arena.

Mentally, we straightened our hat as this initial surprise ended, but the fedora was in for a tough evening and a moment later it hit the ceiling when Foss fried an egg on a cold stove after placing a newspaper, which didn't burn nor even scorch between the stove and the frying pan.

Then there was the induction furnace in which Foss placed a large nail on which he had put some oil. He then inserted his fingers into the furnace. In a moment the nail became red hot, the oil went up in smoke, Foss' fingers weren't even warm.

By this time the audience, including your now very humble correspondent, was resigned to any wonder that Foss might present, and he didn't disappoint us.

Wonders of the photo-electric cell, or "electric eye" as it is also called, provided amazement and amusement when Foss, by merely stepping in front of a beam of light, stopped music being played on a phonograph Using the electric eye as the receiver and a "stroboscope" for a broadcasting set, Foss produced a variety of sounds from immitations of motor boats and fire sirens to an original version of "How Dry I Am."

Other spell-binding demonstrations made up the program, and when it was over we were firmly convinced that Foss could have actually knocked us over with a feather. However, when we met him after the show we found him to be a cordial, friendly fellow who confined his tricks to the laboratory and the stage, and we found ourselves reluctant to leave his presence.

Belleville merchants had prepared a parade of more than a mile in length to welcome "Previews of Progress", but it was put to rout when a terrific storm descended ten minutes before the scheduled starting time. In spite of the rain more than 2,000 persons were in the arena to see the show.

ONE BRIGHT SIDE

There was one bright side to yesterday's downpour. It produced one of the greatest harvests of dew worms on record and the men and boys who gather these worms and sell them for bait reached a new high in their collections. One youth collected over 2,000 worms in a comparatively short time in Victoria Park.

Father Of Ten Dies in Smash

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., July 29.—(CP).—John Radley, 60-year-old father of 10 children, was killed late last night when an automobile he was driving struck a truck at an intersection at McIntyre, 10 miles from here. Six of Radley's children, injured in the accident, were taken to hospital here for treatment.

Those injured were: Margaret, 18, face and body lacerations; Andie, 16, a broken right hip and lacerations; Christene, 15, broken left hip; Reta, 12, broken right leg and cuts; Eva, five, lacerations and bruises; Mildred, nine months old, possible internal injuries.

Hospital authorities said full extent of the baby's injuries would not be known until X-rays were taken.

Radley's car struck a truck driven by Jack Hughson of Singhampton at an intersection in Flesherton road. It was believed that Radley died almost instantly.

Coroner Dr. Frank Martin of Dundalk said an inquest would be held.

Some idea of the damage caused to property by the storm that raged across this district on Thursday may be gained from the pictures shown here and elsewhere in the paper. Centre of the storm appeared to be near Downeyville, where telephone wires were down, roofs were off barns, fields and roads were flooded. Four trees side by side in Downeyville were uprooted, one of them narrowly missing the Roman Catholic Church shown at TOP LEFT. At TOP RIGHT is a torrent that washed over a side road, a picture typical of conditions between Downeyville and Lindsay. This particular flood occurred on the outskirts of Lindsay. Nine telephone poles in a row, BOTTOM, were down between Omemee and Downeyville. —Examiner Staff Photos.

2 Storms In Day Flood Lindsay

LINDSAY, July 29.— Lindsay had its second storm visitation Thursday afternoon, and although it was not accompanied by a driving wind of cyclonic proportions, the downpour of rain was something more than copious. So heavy was the downfall the catch basins were unable to carry off the water, which ran over the curbs and backed up in the sewers, flooding cellars and doing considerable damage. In one plant in the business section the water in the basement reached a height of three feet. At the corner of Kent and Sussex streets flood water could not find an outlet and overflowed Victoria Park, which last night resembled a miniature lake. The fire department with pumper was brought into requisition to pump water from property in the vicinity of the park. During the height of the storm lightning struck the barn of Harry O'Neill in the East Ward. The structure was destroyed by fire.

A survey of the town and district following the morning's destructive storm shows that thousands of dollars worth of damage was done to crops, buildings, etc. In the southern section of South Ops the fine barn of Frank Brady was levelled, as was the barns of Roy Endicott and Howard Lynch in the same section. J. Flemmings barn at Hillhead, East Ops, was also destroyed by the wind and J. Bell had the roof blown off his barn. In West Ops J. Shea's barn was also levelled. H. Windrum's barn, east of the town, was levelled and a section of it blown across the road. In the township of Emily, it is reported, the barns of Charles Lucas, M. Carroll and Mary Lucas were wrecked, but this report could not be confirmed.

U.S. Traffic Deaths Off 22 p.c. in 6 Months

CHICAGO, July 29 — (AP). — Motorists in the United States are beginning to step on the brakes in time to save lives.

The United States National Safety Council reported today traffic fatalities for the first six months of 1938 were fewer by 22 per cent. than during the same period last year.

By heeding the plea to drive more carefully, motorists saved 3,670 lives during the first half of 1938, the council said.

If the percentage of decline continues for the balance of 1938, the council said, the year's traffic toll would be the lowest since 1928 and would represent a saving of 8,700 lives in comparison with 1937.

Asphodel Farmer Loses Horses

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, July 29.—A team of horses were killed yesterday when a west bound freight train hit them three miles west of here. One of the horses was not killed instantly but had to be destroyed as its leg was broken. The team were valued at $300 and were owned by Max Humphries, Asphodel farmer. They had strayed from a nearby field onto the tracks.

Pride Of The Filtration Zoo Blackie the Bear Gets Electrocuted As Gale Lashes Plant

Dozen Trees Crash, Reservoir Used As Power Fails

The huge black bear, pride of Ross Dobbin's zoo at the Filtration plant, was killed by electrocution during Thursday's violent storm. The high wind wreaked havoc at the Filtration plant, one of Peterborough's most carefully kept showplaces.

The wind, which reached cyclone proportions at the plant, struck down at least a dozen trees, two of them huge elms, and piled branches from dozens of others as high as twenty feet about the beautiful lawn. It destroyed a fence that keeps captive the zoo's pet deer.

Most alarming damage caused was when the wind ripped down a live wire carrying power to the filter plant, interrupting service for a considerable length of time. The wire fell on the steel-wired cage, floor of which is of cement. Since all was wet the entire cage became electrically charged and the bear died instantly.

Water supply to the city was not interrupted by the damage. Workmen immediately switched to the reservoir, holding three million gallons of water, for just such emergencies, and the supply continued as usual. At nine o'clock this morning power, usually shut off at nine in the evening to open at seven a.m., was back on again. Close to two dozen workmen were busy moving the wreckage from the lawns, and Ross Dobbin, Utilities manager, said all would be cleared away by evening. None of the other pets at the zoo appeared to suffer ill effects from the storm, he said. The deer was locked up elsewhere when falling trees wrecked the fence about his home.

The entire site of the plant appeared to have been through a cyclone, with trees snapped off as high as eight and ten feet from the ground. One workman said the wind was so strong he could not stand upright in it, that it had lifted a chair from his verandah and carried it across the road.

MONTREAL, July 29—(CP).—If it had not been for her name, a young woman who appeared in Recorders Court yesterday on a charge of loitering might not have received a suspended sentence.

When Recorded Leonce Plante asked her name, she looked him straight in the eye and said "Snow White," paused while a titter spread through the courtroom and added her family name, "Black."

Quick Tweed Rescue Saves Girl's Life

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, July 29.—A near drowning occurred at the dam opposite the Tweed milling plant in the Moira River, when Miss Shepherd, a young woman visiting at Walter Leal's was hauled to safety by Mr. Leal's young daughter. The two girls were swimming in that stretch of water between the dam and the bridge when the Shepherd girl became weak and shouted for help. Her companion went to her rescue and succeeded in pulling the young lady over to the dam. After a short rest, she was able to proceed to the Leal home.

Lyn Trudeau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Trudeau, jumped in with his clothing on, rendering some assistance, while Howard Way, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Way, also helped to get the Shepherd girl to shore It was not necessary to call a physician. The presence of mind and courage of the Leal youngster under the circumstances is commendable.

Missing from the home of his aunt, Mrs. Della Bray, Kyle House Apartments, Belleville, for several days, Lorne Rowe, seventeen-year-old Toronto youth, was the object of a wide search by provincial and county police. The young lad, who had been spending his vacation in Belleville, had left that city, dressed in a soldier's uniform.

Chief Clare Hayes was notified and he noticed a young man answering to the description on Tweed streets. He was taken in for questioning and admitted he was the missing one. Chief Hayes took him back to Belleville from which place he was taken to his home in Toronto.

Board To Place Stop Signs At Monaghan Road

The Board of Works last night fell in with North Monaghan's plan of making Monaghan Road a through street from Frank Street at Byersville to Cameron Street, north of Crawford's Grove.

The Township pointed out that city could co-operate by agreeing to put up stop signs at the Chamberlain, Douglas, and Romaine Streets corners. North Monaghan will erect the signs on its own streets, providing the Department of Highways approves the township by-law to make the long section of Monaghan Road a through street. The motion to put up the signs on the east side of Monaghan Road within the city was moved by Alderman Glover, and seconded by Alderman Juby.

Eugene Hurtubise asked permission to install two gasoline pumps at the garage he owns at the corner of Stewart and Townsend Streets. He has a prospective tenant for the property which has been vacant for several years. The Board decided to have City Engineer Parsons bring in a report on the request for Tuesday night's meeting of the Council before giving the assent which members personally expressed last night.

Mayor Hamilton was authorized to designate delegates to attend the Ontario Municipal Association's meeting at the end of August. City Assessor Henry is likely to go, and also E. A. Outram, assistant city clerk.

Fred J. McArthur, Cobourg undertaker, sent a bill for $45 expenses connected with the burial of M. J. Heffernan, whose body was found drowned in Rice Lake some months ago. The Board decided to pay Mr. McArthur $30, the amount provided for by the Hospitals Act. It was stated that Toronto's allowance for similar expenses is $15 and Ottawa $12.

Sidewalk on Highway.

Mayor Hamilton reported that the Department of Highways agreed to rebuild 932 feet of concrete sidewalk on the north side of Lansdowne Street, the city to do the work and the Department pay for it. The sidewalk was torn up last year when the grade of the road was lowered for the paving of the highway. Mayor Hamilton said he expected to meet the divisional engineer in the near future to arrange for the undertaking of the work.

Improvement of the drain that flows south-easterly from the C.P.R. crossing at Romaine Street and Monaghan Road to the corner of Park and Lansdowne Streets is estimated to cost more than $6,000. Three companies whose properties are traversed by the drain are the De Laval, Peterborough Lumber, and Johnson Outboard Motors. The proposal has first to be submitted to the companies for their assent.

Plans Regulation Beverage Rooms

Appointment of an inspector to regulate beverage rooms was suggested by Alderman Gordon at last night's committee meetings, and his resolution, seconded by Alderman Stocker, requested the Ontario Government to make an appointment solely for the city. Ald. Gordon said that there is a district inspector whose duties mainly were to inspect hotel buildings and properties and see that they conformed with the regulations.

"What we need is a man who will do the work of the inspectors of some years ago, go around the beverage rooms and see that there is no intoxication and that men who are interdicted are not there, and see that everything is the way it should be," Alderman Gordon said. "At present there is no officer who deals with people who may be drinking too much, and on Saturday nights the local police are too busy."

The resolution will be sent to A. L. Elliott, M.L.A.

Damage Not Lasting By Maple Worms

TORONTO, July 29 (C.P.).—The green army of worms destroying foliage on all hardwood trees in their path in Peterboro' and Orangeville districts frequently devastates Canadian woods but the damage they cause is not lasting, the Ontario Forestry Department said to-day. The time to fight the pests is in the spring, and once the army of worms is on the march there is little to be done to stop its progress or depredations.

Called usually "the green maple worm," but known also as "saddled prominent heterocampa guttivitta-walk" to forestry experts, the pest methodically strip trees of every leaf as they advance. The worms were reported to-day to have stripped 20 acres on the farm of Edwin Moore, Peterborough, and to have spread to hardwood stands of his neighbors—an area of 200 acres or more.

"They can make a wood lot look pretty sick for a while, but if the trees are vigorous and healthy they should grow new leaves before fall," the Forestry Department said. "We have a great number of reports of damage from all over the country every year at this time, but nothing much seems to be done or can be done about it."

FICTION AND FEATURES

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, is in love with Dr. Julian Page, a serious-minded young physician who declares he will not permit himself to fall in love with Noel because of the contrasting worlds in which they live. Determined to show Julian she has stamina, Noel gives up a long trip with her aunt, turns over her income of $100,000 to her uncle who is in financial difficulties, buys her first outfit of inexpensive clothes and tells Julian she is going to find a job.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 3

After she has paid off the servants at Stone Gate and attended to other bills, Noel has a little over a hundred dollars in her billfold. She smiled to thing that it was almost the same amount her grandfather had had when he sailed to the United States to lay the foundation for the Shayne fortune.

Frankie, Noel's aunt, was a pretty frivolous woman of middle-age, with touched-up hair and a face from which all the lines had been carefully erased by skillful beauty technicians.

Just now she was in the hands of her maid, lying back among the cushions of the chaise longue, having a pedicure. Why a pedicure, Noel did not know. Perhaps merely to kill time. But Noel loved her aunt devotedly in spite of all her little affectations.

"Come in, darling," Frankie greeted her in her chirrupy voice. Then when she saw Noel wearing the cheap tweed suit and linen blouse, she gave a little scream. "What is it, darling? A masquerade?"

Noel lighted a cigaret and glanced at the maid. Frankie dismissed her at once and turned again to Noel, her eyes avid with curiosity. "Is is some kind of a game?"

Noel hesitated. She hadn't quite decided how to break the news to Frankie, who was quite capable of protesting strenuously whenever she disapproved of anything Noel proposed to do. But in spite of her little flutery ways, Frankie did have an understandig nature.

So Noel decided to take the plunge. "If you had fallen in love with a man," she began, "and he practically told you that you were a parasite and a useless cumberer of the earth, what would you do?"

Frankie sat up on the chaise longue, her faded blue eyes wide. "Darling, did someone actuallly dare—?" She stopped and drew her lips together in a straight line. "Well, I wouldn't let him get away with it. I'd make him take it back word for word."

"That's exactly what I'm going to do," Noel told her. "I'm going to stay right here, get a job and show him that I can make my own living as well as he can make his."

Frankie clasped her fragile hands. "But, darling, it all sounds very romantic and thrilling, and I always did think you had some of your grandfather's stubborness and spirit. But what on earth would I do at Aix-les-Bains without you. It would just be too tiresome for words," she finished plaintively.

You can play five-suit bridge," Noel reminded.

Frankie brightened at that. She was passionately devoted to bridge. "Is is that too, too devastating young doctor, Julian Paige?" Frankie asked after a minute's thought.

Noel crushed out her cigaret and sank into a chair. "Yes, it is I suppose I might as well admit the truth."

"He's precious," Frankie said, with as mile. "And he's so different from all the other kind of men you have known. He has strength and—there's something really fine about him, I think," she stopped for a moment then added, "but, really, darling, he hadn't any right in the world to say things like that to you. It sounds a bit priggish, I'm afraid."

Noel shook her head. "No, he's not like that at all. He's just—" but her voice failed her. She couldn't tell anybody, not even Frankie, just how she felt about Julian Paige.

"Anyway," Frankie went on more complacently, "you'll soon show him he was all wrong, won't you?" Then she added, a note of anxiety coming back to her voice, "You won't be getting into any trouble, if I leave you here, will you, Noel?"

"Of course I won't," Noel answered blithely. "I'm going to have the time of my life."

"At least you won't be bored," Frankie said, her voice again plaintive. "If you only knew how dreadfully hard it is to keep from being bored these days, even at Monte Carlo."

"You'll meet your friends. You'll have a nice time," Noel tried to reassure her.

At last Frankie's qualms were set at rest A few hours later, she and Noel bade each other an affectionate goodby. It was, of course, only a lark, Frankie told herself confidently. Noel has been restless of late. Perhaps it was time she fell seriously in love. And it wouldn't take long for her to win the man she wanted, for it was Frankie's opinion that there wasn't alive in the world a man who could remain indifferent to Noel's rose and golden beauty and her gay spirits. So she departed happily for California.

It was 10 o'clock that night before Noel was ready to start on the first lap of her adventure. Stone Gate was closed, the servants gone.

Noel took a taxi to the dingy rooming house on Court street where she had engaged a room under the name of Noel Doran. She gave the driver a dollar tip, then suddenly realized that since she was now a working girl, and entirely dependent on what she earned for her living, she had no right to be using taxicabs, much less tipping the driver dollar bills!

But she wouldn't forget again. She was beginning to learn already.

Once in her room, she hardly looked around the dingy quarters, but tumbled into the hard, rather lumpy bed, and soon fell asleep.

The next morning when she awakened and her eyes fell upon the discolored wall paper, the rusty grate, and the cheap wooden furniture, she opened her eyes wide, startled.

Then remembrance came back. She brushed back her curls and smiled, fighting back a feeling of homesickness for her dainty sun-lit room at Stone Gate with the wide casement windows, the thick soft rugs, the taffeta-draped dressing table with its silver and gold appointments, the cool, green tiled bath with its sunken tub—

Then she remembered how bored and restless she had become with the things that money could buy. Today was the beginning of a new lfie. She was going to see it through. She had purposely arranged things so that even if she weakened and wanted to give up the idea, she couldn't do it. She would stick it out, whether or no.

She put on the tweed suit and went out to get breakfast, a little past eight, delighted that she had awakened so early. Out in the crisp air, her enthusiasm returned with a bound, as she walked briskly along in the inexpensive oxfords, a little balck velvet "beanie" on the back of her head.

She was wondering if she would see Julian today or tonight and laughed a little to hreself at what he would say if he should see her new home.

She found a little cafe similar to the De Luxe, though not as inviting, and ate a good breakfast, surprised to find that bacon and scrambled eggs with toast and coffee could taste so good.

Then she bought a morning paper, walked over to the small, deserted Front street park on the river, and sat down on a bench to study the ads. She did not notice that a man who had been standing near the register in the safe, when she had taken a bill out of her well-filled billfold to get changed and pay for her breakfast, had unobtrusively followed her.

She was soon engrossed in the ads. There was a long list under Female Help Wanted, but nothing that fitted her peculiar abilities. In fact, she was at sea as to just the kind of work she could do, but thoroughly confident that there would be a place for her somewhere.

She found an ad—for a governess who must be able to teach French and music, which she thought might do. Luckily her "finishing school French" wasn't too bad. She tore out the ad, thinking happily that if she did see Julian tonight, she'd probably be able to tell him that she had already found a place she could fill.

When she picked up her bag, which she had left on the beach beside her, she found the clasp unfastened. Panic stricken she looked inside. The billfold was gone. Someone had cleverly removed it from her bag while she had been sitting there half covered with newspapers. She had a little less than $4 in her change purse.

Every Mother and Father Should See to It That Johnny and Mary Are Brought Up to Be a Good Husband and Wife When They Marry

MAN'S inhumanity to man, and especially woman's inhumanity to woman, that makes countless thousands mourn, as the poet says, is never so vividly illustrated as it is in the fact that mothers make no specific effort to teach their children how to be good husbands and wives.

The happiness of the world is virtually in the hands of mothers, since the misery occasioned by discordant marriages far outweighs all other human griefs, and it would be easy for women to dam this source of sorrow at its foundation were they so minded. Mothers could abolish unhappy marriages, stop divorce and assure every boy that he would get a good wife and every girl that she would secure the husband of her dreams.

And, considering that every mother desires above everything else the welfare of her children, it is strange that there is not some sort of concerted effort among them to improve the quality of husbands and wives so that when their own boys and girls choose their mates they will not be so likely to get curses instead of blessings. Apparently, however, there is no reciprocity among mothers so far as their children go, and so we have the spectacle of women rearing the kind of husbands and wives for some other woman's children that they pray God on their knees that their own children will escape.

This attitude of mothers is more inexplicable because they all expect and desire their children to marry. They want these marriages to turn out successfully. No mother wants to see her children go through the agony and bitterness and scandal of divorce, yet in their whole teachings of their children they ignore the subject of marriage as completely as if they were no more likely to go to the altar than they were to go to the North Pole.

Every married woman knows the secret of what makes a happy marriage, and she knows that it is just as much a matter of manners as of morals; that it is the little things—the little politenesses, the little courtesies, the little justices, the little liberalities, the words of thanks and appreciaion—that keep a marriage a going concern that pays dividends on all it costs. She also knows that the little amenities of matrimony do not come by nature, as Dogberry thought a knowledge of how to read and write did. They have to be taught or else learned in the hard school of experience.

Now, every woman knows exactly the kind of a husband she hopes her daughter will be lucky enough to get. She wants him to be kind, tender, affectionate, generous and domestic. B[illegible] does she impress it upon her own son that he must treat [illegible] wife the way she wants Mary's husband to treat her? Not at all.

She doesn't tell him that he must not marry until he is ready to settle down and be a fireside companion; that he hasn't any right to marry a girl and dump her down in a house to spend her evenings alone. She doesn't tell him that a man is a contemptible chiseler who doesn't give his wife an allowance and who holds out on her the money she earns a dozen times over. She doesn't tell him that it is just as much a husband's duty to feed his wife's soul as it is her body, and that he must never stop making love to her and telling her how wonderful she is. She doesn't tell him that it is just as much a husband's place to help make a happy home as it is the wife's; that he must not dump all of his grouchiness on the family hearthstone and say things to his wife that he wouldn't dare say to the stenographer or the cook.

No, Mother does all she can to unfit her son for being a good husband by spoiling him to death, waiting on him hand and foot and catering to all of his little whims. Then she hands him over to some poor unfortunate girl who has to spend the remainder of her life putting up with his faults.

Nor does Mother take any more trouble to provide the neighbor's son with a good wife than her neighbor did to rear a good husband for her daughter. She knows to the last hair on her head the kind of a girl she wants John to marry—a sweet, unselfish young woman who is thrifty, a good manager and who will know how to make her husband comfortable and take care of his health and be a real helpmeet to him.

But does she try to fit Mary to be that sort of a wife? No indeed. Why, she doesn't even teach Mary how to cook, nor how to sew, nor how to market, and the first thing Mary does is to ruin her husband's stomach by setting him down to meals that would kill as ostrich and to throw half of his salary into the garbage can because she does not know how to buy food.

Ever since Mary was born Mother has spoiled her, sacrificed for her and made her feel that no one else had any rights where she was concerned. Then she wraps this little bundle of egotism and self-centeredness and ignorance of everything practical up in white satin and dumps it on to some unfortunate man for a wife.

That is why there is so much marital unhappiness and so many divorces. Mothers don't fit their children for marriage. They don't try to make them the kind of husbands and wives they want their own daughters and sons to marry.

Keep Summer Clothes Spick and Span

Easy Ways to Remove Stains

Clever, Connie! Giving first aid to her new white skirt, gravely damaged in a skirmish with a blackberry bush.

No wonder her summer washdresses always look so smart. From a fast-colored cotton or linen, she removes old fruit stains—except peach—by spreading the garment over a pan and pouring boiling water through from a height. To a stubborn stain on uncolored cotton or linen, she sometimes applies a little Javelle water with a medicine dropper.

Peach stains she dampens with glycerin, then washes in clear lukewarm water. She avoids soap, which sets fruit stains.

The chewing gum on Junior's shirt, she softens with egg white before washing. She covers chocolate stains thickly with borax and washes in cold water.

On This Date

JULY 29

Eighty years ago today (on July 29, 1588) the Macdonald-Cartier ministry of the province of Canada resigned as a consequence of defeat in the assembly upon the question of a permanent capital. The ministry had been in office from Nov. 26, 1857, and had been sustained at elections during the winter, in a peculiar manner. Lower Canada sent a big majority in favor of the ministry, but Upper Canada elected a majority of opponents. G. E. Cartier became the master of the situation. He had practically wiped out the Rouges in Lower Canada. He had been elected in Vercheres, but defeated in Montreal, which returned John Rose and Thomas D'Arcy McGee, the latter thus winning his first election.

The defeat was a curious incident. Although Cartier had a majority from Lower Canada, many of these deserted the ministry when it decided to make Ottawa the capital. They wanted either Montreal or Quebec, and did not favor Ottawa, taking the view (which turned out to be correct) that if the capital were placed on the border line between the two provinces it would, in time, become a citadel for the French element.

The resolution was moved by George Brown, the Liberal leader (on all other issues the detested of the French), and was carried by 64 to 50. Thereupon John A. Macdonald tendered his resignation and Mr. Brown as leader of the opposition, was called upon to form a ministry. This he did, but no sooner had he submitted his cabinet to the assembly than it was defeated. Thereupon Mr. Brown asked Sir Edmund Head for a dissolution which his excellency refused. Mr. Brown resigned; and G. E. Cartier, the rebel of 1837, became premier of the province of Canada, in what was known as the "double shuffle cabinet," because, with two exceptions, the ministry was composed of the Macdonald ministry assigned to portfolios different from those they had held before.

This was done to avoid the necessity of the ministers having to go back to their electors for endorsation. It was within the law, but it was condemned by the Reformers at the time as a trick and so admitted by Cartier and John A. themselves later on. But it succeeded, Cartier being sustained by the assembly, 52-23. And Cartier was the head of the government until May 23, 1862, when he was defated 61-54. During that period Macdonald tendered his resignation (in 1862) over a financial issue, but he withdrew it, and both Cartier and Macdonald went down to defeat together to become members of a ministry which was headed by Sir E. P. Tache, and which, with the aid of George Brown, brought about Confederation.

Australia is expected to boost income and company taxes.

BE READY TO CHANGE

DON'T EVER be too stuck on a good plan. New evidence may reveal the fact that your plan has slight chance for success. If you see that running your own suit is hopeless, you may make out better by keeping the enemy from running his suit. In brief, be ever ready to change your plan if that becomes advisable.

When South opened the bidding here with 1-No Trump, North responded with 2-No Trump and South went to 3-No Trump.

The club 4 was West's lead against this contract. Dummy played the 2 and East the K. South allowed this to hold and the J was returned, followed by the 5 to South's A. The diamonds A and K were cashed and a diamond trick given up. East then played the spade A for the fourth trick, hoping to get some encouraging signal from West. When this did not occur, he switched to a heart and South took the remainder of the tricks.

When East returned the club J, after winning the first trick, West could have set the contract by overtaking the J with the Q and switching to the heart J. With no entry for his club suit when set up, it was far better to try for tricks in some other direction.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

Suddenly Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned-about names, ran up to the aquarium which stood by the sunny window in the playroom and called in to Alphonse, the goldfish: "Alphonse—they're coming for you! They're going to take you to the pond at last for a long, long swim!"

"Who's coming?" Alphonse cried from inside the aquarium. He swam up and down excitedly, and little bubbles came out of his mouth as he spoke.

Then the two children came up.

"The children are coming."

"They're really going to take me to the pond? Oh, I can't believe it! Hooray!" he shouted, "Hooray!" And two big bubbles chased each other up to the top of the water, where they burst with the sound of two hoorays.

The next moment the two children came up. One of them had a tin bucket and the other one had a little cloth net. Frank put his net in the water while Dinah stood ready with the bucket, which was half full of water.

Net Catches Him.

"Catch him quickly," Dinah said.

"You don't have to catch me," Alphonse said. He didn't like the net much. "I'll jump right into the bucket. Here I come!" He darted round and round the net, trying to flip himself out of the water. Once he couldn't manage to get out of the net's way. And all at once he found himself caught in it. The next instant he was dropped gently into the bucket. Then he was carried outside.

For a moment, as he was being carried, he felt frightened. But then he felt the bucket being overturned, and he fell into a beautiful little pool. You see, it wasn't the pond the children were taking him to, but the new little goldfish pool they had just built for him to swim in.

And oh! how he swam, far—far and deep—deep. And he never hit his head against thesides and he was the happiest goldfish in the world.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, July 30.

This may be a day in which intrigue, adventure, romance and private affairs are paramount, according to the lunar and mutual aspects. There may be much stirring in the sentimental and emotional life, with unconventional or subtle angles difficult to interpret. But travel and change are shown. Minor disputes are forecast, but in a large way the "love life" is the predominant interest and activity.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year in which the intimate, private, social, domestic or affectionate angles seem to be all that matter. There are indications of change the excitement in this connection, with romance, intrigue and peculiarly irregular or subtle situations to be encountered.

A child born on this day may be gracious, sympathetic, affectionate, and sentimental, probably mystically inclined with a fondness for poetry, music and art. It may attract much love and romantic adventure into its life.

Showers For August Bride-elect

A shower complimenting Miss Hilda Phillips was given Tuesday by Mrs. G. Collis, Miss Ada Jenkinson and Miss H. Ward at the home of Mrs. Collis, Dublin street, with about thirty guests present.

We Noticed

....That a strawberry sport frock of heavy linen was set off by a wine tailored hat of the same material, and worn with wine shoes.

✧ ✧ ✧

....That a white grosgrain jacket looked efective when worn over a black sheer dress, and an open-crowned hat with a wide, lacy brim.

✧ ✧ ✧

....That the new double-breasted jackets in washable corduroy, and developed in blazer stripes, would be excellent for sports wear, particularly for the younger set.

✧ ✧ ✧

....That of-the-face hats continue to be popular, despite the brightness of the sun. You see, dark glasses are fashionable, so why wear a shady hat when you can look twice as smart with a halo hat and glasses?

The bride-elect, who is being married the early part of August, was presented with many lovely gifts, which had been piled into a basket decorated with pink crepe paper.

On Thursday evening Miss Phillips was again honored when about 15 of her girl friends, with Miss Daisy Inch of Aylmer street as hostess, gathered to shower her with a miscellaneous assortment of gifts daintily wrapped in pink and white.

Trousseau Tea Is Charming Event

In honor of her daughter, Miss Grace McCannan, whose marriage takes place on Saturday, Mrs. H. J. McCannan of 612 Walkerfield avenue entertained at a charmingly arranged trousseau tea on Wednesday afternoon and evening.

The hostess was gowned in black sheer and lace, with shoulder corsage of flame gladioli, and the bride-elect wore a frock of blue with a delicate floral pattern traced in white, and a tiny matching bolero. Receiving with the hostess and her daughter was Mrs. W. R. Wedlock, mother of the groom-elect, wearing green crepe with flower corsage.

The rooms were bright with gladioli in tall vases, and baskets of sweet peas and baby's breath. The tea table was lace-covered, and centered with a silver basket of sweet peas and baby's breath. Four lighted pink tapers brought out the gleam of the lovely silver tea services which were placed at eatch end of the table, and presided over by Mrs. F. Fanning, great-aunt of the bride-elect, wearing black sheer with touches of white, matching hat and flower corsage, Mrs. (Dr.) M. McCullough in figured pastel sheer with orchid hat, and Mrs. F. C. Gray, who wore beige lace and shoulder corsage of gladioli.

Tea assistants were Mrs. Thos. Williams, Mrs. John Sinclair and Mrs. J. H. Daynes of Toronto, sister of the bride-elect. Guests were directed to the tea room by Mrs. A. Wedlock and Miss Florence Wedlock.

The trousseau and wedding gifts were displayed by Miss Betty O'Brien, Miss Muriel Benson, Mrs. W. Brady and Miss Margaret Curtis.

Transform Worn Furniture With Slip-Covers

"You can't make a silk purse..." but it's quite astonishing what a transformation you can effect in the appearance of your most recalcitrant pieces of upholstered furniture by means of slip-covers.

They assist large, bulgy sofas to regain their figures, fill out the scrawny angularities of those spindly little settees, modestly conceal unattractive feet and legs, induce odd pieces to match, and even introduce comfort where formerly no comfort was.

The principles which should guide the intelligent use of the slip-cover are remarkably similar to those which dictate the choice of patterns and models for a woman's clothes.

Rough materials with a small simple design make chairs and sofas look smaller, shiny plain satins and silks have the reverse effect. Vertical stripes are slimming, while horizontal stripes and spots encourage any tendency to middle-age spread.

These different influences can be combined on the same piece of furniture to correct faults in its shape.

Take for instance, the case of a narrow armchair with a high back. Use a striped material horizontally across the back and seat, and vertically on the arms and from the seat to the floor, and you will find the chair looks wider and that the back seems to be in better proportion to the rest.

Assorted Sizes

Suppose that the difficulty is to combine an assortment of different shapes and sizes of chairs in the same room. Choose a patterned material for the large pieces which allows for their peculiarities—a striped pattern if you have to correct their design, or a floral pattern if their proportions are a bit meagre—and then cover the small chairs in a ploin fabric of the same color as the base of the patern material.

Odd chairs can also be made to look like a pair simply by dressing them the same way.

The use of quilted chintz is an ingenius expedient for lending an air of comfortable embonpoint to chairs and sofas made in the days before large added arms came into general use. The initial cost of this type of cover is rather high, but chintz last longer if it is quilted.

Naturally, it is necessary to dry-clean a quilted vore.

Another similar device is the ruched seam which is easily and effectively employed around the top of each arm, where it gives both a look and feeling of greater sympathy with the elbows.

Frilled Valance

Of all the details of a slip-cover, however, it is the valance which can be most widely varied in order to achieve the particular effect desired. Use a deep, loose, floppy valance to a cover of flowered chintz in some large design of roses or peonies, and the most staid Victorian armchair wil be transformed into a comfortable, informal piece of furniture.

By contrast, a heat row of short uncut tassels on a straight fitted valance gives a distinct air of propriety, particularly if the chair is covered in damask of a rather conventional pattern.

Elegance and delicacy suitable for a lady's bedroom, for instance, is obtainable by making a shallow valance of taffeta, frilled, and edged and seamed without a hem to show the frayed edge of the material.

The disappearance of the old name "loose-cover" was most opportune, for one essential point about the modern slip-cover is that it should be a good fit. Only in the valance is looseness permissible, and then only with a purpose. The methods used for fitting covers, include buttons, snaps and zip-fasteners.

The last-named sounds attractively trouble-saving, but if you decide on zippers make certain that your covers are shrunk or else there will be trouble after their first clean.

Costume Jewelry Important For Fall

Since milady will be wearing glamor black for evening and daytime wear during the fall and winter, according to stylists, the importance of brilliant and novel costume jewelry again will come into the limelight.

High necklines, with tucks, shirrings and pleats, will be very good, but fashion experts claim the ever popular "black" must be worn this season with a dash of color. That brings us back to the problem of trimmings.

For those who dislike to trim the black dress—useful for afternoon engagements—with a collar or sash of color, costume jewelry will be a real boon.

Little pastel flower clips and bracelets are always excellent, as are the square and round wooden bead necklaces, which, by the way, are very colorful. Novel clips are being worn on one side only of the necklines. A new idea is to have two instead of one. These may be of brilliants or some brightly-hued flower design.

Many new hats will be trimmed with feathers, and, in general, will be much smaller than those of the spring and summer.

Frenshen Up Locks To Lift Your Spirits

The next time you feel pretty depressed—whether for a good reason or no reason at all—try going to a beauty shop for an hour or two or giving yourself a home manicure or a facial. More often than not, improving your appearance will lift your spirits out of the doldrums.

American alarm clocks will be introduced into Cairo, Egypt.

If You Are Underweight, Under 30, It Is Time to Put On Some Flesh

If you are underweight and under 30, then try to put some extra flesh on your bones. You will not only feel loads better and have energy enough to keep up with the gang, but you will be doing yourself a big favor from the standpoint of health.

A well-nourished body is one of the best protections that you can have against colds, contagious diseases and nervousness. Exercise, if done in the open air and not too vigorously, will be beneficial because it improves your general circulation, stimulates the activity of the digestive organs and thereby assists assimilation of your food intake.

Typical Diet.

We are giving a typical diet for you if you happen to be in the thin class. Nowadays it's smart to be well rounded so why not give it a try?

Every morning take a medium size glass of fresh orange or grapefruit juice. Sit down and sip it slowly, then about half an hour later have this real breakfast:

One medium helping of fresh fruit. Substantial cereal like oatmeal, whole wheat cereal, with brown sugar, cream and sliced bananas. Toast or muffins with plenty of butter. Coffee or tea with cream and sugar, cocoa, or a glass of milk.

At 11 o'clock have a tall glass of orange juice.

Luncheon consists of the following: Cup of creamed soup (tomato, pea, asparagus, mushroom, etc.). Moderate serving of rice, macaroni, baked potato with plenty of butter of whole wheat toast or muffins. A cheese dish, omelet or creamed meat. Jellied vegetable or fruit salad with dressing. Custard, or bread, chocolate or other pudding. Glass of milk.

At four o'clock in the afternoon have another glass of orange juice.

Your typical dinner might include: Fresh fruit cup, or half grapefruit. Cup of creamed soup. Broiled, baked or roasted meat. Two fresh vegetables (peas, beans, potatoes) with plenty of butter. Custard, pudding, ice cream, fresh or stewed fruit with cream. Glass of milk or cup of coffee with sugar and cream.

Rest before you have your evening meal. Lie down for half an hour if possible. Don't ever eat when you are excited or nervously upset. If you have time take a nap in the afternoon or at least relax with a book. And always try to get from eight to nine hours' sleep.

Follow this routine if you want to have those alluring feminine curves.

Lilies Blossom As Streets Bared

ORILLIA, Ont., July 29—(CP).—Tribute to a long-dead Indian girl, the Toronto Telegram correspondent finds, an old and abandoned Indian burying-ground on Chief Island, Lake Couchiching, grows more beautiful as the years pass.

Many long years ago the daughter of an Ojibway chief, Little Laughing Fawn, traded wild berries and bark baskets to an early Orillia settler for a few precious roots of the lily of the valley. She planted the flower beside her mother's grave. It flourished. Laughing Fawn died, drowned in a thunderstorm on the lake which upset her canoe. She was buried beside her mother, under a gravestone that has long crumbled into dust.

The tribe dwindled, wearied of transporting its dead, by boat, to the island graveyard and established a new one on the mainland, closer to the reserve. The island burying ground was abandoned to the forest. Great trees grew up in it, heaving and cracking tombstones, thrusting long roots through the graves. Caterpillars ravaged the island, stripping the trees. Poison ivy and sumach choked out the grass. Everywhere were death and desolation—except in the old graveyard.

There the few roots planted by Laughing Fawn had grown to tens of thousands. The air was filled with a heady perfume. On all sides of the long-forgotten tomb was a living carpet of pale, white flowers and crisp green leaves. Here and there, as though for accent, nodded a stately rose-red trillium.

Pink Candles Decorate Cake.

A number of playmates were entertained recently by little Marlene Constable of Dunlop street, when she celebrated her third birthday at a jolly birthday party.

The table was set for ten, decorations were carried out in pink and white, and a two-layer cake iced in pink and white, had three pink candles in the centre.

Among the small guests were her two small sisters, Norma and Doreen Clark, Betty Green, Auburn street; Marilyn Lewington, Auburn street; Linda Dundas, Water street; June Murphy and Muriel Hills, Auburn street; Joan McPhate of South Porcupine; and Muriel Smith of Niagara Falls.

Waking And Sleeping Minds Never Separated

How is it that so many people can wake themselves up as punctually as an alarm clock? And why do some people sleep fitfully if they have to get up earlier than usual, or if they know they've got something important to do?

Answer is that the part of the mind you use when you're awake and the part which takes charge when you're asleep are never completely separated.

You fall asleep with the idea that at all costs you mustn't be late next day. This produces anxiety; and anxiety prevents the complete relaxation you need for deep sleep. And the idea you've taken to sleep with you acts like an alarm-clock.

Sometimes it is a pity it does. Because the quality of sleep is never so good if there is an undercurrent of conscious anxiety.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Be not diverted from your duty by any idle reflections the silly world may make upon you, for their censures are not in your power, and consequently should not be any part of your concern."—Epictetus.

Dear Friends:

How many heart-burnings we get from taking to much notice of what people might say of us. We cannot do this, we must not go somewhere, else some silly fool will talk. The thing we want to do might be all innocent, the place we want to go to might be well-deserved, but we tie ourselves into a knot, we deny ourselves many pleasures because we let what "they" might say concern us.

After all, you should be a pretty good judge of your own actions, your own desires. It is, to, your own life, and although you cannot live it regardless of all others, yet you can raise a wall and say "thus far, and no farther can anyone interfere in my way of life."

Supposing you shut yourself inside a box, so that you did not infringe in any way on anyone else, so that, to, they could not see how you lived inside that box?

Remember, there would always be those who would come peeking to see what you were doing in there. There would be others who would condemn you for being inside a nice cosy box, while they were out in the wind and the cold or the heat.

There would be some who blamed you for not doing things for others, for not joining societies, for even minding your own business. A certain lot would condemn you for thinking you were better than the common herd by shutting yourself off like this.

And there would be those who would try to overturn the box, or set fire to it, or poke holes in it, anything and everything to get you to be one with them. So, shutting yourself away is not the answer.

If everyone gave up because the world did not approve of them, what a sorry world it would be. We like to be approved, we like the rest of the world to like us, but if you try to please everybody, you will land in the ditch.

I find most of the time, that when I please myself, I please most everyone else. I don't mean by that to be utterly selfish, but going around asking this one or that what you should do, is ridiculous and gets you nowhere, for you cannot do what they all tell you.

Have a code of honor and live up to that, letting no comments divert you or turn you aside from your purpose. One thing I am always thankful to my parents for, and that is the high standard they made us live up to.

We thought them too strait-laced many times, we wanted to kick over the traces, but we were held to this code in spite of our struggles, and glad are we to-day. We were taught to make up our own minds, and then to take what came with poise and equanimity.

You don't get self-centered when you have such a code, you get self-reliant, and that's something. I remember when I set out on my first long voyage absolutely alone, did not know another soul on board, one of our friends asked my Dad if he were not afraid to let me go so far alone.

And he told them he was not afraid. He had given me the groundwork, and now the living of it was up to me, so I never let him down. Don't let yourself down either, don't always have your ear cocked to hear what others are saying about you.

They can talk of me as they like, as long as I don't hear it, and if I do, I tell them to mind their business and I will mind mine. J. Brierly tells us: "The world is full of hope for the one who has hopes for himself."

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

Do You Know?

That a drop of peppermint flavoring added to chocolate or pineapple ice cream will give homemade ice cream a delicious new flavor?

Fresh lime and water made into a paste and smeared over iron gates, or the stove at the cottage, will prevent rust for an indefinite period?

✧ ✧ ✧

Fabrics of a crepy, crinkled or pebbled weave look best when ironed nearly dry?

If you have a casserole that has started to leak, a thickish mixture of flour and water cooked in the casserole on the back of the stove all day will work its way into the cracks and fill them up, stopping the leak?

Mussolini Hits Back At Pope Hotly Denying Fascism Has Imitated Anyone

Sharp Attack Arouses Uneasiness As Roman Catholics Fear Party Split With Church

FORLI, July 30 (AP).—Premier Mussolini replied personally today to Pope Pius' assertion that the new Fascist race policy was adopted in imitation of Nazi Germany.

Addressing a group of Fascist party officials in camp at Forli, Mussolini asserted, "You know and everyone knows that also on the question of race we will shoot straight.

"To say that Fascism has imitated anyone or anything is simply absurd."

Mussolini's remarks were the sharpest he has used in years toward the Vatican and caused a new uneasiness among Roman Catholics over whether the present trend of Fascism was heading toward a break with the Church.

Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper, yesterday quoted the Pope in discussing the race doctrine as asking, "Why in the world Italy unfortunately felt the need to imitate Germany."

The Pope was addressing missionary-students of 37 nationalities who visited him Thursday at his summer residence, Castel Gandolfo. Mussolini, who left Rome yesterday for his summer place at Rocca Della Caminate, arose early to make his reply.

The two sentences from his talk referring to imitation of Nazi Germany were distributed by Stefani, official Italian news agency. No further quotes were made available.

Refers To Jewish Question.

The Pope in his address referred to the new Fascist race doctrine which holds that Jews "do not belong to the Italian race," but did not mention Jews by name.

Referring to the universality of the Catholic faith, he said: "Separatism, no; we do not want to separate anything in the human family. And racialism and exaggerated nationalism as commonly spoken of mean barriers erected between men and other men, between folk and other folk."

Before speaking to the officials, Il Duce reviewed a parade of Fascist youths at the camp. They performed the Roman step, or Italian version of the goosestep, which is held by many also to have been borrowed from Germany but which Fascists insist really is of ancient Roman origin.

After leaving the camp Mussolini climbed into a tri-motor airplane and piloted himself on a trip along the nearby Adriatic coast.

Bring On LaGuardia

In Rome, Fascist newspaper Il Tevere applied the Fascist race doctrine to Mayor LaGuardia of New York by saying he had no right to belong to "our race."

LaGuardia is partly Italian and partly of Hebrew origin.

Replying to another Rome newspaper, Il Piccolo, which recently characterized LaGuardia as the "popular Italo-American mayor of New York," Il Tevere said:

"Popular La Guardia is without doubt. At the time of sanctions in fact he won large and well merited popularity by delivering a series of infamous speeches against Italy seeking, mongrel that he is, to take advantage of his origin (geographical but not ethnological because he does not belong to our race) to bring pressure on Italians of New York and open an abyss between them and Fascist organizations."

Warship Parade Reveals Where Taxes Go

PORTSMOUTH, Eng., July 30 — (AP) — Fifty-five giant warships went on parade today to prove to patriotic Britons that they're getting a lot of preparedness for their increased taxes.

The Admiralty opened the gates of the three biggest dockyards at Portsmouth, Chatham and Plymouth for a week of large-scale displays of material and manpower.

The idea is to show how British fighting forces are expanding swiftly. It is hoped more recruits will join the service. It is a counterpart of War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha's campaign to advance Great Britain's vast rearmament program by a variety of features—like faster promotions, lower retirement ages, snappier uniforms—designed to attract more men to the colors.

Months have been spent organizing the program and instruct officers and seamen how to pilot sightseers through the floating fortresses without disclosing the navy's wartime secrets.

The "Navy Week" was expected to draw 500,000 visitors and net $100,000 in admissions for naval charities.

New Wardogs On Review.

Many of the newest cruisers, destroyers, aircraft carriers and submarines are on show.

For one shilling (24 cents) a visitor can see everything from the tradition skylarking of "crossing the line" ceremonies held aboard ships crossing the equator to multi-barrelled anti-aircraft guns capable of firing 2,400 rounds a minute.

Motor torpedo boats, of 47 knot speed, the navy's newest type of craft, will demonstrate how they can dart in and out among bigger vessels in a wartime launching of deadly "tin fish."

In full-scale houses, directors of the much-criticized air-raid precautions scheme will show how the public is expected to cope with incendiary bombs and poison gas.

Destroyers will fire torpedoes and drop depth charges like the ones the British anti-piracy patrol used in the Mediterranean to hunt "mystery" submarines attacking shipping.

Seaplanes will roar down in mock raids on cruisers.

During the huge show, too, the public will see how warships can land marines—as they had to do in recent days in Palestine and Jamaica.

Japan has banned the use of leather in balls, mitts and boxing gloves.

Feared Lost

United States destroyers and airplanes of the army and navy, have been ordered to search for Pan-American Airways' 26-ton Hawaiian clipper, which was reported down at sea during its flight from Guam to Manila, P.I. Fifteen persons are aboard the missing clipper, which was last heard from 500 miles out of Guam. The huge flying ship was battling heavy headwinds and had been forced to travel far off her usual route to avoid a severe tropical storm according to the last report heard from her.

Tornado Wrecks 25 Barns In Lindsay Area Alone

60-Year Record Of 4.75 Inches Rain Falls, Flood Costly To Merchants, Mill

LINDSAY, July 30.—Friday was clean-up day in Lindsay and district, following Thursday's double storm visitation. Town workmen were busy cleaning up the thoroughfares of falling trees, limbs and other debris, digging out catch basins which had been clogged with refuse carried down by the torrents of rain. According to the local Dominion meteorologist four and three-quarter inches of rain fell on Thursday. This is said to be the heaviest local rainfall in sixty years—in fact the heaviest ever to fall in this locality.

Thursday morning's storm was the disturbance that caused the greatest damage, of course. In the district south and east of the town the twister was accompanied by a heavy downpour of hail, which caused untold damage. Hundreds of motorists drove out to the country to view the wreckage, and the scene presented baffles description. Corn and other crops were flattened to ground, never to-rise again. Corn fields presented a sorry spectacle, and the loss in this crop alone will be very heavy.

25 Barns Ruined.

It was stated Friday to an Examiner representative that in the area south and east of Lindsay twenty-five barns are damaged badly or wrecked. This, of course, does not include barns that suffered minor damage. In some cases sections of the barn were carried to adjoining fields. One barn in South Ops, which was reinforced to the foundation, was shifted over six inches by the force of the storm. In Emily Township, the barns on the farms of the late S. O'Connell and J. Scully were blown into the old cemetery. In some cases it will be impossible to construct new barns from the wreckage, so the loss facing a number of farmers, counting the damage to crops, is serious.

Thursday evening's downpour wrought considerable destruction in Lindsay. F. W. Bruce's store as well as Flavelle's cold storage were flooded when the water backed up from the sewers. The firms' losses have not as yet been computed. Water backed up into the basement of Horn Bros.' Woollen Mills, damaging goods in the finishing process. They sustained heavy losses. A drive through the outskirts and on over the boundary showed many fields that resembled miniature lakes. In many instances the crops were completely under water.

At a session of the police court Friday a young resident of Ops Township was fined $20 and costs for illegal consumption of liquor. The accused, with a number of other young people, was found in a car at Greenhurst with a supply of gin and soda water. Complaints have been registered with the authorities by cottagers at lake resorts that young people after the dancing ceases remain around these resorts in cars, disturbing the people by their revelry. The proprietors of these resorts are absolved from any blame in the matter, and the police have received instruction to stamp out this practice.

Oshawa Council Votes $200 To End Rackets

OSHAWA, July 30.—(Special.)—Despite bitter opposition by Alderman Findlay Defoe, who declared: "I can't see giving money to a department not giving us service," Oshawa City Council, at a special meeting last night, voted an additional $200 to the Police Department to assist in cleaning up bootlegging and gambling in this city.

In moving additional funds to the Police Department earmarked for special law enforcement, Alderman Anderson admitted it would be used in an effort to secure convictions of illegal sales and gambling. Alderman Haxon queried: "What is the money for—spotters?" Alderman Walker answered that "It would be a special account for information of whatever they need." Mayor McLeese agreed to the motion, stating, "I think they should have the money to clean up these places."

Sole opponent to the motion was Alderman Defoe, who charged the Police Department with "walking around like a pack of dummies." "If you want to make changes in the personnel and get some one more efficient, I'll say go ahead," he declared, "but you want us to give $200 to buy beer to get convictions. It wouldn't hurt them to spend 15 or 20 cents of their own money."

Bencer, Sayer & Davidson of Toronto were appointed to make a special independent audit of all civic departments. Council authorized the purchase of fifteen gallons of a strong insecticide to allow the Board of Works to destroy an epidemic of grasshoppers infesting the city dump. Several thousand gallons of the preparation will be sprayed over the dump under strict supervision. The plague already is causing distress to citizens, it was disclosed.

Prominent Citizen Killed In Crash

LINDSAY, July 30.—Wilbur L. Moncrief, who was killed in an auto accident, near the village of Brechin Thursday night, was one of the foremost municipal officers of Victoria County.

For five years he was Reeve of the village of Omemee, and last year was elected Warden of the County. An ardent Liberal, he was recently elected Vice-President of the Victoria and Haliburton Liberal Association and was mooted as the next Liberal standard-bearer in the Provincial elections.

Mr. Moncrief was born in North Monaghan township in 1889. For many years he had resided in Omemee, where he conducted a seed and grain business. He was a Past County Master of the Orange order and a member of the Masonic order. He is survived by his wife and one daughter.

Double Mystery Shooting Kills Dentist

MONTREAL, July 30.—(CP)—Dr. Archibald N. Jenks, prominent Montreal dentist, was found shot to death today alongside his wife who was rushed to hospital in a critical condition with three bullet wounds in her body. An emergency operation was performed, and early today the hospital reported her "still alive but in a very critical condition."

Discovery of the shooting was made by police who were called to the Jenks' fashionable Saraguay estate, less than 10 miles northwest of the city, by a woman who appealed over the telephone to "send someone here quickly, there's been a shooting."

Officers, waiting at hospital in the hope Mrs. Jenks might utter some word that could give a clue to the shooting, refused to discuss the case. They declined to say if a weapon had been found in the home of Dr. Jenks. Police believed it was Mrs. Jenks who telephoned headquarters, as she still was unconscious when an ambulance crew reached the scene. But she spoke no word.

Been Ill Months

The doctor, about 50 years old, had been shot through the temple and abdomen. He was said by friends to have been in poor health several months.

Police said they had been unable to find anyone who heard the shooting. The lodgekeeper was asleep in his quarters at the foot of the drive leading to the shurb-hidden home when police arrived. He said he heard no shots, and said he believed no servants were in the home when the shooting must have occurred, some time after midnight.

Jenks, said to have been a war flier, was a graduate of McGill University and had practised in Montreal more than 15 years. His wife is the daughter of the late J. Nelson McKim.

An inquest was called for today by Coroner Dr. Pierre Herbert.

Slaughter Rages Along Yangtse

SHANGHAI, July 30.—(AP). —Chinese and Japanese war dispatches agreed to-day that a slaughter was in progress in the bitterly-contested Yangtse Valley below Hankow.

Japanese maintained generally that their infantry and airforce were advancing full speed westward from Kiukiang, a Yangtse river port they occupied Tuesday, toward the provisional Chinese capital 135 miles distant.

Chinese, however, asserted their counter-attacks were effective on the south bank of the stream near Hukow and behind Japanese lines, impeding the invaders.

The defenders said the Japanese had concentrated 10,000 men from Shantung and Anhwei provinces near Pukow, opposite Nanking, to reinforce the Yangtse troops.

Reports from foreign gunboats above Kiukiang said Japanese naval activity in that area had jessened, apparently to await the advance of Japanese infantry.

Fiery Visitation

Oil Slick At Sea Only Clue To Clipper

Area Combed Miles By Transport, War Planes Out

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30 (A.P.) —A "thick oil area," marking the spot where the Transpacific Hawaii Clipper presumably hit the ocean, was reported discovered by the army transport Meigs to-day 500 miles from Manila.

A radio message from the searching transport, intercepted here, told of the discovery of the tell-tale oil slick directly in the line of the clipper's course when she disappeared on Thursday night with 15 men aboard her on a flight from Guam to Manila. The clipper was piloted by Leo Terletzky.

The message, signed by the captain of the Meigs and directed to military headquarters in Manila, said the oil-coated area was about 1,500 feet in circumference. A lifeboat was lowered to investigate the slick and take samples of the oil and water.

At Pan-American Airways headquarters here, where officials awaited confirmation of the message, hope was held the oil indicated the 26-ton flying boat had made an emergency landing, rather than marking the spot where the craft sank.

The clipper carried a supply of heavy oil to quiet seas for an emergency landing. Airways officials said this oil may have been dumped for an emergency landing and drifted to sea faster than the clipper.

No Radio Report.

But this did not account for the failure of th clipper to radio an emergency landing was necessary, or report later by her wireless, capable of communicating while drifting on the sea.

Pending further investigation the Meigs was remaining in the same position at latitude 12.11 north, longitude 130.33 east. This is about 500 miles from Manila, or six miles east of the position given by the clipper when her radio suddenly went dead.

More than half an hour after the message reporting the discovery of the slick was intercepted, Pan American Airways here had received no confirmation.

Others familiar with far eastern Pacific waters said there was little likelihood the oil came from any other source than the missing clipper. The position is in an area not travelled by steamships or by planes.

Only One Ship Nearby.

The transport Meigs, which radioed the discovery, was the only ship known to have been in that general area, although a small naval fleet was dispatched to the scene from Manila and Samoa.

Eight army and navy planes, sent out from their cavite base on Manila Bay, far western terminus of the clipper lines, patrolled the area yesterday (Saturday in Manila) without finding a trace of the plane or sighting the oil slick.

Six huge army bombers were under orders to take off again at dawn Sunday (Saturday afternoon in San Francisco) from Tacloban Island.

The Meigs, which was only 87 miles away when the clipper sent its last report, was the first ship thrown into the search and carefully zigzagged over the area, gradually working east.

Her radio constantly sent out the call letters of the missing flying boat without response. At night she swept the sea with her searchlights, sent up rockets every 15 minutes and lit flares hourly.

New Law September 1 On Slot Machines

OTTAWA, July 30.—(CP).—Thousands of slot machines in use in Canada will take on a more sinister significance on and after Sept. 1 next when the new amendments to the criminal code become effective.

If any house, room or place is fitted with slot machines returning "slugs or tokens" other than merchandise or services, the amendment declares "there shall be irrebuttable presumption that such house, room or place is a common gaming house."

This amendment was requested by various organizations and municipalities and was designed to facilitate the prosecution of persons having slot machines other than those returning merchandise or services such as gum, candy, or stamp vendors and weighing machines.

It had been the original intention to have the criminal code amendments effective from Aug. 1 but the later date was decided upon in committee.

Other sections of the amending bill prohibit publication of details in divorce or other marital cases and restricts publication of medical, surgical or physiological details or judicial cases, and the laws designed to prevent reckless driving were strengthened and made more stringent.

The amendments respecting motor vehicle law violations were made effective when the bill was given assent, July 1, while all other sections come into force on Sept. 1.

Police Ball Beer Is Probed And Judge Wants Light On Several Mysteries

Investigation Adjourns To August 11 Without Finding Answer To Three Big Questions

Evidence that while the policemen's ball was being held in the Canadian Legion Hall in October, 1936, beer was available for the policemen and their friends in a house adjacent to the hall featured Friday afternoon's session of the police inquiry when former Constable Wheeler's charge that the beer had been placed there with the consent of Chief Newhall was investigated.

Several mysteries developed during hearing and had not been solved when the session ended at 5.20 o'clock. One was who hired the Long house that was used for "refreshment" purposes that night, another was who had arranged for the beer to be there and the third was who ordered Constable John Naples to take charge of the refreshments on that occasion.

The inquiry has been adjourned until August 11, when the remaining Wheeler charges will be probed. It was not intimated by Mr. Frost whether or not he was through with the "beer at the ball" phase of the investigation.

Joseph Wheeler, completing his evidence in this charge, said he was told twelve full bottles of beer were removed with the empties.

Mr. Carley—"You say only two of the police don't drink? Does Piercy drink?"

"Yes, I saw him at his home one night. He gave me two bottles of beer."

Wheeler said he got his orders for the dance night from Inspector Reid.

"When did the Chief speak to you?"

"Between 12 and 1 that night. Anyway the dance was going on pretty good."

Letter of Thanks.

Wheeler said Puffer's letter of thanks was sent only to Alex Lyons, who had shown him the letter two or three days after the ball.

He said: "I've got 2 or 3 letters I'm sending to the breweries. I think one was to O'Keefe's and the other to Carling."

When he was called before the commission Wheeler said he did not think he was doing anything wrong having beer in a room at the White House the time of the last dance because beer was in the Long house the year before.

Mr. Carley—"You didnt see Chief Newhall in the Long house."—"I did not."

British House Tangles In 35 Debates

LONDON, July 30—(CP-Havas)—The foreign situation, subject of 35 debates and more than 500 questions to members of the cabinet, dominated the session of parliament, one of the most active in modern history, which adjourned for the summer recess Friday.

Mediterranean and Central European problems were the chief preoccupations of 25 debates in the House of Commons and 10 in the Lords on foreign policy.

Throughout the heated discussions, Prime Minister Chamberlain remained firm in his program for handling foreign affairs.

Among the highlights of the session was the Anglo-Italian accord, which parliament probably will not be called upon to ratify for some time to come. Another important international agreement was the Austrian debt settlement of July 1 with Germany, which won fairly general approval. But the most popular of the pacts achieved under Mr. Chamberlain's auspices was the treaty with Eire, which gave the relations of the two countries an extremely favorable turn.

Notable among the domestic bills discussed and voted during the session were those on the coal, bacon and film industries, civil aviation, anti-aircraft defence and paid vacations.

An Important Item.

The air raid precaution problem elicited special interest. Geoffrey Lloyd, under-secretary to the home office, is devoting all his time to organization of new defence services in this respect.

Principal feature of the budget in April was an increase in the income tax to five shillings six pence in the pound (27½ per cent.), a figure never reached in peacetime and exceeded only during the latter part of the Great War.

Parliament also occupied itself with the problem of building up foodstuff reserves for war emergency periods and approved government steps taken toward its solution. The accumulated stocks included grain, sugar, and whale oil—raw materials essential in time of war.

The Commons also endorsed a grant of credits to Turkey which provided £6,000,000 ($30,000,000) for purchase of war materials from Britain. A parliamentary act was necessary to give the government this power. The £10,000,000 credit designed to bolster Turkish trade generally was a purely commercial proposition.

Veterans Storm Toronto But It's a 'Lovely War'

TORONTO, July 30 (CP).—The old song "Oh, Oh, It's a Lovely War" took on a new meaning today as it was sung over and over again by scores of greying veterans of the Great War, gathered in groups in the "French Village" and marching in parade.

For a war was being fought in Toronto and it was a lovely war. The Great War was being fought and won again in memory many times and the fighting will go on until a late hour Monday night. But this time it is a lovely war.

No shrapnel spatters about to rend and maim. No reeking gas creeps along the streets. No muddy trench houses shivering infantry men. No enemy inspires hate.

All the ugly, nasty things and sentiments of the great war are absent from the new war created by the Canadian Corps reunion. There remain only the songs, the rollicking fun, the good fellowship and the cheery greetings exchanged by men who 20 years ago crossed the ocean to face danger together.

The beret-topped veterans literally took over Toronto today. Every hotel was filled with them and hundreds were camped in tents in Exhibition park.

Village the Key Feature.

There the centre of interest is the French village which was formally turned over to the troops by Mayor Ralph Day last night. That was really the start of the re-union although the official opening ceremonies are set for to-day at the Cenotaph when Prime Minister Mackenzie King will speak.

Mayor Day, a veteran himself, was not the only prominent public man to figure in proceedings yesterday. At the midnight baseball game the Mayor pitched the first balls with Conservative Leader R. J. Manion catching and Hon. Harold Kirby, Ontario Minister of Health, at bat.

The teams, representing Toronto and Montreal, were made up of men who played baseball for their battalion teams in the theatre of war. Toronto won 15-9.

Three hundred flaming torches lit up the route of the veterans' march from the Exhibition Grounds to the Baseball Stadium and provided an added attraction for the 17,000 people who crowded the stands.

Skyrocket Visitation Moves Starlings, Bramptonite Sleeps

Brampton, July 30.

SUCCEEDING where hunters armed with shotguns have failed, William White, local merchant, has disposed of the starling menace here, temporarily at least.

With his residence in the district which the pests had selected as nesting places, Mr. White had been awakened at sunrise every morning for the past few months by the noisy birds. Necessity was the mother of invention, and he finally arrived at a solution to the problem. Biding his time, he waited until they wakened him one morning this week at 4 o'clock. Quickly he dressed, and taking some rockets specially prepared for the occasion, he touched one off under a tree in which more than fifty starlings were noisily proclaiming daybreak. The astonished birds didn't wait for a second rocket.

Ford Would Relive Years 21 To 75 Unchanged

By Robert K. Taylor
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

DETROIT, July 30 (CP).—Henry Ford looked back today on 76 years of a busy life, filled with problems of administering a great industrial empire, and said he would do it the same way if given a chance to live his life over again from the time he was 21 and a "pretty fair" mechanic in a small Detroit factory.

Ford celebrated his 75th birthday today feted by fellow-citizens of this automobile capital he helped build, but the celebrations did not detract materially from his working hours devoted to factory enlargement plans.

"Would I live my life again as I have lived it? Yes," Ford told The Canadian Press. "There is not one significant thing I would change for even if it were not the wisest of things, I still learned much from it that I could not have learned otherwise. We all make mistakes. But there is more to be had out of our mistakes than we realize.

"I'm a great believer in the value of experience. Everything is experience. But experience is more than what happens to a man, it is what the man does with what happens to him. I do not know any essential thing in my course of life that I would change, except of course, to do everything a little better."

Ford denied he was an example of a man with great riches and attendant responsibilities, worries and work, who would like to escape his position if he could.

Worries Very Little

"I don't worry very much at all, unless there is worry in application to work, which I very much doubt. As to responsibilities the world rests on no man's shoulders. We are responsible to ourselves for doing the best we know at a given time, but if you go around think of your responsibilities, soon you will not have any."

Ford, asked what advice he would give to youths just leaving High school, said: "It depends on the youth and whether he wants advice. I don't offer advice and people don't accept advice, except where it is wanted. At the same time if I could get the youth just to be himself, use his own mind, see what his own eyes, and understand a lot that is being said that means nothing, then I should feel pretty confident for him."

"Do you plan to visit Canada soon?" Ford was asked.

"Oh, I'm often in Canada," the industrialist replied. "I don't 'visit' Canada—I just run over now and then as we do with neighbors I like Canadians. Canadian workmanship is amongst the best. I like the stability of things over there. I like the common sense of your people. Besides you have a fine country.

"Of course you haven't been hornswoggled as badly as our people have by political and economic hallucinations and that has saved you a lot of unsettlement. But I'm glad to say that we are coming into a better state of mind here, which I think will be welcomed by both countries."

Ford said he had no ideas of retiring, and he had his work mapped out for himself for thenext 20 years.

While rain pelted down during a thunderstorm, lightning started a forest fire at French Hoek, South Africa.

C.C.F. Urges Canada Be Free On War

EDMONTON, July 30.— (CP). — The National Council of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation went into session to-day to clean up details of the fifth national convention which ended yesterday after adopting a political platform and declaring the Federation's stand on foreign policy.

The convention wound up last night with a public meeting addressed by J. S. Woodsworth, re-elected national chairman for the sixth successive year, and David Lewis, Ottawa, national secretary. M. J. Coldwell, M.P. for Rosetown-Biggar, was re-elected national chairman.

The Federation's stand on foreign policy was that Canada shoud declare her right to freedom of action in case of war, refuse to participate in war in defence of Imperialist interests and embrace collective security as the best method of maintaining peace.

Rev. Dr. Barr Joins Order Of Goodtime

Rev. Dr. A. T. Barr of St. Paul's Church has returned to Peterborough a member in good standing of "The Order of the Good Time," with membership card and all. This is a method used by the Provincial Government to recognize the tourist visitor in Nova Scotia, and is granted only after having spent a month in the province. The first grand master is stated to have been Champlain in 1606, and the present occupant of the post is Lord Tweedsmuir.

"I found the people there a very hospitable sort all through," remarked Dr. Barr, "but when one goes among them and talks and asks questions there are sections in which they are dissatisfied and where business is not good."

"Is that in any particular line of business?" the Examiner inquired.

"Take the fishing cehtres and there you find business is poor and money is scarce. The complaint is that fishermen from United States using trawlers are scooping in the catch. I do not know exactly what the regulations are, but the people there are certain they are getting the worst of it in what they claim are Canadian waters. Those people work hard and there is nothing at all easy in their occupation, but many of them after they get through with a month's work would not have $40. The price they receive for the fish they have for sale is low, and that low price and lack of money seems to make itself felt all through these communities.

"There is also the feeling, and one hears it expressed in business circles and in hotels, and it is that the Maritimes and Nova Scotia in particular, do not get their rights when the trade treaties are negotiated at Ottawa. They feel they were in a better position prior to Confederation, and they are certain that Ottawa to-day does not understand the problems with which the people in the eastern end of the Dominion have to deal.

"One could tell without being told that he is well out of Ontario when going through Nova Scotia. It is as different as can be. There does not seem to be the same amount or variety of activity. Of course, that is reflected in their cost of living, and I would judge the people would live there for less than they would in Peterborough.

"I found that the churches have not the problem there that exists in so many places in Ontario with regard to people not attending the services. Several ministers told me it was always the custom to have a congregation which would be larger than the size of the membership of the church.

"There is quite a novelty in crossing from Pictou to Prince Edward Island, as the boat in use there, they tell me, was formerly a yacht belonging to Prince Ruprecht of Germany, and it was captured during the War. Prince Edward Island has a rather even and delightful climate. In size it is about the same as England. It really gives one the impression of being in a land which is indeed by itself and apart from the rest of the world."

Dr. Barr said that going by motor he found it was 1,100 miles from Peterborough to Halifax.

Serioulsy Hurt Dr. McPhee Holds His Own

ORILLIA, July 30.—The condition of Dr. W. H. McPhee, a dentist of Lindsay and Omemee lying seriously injured in Orillia Hospital since Thursday night after being involved in an automobile accident ten miles east of here, when W. Moncrief was killed, is slightly improved, although, according to Dr. P. Rynard, Orillia, it is not certain whether his life can be saved. Dr. McPhee is suffering many chest injuries, eight broken ribs, a dislocated hip, and a fractured jaw.

Says Peterboro' Boy Enlisted When 13

Peterborough would have a strong candidate for the honor of being the youngest recruit at the Canadian corps reunion beginning in Toronto today according to information from a south end resident who was inclined to nominate Harry E. Holbrook of 312 Townsend street.

"I don't think Mr. Holbrook is going to the reunion,' this man said, "but according to the papers he has showed to me he was 13 years and 6 months old when he enlisted. He was born on June 23, 1902, and joined up on December 21, 1915. I understand he was born at Apsley and was 5 feet 8 inches tall when he enlisted. He is now employed at the Martin-Hewitt factory on Park street. I read in The Examiner that Brantford has a claimant for the distinction of being "baby" of the reunion in the person of C. Brooks who enlisted when he was 14 years old."

An Examiner reporter called at the Holbrook home last night, but Mr. Holbrook was out, and it was reported that his wife and family are visiting at Cobourg.

Horses Are Killed By Lightning Bolt

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 30. — Heavy downpour of rain accompanied by thunder and lightning did considerable damage to standing crops in the Campbellford Hastings area Friday. Both corn and oat crops which this year have given promise of one of the greatest yields in several years were flattened by the torrential downfall. One report stated that a section of county road linking Campbellford and Hastings had been seriously damaged. At one point a stream cut a trench two feet deep along the side of the road.

A team of horses on the farm of Herbert Stillman were instantly killed when the tree under which they were standing was struck by lightning and a police dog owned by Jack Meir, a market gardner two miles north of town was also killed when lightning struck a tree following it along the ground to where the animal was lying.

Saskatchewan To Make Serum

KEMOSEE LAKE, Sask., July 30. —(CP)— Saskatchewan next year will make an attempt to produce its own serum to fight the dreaded disease, encephalomyelitis, which has taken such a high toll among livestock of the province for several years.

Announcement of the decision was made by Premier W. J. Patterson, addressing the annual Liberal picnic and rally here. Production of the serum would be attempted at the University of Saskatchewan at Saskatoon, the Premier said. He noted that the province, and in particular the south east portion, from which the largest attendance at the picnic was drawn, had been hard hit by the disease, threatening farmers with a shortage of horses just at a time when they were starting harvest operations.

The province had bought all supplies of the serum available at New York and in California, the Premier declared. Next year it would attempt to meet its own needs.

Bickell Flies Out To Vancouver, Hepburn Boats

VANCOUVER, July 30.—(CP).—Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Bernard E. Smith, of New York, were heading down the British Columbia coast aboard the coastal liner Princess Alice to-day, as the other two members of their aerial party awaited their arrival here.

J. B. Bickell of Toronto and Pilot Jimmy Towne arrived here in Bickell's big amphibian last night from Carcross, Y.T., via Prince George, B.C.

Bickell made light of the concern felt for himself and his companions when their plane went unreported for 18 hours on a 200-mile flight from Whitehorse, Y.T., to Juneau.

"We were told when we landed in Whitehorse from Dawson that they had zero-zero weather on the coast but we decided we'd see for ourselves what the visibility was like.

"We got as far as White Pass and we found it was zero-zero all right. So we turned back and landed at Carcross." There the four men spent the night and concern for their safety was not relieved until communication between Carcross and the outside world was opened the next morning.

Premier Hepburn and Smith continued their journey to Skagway by train and there boarded the Princess Alice, while Bickell and Towne waited for the weather to clear and then flew to Vancouver. When the party is reunited, they will continue their 8,000 mile tour of the Canadian west.

Loyalist Sweep Begins To Slow

HENDAYE, July 30.—(AP).— The Spanish government's smashing offensive on the Catalonian front appeared to-day to have been stopped by insurgent reinforcements hurriedly withdrawn from the drive on Valencia.

The front line along the Ebro river was but little changed in the past 48 hours and the city of Gandesa, district headquarters for the insurgents, still was a no-man's land claimed by both sides.

Government reports of gains were limited to isolated hill tops and cross roads.

The fact, however, that General Francisco Franco had to pull troops out of the campaign against Valencia was held by government dispatches as evidence that the Catalonian offensive had been successful.

Dispatches from Valencia said government forces had taken the offensive in the Viver sector of the Valencia front and recaptured the only break the insurgents had been able to make in the network of defence fortifications.

The government counter-attack was said to have threatened to cut the insurgent advance troops near Viver from their rear guard.

A government communique reported the capture of 10 hills south of Gandesa and slight gains towards Fayon.

More than 200 more insurgent prisoners were reported taken. A train load of war materials also was reported seized.

Canada, U.S. Draft New Air Agreement

WASHINGTON, July 30—(AP).—Three aeronautical agreements between Canada and the United States were reached Friday through an exchange of notes between the Canadian Minister, Sir Herbert Marler, and State Secretary Cordell Hull.

They involve these subjects:

1. Air navigation;
2. Reciprocal issuance of airman certificates;
3. Reciprocal recognition of certificates of airworthiness concerning airplanes for export.

They comprise the tenth bilateral air accord reached between the United States and other nations. The others are with Belgium, Denmark, Germany, Great Britain, Eire, Italy., Norway, Sweden and Union of South Africa.

Superseding an accord reached in 1929 between Canada and the United States, the Air Navigation agreement provides for the recognition by each government, for flights over its territory, or certificates or licenses issued by the other government for its aircraft and airmen; equality of treatment with regard to aircraft facilities; the right to prohibit flights over certain zones, and compliance with local regulations, including those relating to customs and immigration.

The agreements come into force August 1.

Development Of North Is Stressed

"The development of Canada's natural resources, if properly handled, will undoubtedly solve our economic problems and bring us out of the depression," declared E. B. Fowler, addressing lunching Kiwanians on Friday on the magic growth of Canada's north.

In acute depression, lasting from 1929 to 1933, when other Canadian exportable products were finding such restricted markets as to threaten our external credit, gold from our mines was available to help meet the country's foreign debt payments and to finance necessary imports, without whic hthe standard of living would have declined more than it did he said.

"It would seem that the Canadian people might consider themselves singularly fortunate in being placed on this particular spot of the world's service," he said. "Peopled as it is by a sturdy race whose forebearers came to this country during the past one hundred years or so with perhaps the sole idea of building for themselves homes where they would be free from the many oppressions that surrounded them in the Old Land, they were indeed fortunate that they came to a country possessing such natural resources."

The "grainery of the world" was developed to such an extent that people failed to realize there was a limit to the capacity of consumption of agricultural and farm products, he believed. "This has been emphasized forcibly during the past few years, to such an extent we have endeavored to curtail the production of grain and farm products. However, in times like these Canada can again turn to another of her natural resources—the frozen north."

It is generally known that minerals are mostly found in what the geologists call the Precambrian Shield, the speaker said. "This shield covers approximately 60 per cent. of Canada's main land. Let those who think of our Precambrian hinterland as a waste land, allow their imaginations to dwell on the fact that the United States has built its great iron, steel and copper industries from a mining speck of precambrain territory which is a bare three per cent. of the size we possess in Canada."

"The discovery of the great silver and cobalt fields in 1903 was the first major achievement in mining in Canada," the speaker recounted. "Vast fortunes were made and lost but nevertheless Cobalt largely provided the money and the men for future development. It is truly said that Cobalt is the mother of the mining industry in Canada."

During the height of activities in Cobalt and with the extension of the T. and N. O. railway to Englehart, the prospectors pusned farther north and in 1910 the great Porcupine field was discovered and since that date vast wealth has been produced from this district, he reported. Towns sprang up overnight, fortunes were won. He told of a trip through the north and the discovery of entire towns, complete with lawyers, doctors, churches, banks, all within a period of a few months.

Great difficulties faced the prospectors who first found gold and the men who first tried to float stocks for development of mines at Kirkland Lake. "There was a time when Lake Shore stock went begging at 40 cents a share, and I have been told by men in the north that in one deal in which Teck-Hughes was involved, the owners did not consider it worth while to insure the stock certificates while they were being transferred by mail," he said. "Today it is a thriving district. The main mines, McCassa, Kirkland Lake, Teck-Hughes, Lake Shore, Wright-Hargreaves, Tough-Oakes are situated along two or three miles of the break and surrounding these mines has been built a town of twenty or twenty-five thousand people." One woman sold a 40-foot lot bordering on the main street and an old log cabin on it, for $30,000, he recounted.

He outlined the mining district of Quebec, describing the bad condition of roads and magnificent possibilities of the mining areas. He followed the series of mines in far northern Ontario and the west, praising their possibilities.

"Then we return to what is perhaps the greatest mining development in all Canada the International Nickel company at Copper Cliff near Sudbury. The origin of this company dates back to the construction of the C. P. R. when nickel was discovered in the rock-cuts of the right-of-way. International Nickel has some 10,000 employees, and provides a livelihood directly for 20,000 people in one community. Through its purchases it provides wages and a living for an additional 20,000 people. In the ten years from 1926 to 1935 it expended $84,000,000 for labor and salaries, $69,000,000 for materials and $47,000,000 for freight, power and dividends. Thus an average direct Canadian buying power of $200,000,000 has been created."

Cars Hit On Hill Woman Dies 5 Men Injured

TARA, Ont., July 30 — (CP). — Mrs. James McCullough of Allenford, was killed and five men were injured seriously when two automobiles collided at the top of a hill on a highway near here last night. The injured, one of whom was in critical condition, were taken to hospital in Owen Sound, 15 miles north-east of Tara.

James McCullough, husband of the dead woman, was reported to be in "fair" condition. Most seriously injured was Ray Cunningham, of Owen Sound. The other three men hurt were Howard Bulman, driver of one car, J. J. Douglas and Dr. A. L. Danard.

The car driven by Bulman and one in control of McCullough, collided at the top of a sharp hill, the force of the impact wrecking both machines.

Entries For "Ex" Show Gains Over Last Year

Tom Brown, president of the Peterborough Exhibition, informed the Examiner to-day that the entries which were received up to July 27 show an increase over last year in all classes of livestock.

"I think we are going to have a much better showing of horses than last year," Mr. Brown said. "That department was a little weak in 1937, but there is every indication of a big improvement.

We have more entries of cattle than last year, and that is true also of sheep and swine. About forty directors attended the meeting Thursday night, and were delighted to hear that the entries had closed livestock than we had last year." Wednesday with assurances of more

Mr. Brown explained that since the Exhibition was promoted to Grade A, the entries had to be in nearly a month earlier than before because they have to be sent to the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa for verification of pedigrees.

"We were all mighty sorry about the rain Thursday and the trouble and actual loss it has caused farmers," Mr. Brown said. "It is a bad setback when everything looked so promising. However, things have got to go on and we are hoping that the grain growers are going to make a special effort to exhibit their seed this year."

"This is one year we are hoping the public will fall in behind us more than ever," Mr. Brown added. "The grounds were given to us as a present, so we went ahead and spent some money on the property, to make it more presentable and to increase the accommodation for stock. With the co-operation of the people of the city and district this year we should take a long step forward in establishing our show in Class A."

Boy Hit By Car Has Broken Leg

Walter Keast, five years old, of 560 Main street, Toronto, is in St. Joseph's Hospital, suffering from a fracture of the right leg and a puncture of the roof of the mouth, as the result of being knocked down by a car on Armour Road at 7.30 o'clock Friday night.

The little fellow with his parents has been visiting at the home of Joseph Astles, 610 Armour Road.

Last night Milton Killingbeck, 278 Braidwood avenue, was driving his automobile south on Armour Road and according to the driver's statement to P.C. John Stevenson, who investigated the accident, the Keast boy ran across the road just north of McFarlane avenue and in front of the Killingbeck car. The driver says that he applied his brakes and swung to the right in an effort to avoid hitting the boy, but the right running board of the automobile struck young Keast and knocked him down.

He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, where his injuries were attended to by Dr. Robert Young.

A., all of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Church's direct family were present, Mr. Frank Church and family being here from Saskatchewan, and Miss Tillie Church came from Hamilton for the occasion. Mrs. Charles Lauder, Mr. Allen Church's only sister, who is in her eighties, keenly enjoyed the outing with the younger generations.

Miss Alma McCrackin has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Church for the past few days.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, July 30 (C.P.). — A waiting attitude taken by traders during the past few days was continued on Friday on the Winnipeg Market. Wheat dealings were exceptionally dull and prices moved narrowly to finish ⅝c lower to 1⅛c higher.

Export business was estimated at less than 100,000 bushels and was made up chiefly of old crop springs and durums.

Pit operations were at a standstill at times, pending the Wheat Board minimum price announcement. Nervous covering was evident now and then with private crop advices still getting a bullish tinge from drought reports originating in some Saskatchewan areas.

Trading was mostly local in character and routine. Intermarket spreading appeared and involved sales of Winnipeg deferred against purchases of Chicago September.

Rebels Blamed

MEXICO CITY, July 30—(AP).—Officials blamed rebel followers of General Saturnino Cedillo to-day for a dynamite explosion that wrecked a train in San Luis Potosi, killing two passengers and injuring 19.

The explosion, on the San Luis-Tampico line, 210 miles west of Tampico yesterday, was the fourth dynamiting or derailing of trains since Cedillo rebelled against President Lazaro Cardenas last May.

Insane Tots Colors Shame Cubists

NEW YORK, July 30—(AP).—The nightmares of insane children are being washed away in water colors.

Their weird splashes of vivid reds and greens on somber black, without rhyme or reason except perhaps to their creators, were on exhibit today at the federal art gallery, putting to shame the extravaganzas of the cubists and surrealists.

They represented the inhibitions, hates, fears and uptopias of childpatients in the Bellevue Hospital Psychopathic ward.

Dr. Frank J. Curan of the psychiatric division of the hospital said the art work had a therapeutic effect on the children and declared that many, robbed of other means of expression, had produced real art under supervision of the federal art project.

Some children who are backward in school, teased by companions and sometimes scorned by their families, are among the "exhibitors."

Many showed no initial interest. Some merely drew long lines, wavy lines, straight lines, curved lines. Some drew raindrops, endless dabs of prismatic colors pouring down the canvas.

Mother-In-Law Gets Her Tongue Slit As Price Of Nagging

KRIZHEVTSI, Jugoslavia, July 30. JOSIP LIPOVETZ, tired of his mother-in-law's continual nagging, took matters into his own hands and is alleged to have cut her tongue. He said she was driving him to insanity.

The father-in-law said Lipovetz then attacked him "because I tried to defend my wife, although God knows I have stood more from her tongue in the last thirty years than any one can imagine. But I have never lifted a hand against her." The woman is critically ill in hospital.

CAMPBELLFORD

Family Trouble Aired In Court

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, July 30. — "This appears to be a very unfortunate family feud," Magistrate O. A. Langley told a crowded court room here Friday. Charles McCoy, 58, appeared in police court for the second time within a month on a charge of intentional assault laid by his wife, Edith McCoy. McCoy, father of four children, has not been living with his wife since May 10th last and through his counsel, J. R. F. Douglas, entered a plea of not guilty. The wife claimed that although she had not been living with her husband since May 10th she had left her daughter's home two doors away and had gone to the home lately occupied by she and her husband but was forcefully kept from entering. It was at this time that the alleged assault was committed.

In summing up the case the Magistrate stated that the onus was upon the wife to supply the court with satisfactory evidence that there had been an assault which had not been shown despite the Crown's contention that violence had been employed by the husband. "I do not feel that I have sound evidence," said Magistrate Langley, ruling that in this case the wife was a trespasser and that the husband was justified in resisting her attempted entrance.

A number of cases for non-payment of dog license were adjourned until August 4th.

Five violators of the traffic act pleaded guilty to failure to stop at through streets and were assesed fines of $2.00 and costs. All complaints were made by Constable George Hardy.

Samson – Strength and Weakness

"BRASS TACKS" ON THE SUNDAY SCHOL LESSON

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for July 31 is Judges, Chapters 13 to 16, especially 14:5, 6; 15:11-14; 16:15-21, the Golden Text being Ephesians 6:10, "Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might."

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

Samson was a physical giant and a moral and spiritual pigmy; a crude man of iron in a crude iron age, a man of unusual gifts, but neither sense nor grace to use them aright; a man for whom, in his good and godly parentage, God did much, but who grieved God and broke the hearts of his parents by prostituting his unusual talents to base and sensual ends.

Samson's Broken Vow

Samson was given of God to be dedicated as a Nazarite under a vow of strict temperance and helf-discipline for the development of strength of character to deliver God's people: "The child shall be a Nazarite unto God from the womb: and he shall begin to deliver, Israel out of the land of the Philistines." Then he enfeebled his whole ministry as a deliverer by himself becoming "unequally yoked together with unbelievers" in marriages with Philistine women, who became the Philistines' tools to deliver Samson into their power. What profit, then, that Samson had power "to rend a lion as he would have rent a kid" if he opened his soul to Satan who "like a roaring lion" brought in a whole brood of evil passions more destructive than a pack of mountain lions?

What aviled this temperance not complete
Against another object more enticing?
What boots it at one gate to make defence,
And at another to let in the foe?"

Sampson's supreme sin came in his "casting pearls before swine" when, in spite of repeated evidences of Delilah's perfidy, he revealed to her and her people the secret of his strength which God had promised him. "He told her all his heart, and said unto her, There hath not come a razor upon mine head; for I have been a Nazarite unto God from my mother's womb; if I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man."

Thus Samson showed himself unfit to be custodian of God's blessing and it departed from him.

"And he wist not that the Lord was departed from him. But the Philistines took him, and put out his eyes and brought him down to Gaza and bound him with fetters of brass; and he did grind in the prison-house." Thus "they enslave their children's children, who make compromise with sin."

Learned Lesson Late

Samson learned this lesson belatedly and bitterly, and his sad example is set forth in this tragic story "for our admonition upon whom the ends of the world are come." "Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall."

Blind Samson grinding grain like an ox for his enemies and the enemies of God as a pathetic end for a child of so great promise and so great grace as he was from his birth. The crash of timbers and the shrieks of his enemies, upon whom he brought down ruin and death for them and himself, ring down through the ages to warn us that "God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

"For he that soweth to his flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting."

Biblical Thoughts For the Shut-Ins

By Rev. E. R. James, Toronto

WHAT DO I KNOW OF THE BIBLE? AMOS, THE MODERN PROPHET.

AMOS said: I am not a phophet nor the son of a prophet.

Amos 7; 14.

Amos has been called the most wonderful phenomenon of the human spirit. Through his ministry and that of Hosea, Micah and Isaiah, Israel awoke to the knowledge of the one, living God. In their earlier days of national development Israel believed that Jehovah was their tribal God, their national God and that He would care for them because they dwelt in His land.

The time was now ripe for a further, wider and deeper revelation of the character of God. God used a plain man, a shepherd, Amos of Tekoa. From his hill top he could see the Temple twelve miles to the northwest. On those lonely hills he brooded and pondered on what he had seen in Israel when he visited the markets of the various towns to sell his wool. Then came the Word of the Lord. It burnt into his heart. "The Lord hath spoken, who can but prophecy"? is his explanation. It is the still small voice. It drove him to the City of Bethel, the place of the King's Chapel where the worshippers thronged the courts offering sacrifices and saying their prayers. With the oriental gift of a carrying voice he startled the worshippers into a amazed silence. He prophesied the coming doom of Israel because of their unrighteous acts towards their poorer brethren. Assyria was to be the rod in the hand of Jehovah. Israel was an isolationist of that day. Assyria was a great and mighty nation in the far east. Hundreds of miles of burning sands separated them. Invasion from such a quarter was absurd. How modern. Yet it came to pass and Israel was carried away into captivity and disappeared. Why? Because its religious life was essentially heathen—the worship of Jehovah was merely a veneer. They were absorbed into the Semetic races of that age; they "reverted to type".

Let us take to heart the circumstances of that day. The people were rich, yet there was much poverty in the land. Profiteering was common, the poor ground down; there was extremes of luxury and poverty. Yet they were religious people; keeping the Sabbath; offering sacrifices and "trampling the Lord's courts" as Isaiah says.

Listen to that ancient prophet speaking in the name of the Lord. "I hate to despise your feasts and I will take no delight in your solemn assemblies, I will not hear the melody of your viols". That expensive organ—the highly paid choir.

How true to life is the picture of the court chaplain. He tells the prophet to go back to his barren Judea and not disturb the dignity and culture of the king's chapel. Down the centuries has come the reply of Amos:

"I am not a phophet nor the son of a prophet; I am not an emotional man; I have not been trained to pass into a state of ecstacy. I am but a herdman, a gatherer of sycamore fruit. Yet the Lord spake to me therefore I must speak. His words burn in my heart".

It is important to remember that they were a religious people yet they went into captivity because they thought that God would be satisfied with an outward observance of ceremonial and ritual. Do you read your Bible, say your prayers and go to church regularly? Why? What is your motive? The sin of Israel lay in the fact that they expected Jehova to answer because they fulfilled scruplously the ordinances of worship. They believed they could compel Jehovah to bless them, to protect them. Is that the reason why you say your prayers, read your Bible and go to Church regularly? When sorrow, trouble or disaster comes upon you do you exclaim in astonishment that you did all these things and yet the trouble came. Did you not in your heart of hearts expect to be free from trouble and sorrow because you fulfilled so faithfully your religious obligations? Did you not expect to compel God to save you from trouble and distress? This is the heathen principle that sent Israel into captivity. It is the deadly sin of religious people; it is the cancer that eats into the soul of multitudes of professing Christians.

All true religion and worship means that the Spirit of God enters into the worshipper and turns his thoughts towards his brother, his neighbour. The Spirit of God is righteous. This is revealed by the vision of the plumline to test the rightness of the wall. Amos 7; 7. God desires you to deal justly with your neighbour. The strife between capital and labour would quickly disappear if men did their duty to one another. This is the new truth that Amos reveals—that Jehovah is a righteous God and desires His worshippers to be righteous one toward another. "Let righteousness stream down as waters". Amos 5; 24.

Perhaps in this day of "the making of many books" the most fearful prophecy of Amos may be fulfilled. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will send a famine in the land, a famine of the hearing of the words of the Lord".

"THINK ON THESE THINGS".

Looking Back
On This Date

JULY 30.

One hundred years ago to-day (July 30, 1838), James Morrow (or Marreau), the brigand from Pennsylvania, who had led the raiders into the Short Hills of Niagara early in June, was hanged at Niagara. The execution was, of course, a public spectacle, and a revolting one at that. There are two records of the incident at my hand. The first, from the Quebec Gazette, says:

"Morreau, the Yankee land-pirate, was executed at Niagara. Owing to a want of the necessary precaution in securing Mr. Ketch, a colored man, beforehand, that sensitive functionary bolted, and narrowly escaped with his life. And, very unusual, Mr. Sheriff Hamilton was obliged to execute his own duty in propria persona—and it is said that the job was well done."

(Unhappily, the sequel was tragical, the sheriff succumbing to illness brought on by the task of having acted as hangman.)

The second account, from the Niagara Reporter of August 3, 1838, lays stress upon the number of women spectators:

"The concourse of spectators was not very great. The proportion of women to that of men among the crowd was remarked to be unusual. It is really disgusting to see so many well-dressed and apparently respectable females so thoroughly unsexing themsleves. An execution is a spectacle few men can witness without horror. What then is to be thought of women, to whom the attribute of modesty, gentleness and mercy are as a crown of glory, suffering themselves to be jostled in the midst of a gaping and unfeeling crowd, in order that they may enjoy th dying pangs of a fellow creature?"

The Niagara editor made it clear that Morreau was an American and had never been in Canada before; that he had "come down from Detroit in search of work and had, at Lewiston, been seduced into joining the Patriot army; and that he was not the author of the proclamation of June 3, to which his name was signed, but was made the victim of one Law, editor of the Lewiston Telegraph."

Morrow, or Morreau, may have been misled by the Canadian refugees and seduced into leading the raid on the Short Hills. But is that any reason why his name should remain on that arch at Niagara on which the Canadian Patriots are honored? Morrow was never a Canadian. He was an American adventurer, and has no right to any place of honor among Canadian Patriots.

Cathedral Musings

It is not until we learn to regard life as a continuity and cease to think of it in terms of time; not until we can envisage the orderly and progressive unfoldment of consciousness from the lower forms up to man, that we gain an insight into the tremendous problem of human destiny. If we stand aside and view these things objectively to ourselves, we are overcome by the grandeur and majesty of creation. We see that nothing is static, that the whole universe is in a state of flux and change, moving through eternity towards an unseen goal. We see also that everything, no matter what, is, in itself but a manifestation of a tremendous energy, operating under fixed laws, directed and controlled by an intelligence that comprehends all things in itself. We find, associated with an ever growing complexity of form and function, an ever expanding consciousness, ever unfolding, ever becoming more aware of its environment and more capable of mastery and of self-expression. We find that there is no such thing as "dead" matter, that matter, life, consciousness, intelligence, everything, is but a different manifestation of one and the same thing. We see life as a stairway with its foundation in the atom and the electrons composing the atom, and we see humanity painfully striving to hold his place upon this stairway. Now he climbs up a step or so. Now he falls back, only to bind up his bruises and toil once more. His progress is painfully slow, almost imperceptible. He seeks to climb, he knows not why, for he is driven by that within him of which he is not aware. It is not logical nor reasonable to assume that life and consciousness reaches its apex in man, or that man, as he is now, is so perfect that he is capable of no further mental or spiritual evolution. Or, that under other conditions there are not higher and more ethereal expression of life and consciousness, higher and more mighty intelligences, reaching on forever, up to the infinity of God. These are vast heigts indeed, but here we invoke the law of continuity and it may well be, that some day man will stand upon these heights, for is not his whole journey a progress through infinite duration towards infinite perfection?

The Golden Text

Ephesians 6:10—"Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of His might."

The Human Side of the News

By EDWIN C. HILL

Lawrence of Arabia, the brilliant soldier who organized the Arabs to fight for the British in the great war, is dead. He was killed near the little village of Moreton, in Dorset, England, more than three years ago, while driving his motorcycle along a dangerous country road at terrific speed.

"Aireraftsman T. E. Shaw", as he was known then—only a private soldier of the Royal Air Force, having dropped name and rank, it was reported, because of his indignation over the failure of the British government to keep its pledged word with the Arab leaders to whom he had transmitted that word—was weary of existence, it was said, and constantly hurled his motorcycle at breakneck speed over the perilous roads. And in the end death struck.

But the villagers of Moreton say that Lawrence of Arabia still rides that fatal machine; for, night after night, when all is dark and all is quiet, except for the barking of some distant dog, there comes the sudden roar of a speeding motorcycle, and fearful householders, peering into the night, make oath on the Book that the rider of that ghostly machine is the ghost of Lawrence of Arabia.

Newspapers Investigate

London editors, intrigued by the tales of this sped-mad ghost, sent reporters to Moreton and obtained the most positive and explicit statements from Moretonites. Sometimes the motorcycle and the dim figure of its rider are glimpsed. At other times, even in bright moonlight, nothing is seen. Only the roar of the machine is heard.

The curious story is to be investigated by the British Society of Psychical Research, and doubtless we shall hear more about it. The personality of Col. Lawrence was so vivid, so powerful, that many people refuse to believe that he is dead. They insist that some mystery is behind his apparent death, and that really he is alive and still pursuing his secret activities for England.

He was, indeed, an amazing personality. Single-handed this remarkable Englishman organized the revolt in the desert and built the backfire of desert warfare, which destroyed the Turkish empire. And when it was all over the fame tipped her cornucopia, ready to shower him with wealth and honors, he refused them all, even a decoration from the King. He buried himself as a common soldier. Nobody knows why. It is one of the enigmas of history.

Masterpiece of Translation

This incomprehensible man gave to the world the finest translation of Homer's Odyssey that ever leaped from the brain of a great scholar. Twenty-eight men have sought to render into English the power and the beauty of Blind Homer's rolling phrases, and some of them, like Andrew Lang, did a noble job. But of all the translations, Aircraftsman Shaw, this odd, scholarly man of action, was easily the most inspired.

Perhaps it is because he had in his own soul something that Ulysses had, Ulysses the Wanderer, brooding lest "a god shatter him upon the wine-dark sea."

Lawrence's own life was both an Iliad and an Odyssesy of modern times. His exploits as a secret agent were so continuously an adventure, that even the British people refused to believe that he was not invariably in the midst of some distant romantic and exciting picture.

Rumored Everywhere

Thrones were overturned and dynasties fell in Persia. Lawrence was back of it. The Kurds revolted and swept across the desert. India placed Lawrence at their head. India blazed with rebellion. Report whispered that Lawrence, disguised as a Hindu holy man, was wandering through the screaming mobs. Persia flirted with the Russian bear and word went about that Lawrence had been seen in Teheran in the role of an Afghan horse-trader.

But all of the time he was on his humble job in the air force camp, tinkering with airplane engines or plotting curves on the drawing board, this mysterious and romantic gentleman with the blue eyes of an Englishman glinting in the sunbaked face of an Arab.

Catholic Action Defended By Pope

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, July 30—(AP)—A Vatican City news service today quoted Pope Pius XI as terming racialism and exaggerated nationalism "barriers raised between men and men—people and people."

It said the pontiff's declaration was part of a long speech delivered yesterday at Castel Gandolfo to a group of students of the College of Propagation of Faith.

The pope also was quoted as defending the Catholic Action, saying that someone had said that "between the Catholic Action and the Fascist party there exists an incurable doctrinal divergence."

His concluding remarks were reported as;

"Who injures the Catholic Action, injures the pope and who injures the pope, dies."

The pontiff's remarks, in which he stressed again the "universality" of the Catholic faith, were uttered as the Fascist regime was pushing a vigorous campaign in favor of its recently promulgated doctrine of race.

Fr. Divine Buys Land Beside Roosevelt

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y., July 30.—(AP)—The 500-acre Krum Elbow estate of Howland Spencer, longtime neighbor of President Franklin Roosevelt, was sold Friday to 20 followers of bald-pated Father Divine, negro cult leader.

The sale, involving a purchase price of $40,000 to $50,000, was announced by Gaius Bolin, Jr., of Poughkeepsie, negro attorney for the group.

The estate is located directly across the river from property owned by the President.

A National Message

The House of Israel is not the same as the House of Judah, of which the Jews were a small remnant only.

The distinction we wish to emphasize is that, while some Jews are Israelites, all Israelites are not necessarily Jews. The House of Judah and some of the Jews are of Israel, that is, descended from Jacob. When the general blessings were at Jacob's death apportioned, the "One Seed" Christ, the Messiah, was promised with the sovereignty to Judah; but the "multitude of nations," most of the spiritual gifts and all the temporal grandeur of the "birthright" were given to the House of Joseph or Ephraim exclusively. The House of Israel was to obtain these in the "latter days," or the Christian era—our days and when developed into a "company of Nations," cf. Imperial Conference of 1926.

The division of Israel took place under the rule of Rehoboam over Judah, Jeroboam over Israel, in 975 B.C. The House of Israel sinned through idolatry and were cast out of the land in 721 B.C. and did not return. The House of Judah also sinned and were punished and banished to Babylon for seventy years, and a remnant of them under Ezra and Nehemiah returned as "the Jews" in 536 B.C. The term "Jews" is never in the Bible applied to the Twelve Tribes or to the Ten-tribed House of Israel. They were to be divorced from the Mosaic law and lost to human history and knowledge, but known to God, re-covenanted in Christ, and to enjoy the Hebrew birthright in the Isles of the seas, to be His national evangelists to the world, and to be the inheritors of the Kingdom of God taken away from the Jews and given to a Nation. It will be shown that the British enjoy all the unconditional promises given to the seed of Abraham in the Christian era, and that therefore no other Nation can now replace them as Israel.

It was in 741 B.C. that Isaiah prophesied that "Within three score and five years shall Ephraim be broken in pieces, that it shall not be a people." The final siege of Samaria and the Deportation of Israel took place in 21 B.C. Subsequently in 676 B.C. Esar-haddon completed the work begun and from this date the history of the house of Israel ceases in the Scriptures, and the tale is taken up by prophecy.

Judah was carried captive to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar in 603 B.C. and the Temple finally destroyed in 586 B.C. The word "Jew" is found for the first time in the Bible in II. Kings xvi., 6, but the Second Book of Kings was not written till the return of Judah and Benjamin after the end of the Babylonian captivity.

"DOPES" 'PLANE ENGINE

For doping an Italian air engine to deceive his superiors about its performance, M. Karp, technician in the Rumanian Air Ministry, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment.

Is Personality Necessary?

Another life problem will be dealt with at the Union service on next Sunday night in Trinity church.

"Is life worth living when one has a colorless personality? I am a young fellow of eighteen years, and feel pretty blue about my prospects. Although I am a hard worker I seem to have no personality, and though I have tried to cultivate it I get no results. So I have accepted my fate, and am gradually giving up the struggle. This may sound like childish stuff to some, but young fellows have had hard problems as well as older ones."

In these words a young man once wrote to the late Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, the famous minister. There are questions here for the theologian, the psychologist, and the evangelist.

Is a personality a fined quality from the beginning, determined by God the Creator or is it possible to develop personality by diligent effort? Evidently this young man failed in the attempt.

"What is personality?" says the psychologist, and he sums it up as the total result of our physical and mental abilities. No one can lay his hand on any one quality and says this is essential personality, self-consciousness, and self direction are acknowledged however to be vital elements by all. The evangelist tells us that Jesus Christ can do much to exalt personality. The shock of the religious awakening which we call conversion has meant much to many people. It has aroused not merely the religious instincts, but the mental and moral faculties as well. It is not necessary to have brilliant gifts, to have a colorful personality. How then can it be secured?

Why The Hurry?

Five mining engineers were killed when an elevator cable went wrong as they were being lowered in the Lamaque Mining Company's shaft in Quebec. The cage in which they were riding plunged 700 feet. We read that the coroner called together a jury and a verdict was returned saying that the deaths were accidental.

Such a verdict may have sufficient reason to sustain it, but at the time it was given it does not appear that mining officials themselves knew what had gone wrong with their equipment. It is reported that a new cable had been installed on the mine hoist only the day prior to the accident, and there was talk and comment about "cogs having slipped" and other possibilities which indicated mechanical defects.

Admittedly this paper knows nothing about the accident apart from what has been published in reports, but that lack of definite knowledge does not interfere for a moment with the plain suggestion that a verdict of accidental death in such a case must have been arrived at before there was adequate investigation to show exactly what did cause the mishap.

It Had To Be Dull

The Examiner uses a good many pictures of places and events in its own district. In a recent issue there were several showing the damage which recent storms had brought. A resident happened to remark that "the one showing the barn with the roof off did not seem to print quite as sharp as the others. I thought it looked a little dull."

We thought so too; thought so when the picture was brought in and before it was sent to the engraver. It was dull and it should have been dull.

It was taken when the rain was pouring and just a short time after the roof had been lifted from the building. Everything was dull when that picture was taken and it required the use of the fastest film made to get any kind of a picture at all.

If that picture were going to tell the story of what was taking place on the farm of John Scully near Downeyville it would have to look dull; it could not possibly have been bright or clear. The dullness in the picture reflected just what was taking place. There had been a new roof placed on that barn, and the picture shows that the season's cutting of hay or alfalfa had been stowed away in the mows at both ends of the barn. When the entire roof and most of the siding are torn away and the mows are exposed to a deluge then we dare say most folk will admit readily enough that it was a dull proceeding — nothing bright or clear-cut about it. So we are quite satisfied that one reader found the picture a little dull when compared to the others. That is exactly what it was intended to be. The dullness told the story.

Struck By Lightning

There are people who are certain they are going to be struck by lightning. The chances of such a thing taking place are remote; far more so than being struck by a car or being killed or seriously injured by an accident in the home.

From time to time there are a number of rules which people say should be followed when a storm is raging. Whether they have any scientific worth we do not know, but it is worth while considering some of the cases which have been recorded within recent weeks.

One man was struck when leaving a field where he had been loading sheaves. The team was hurriedly driven toward the barn and this man was running because a storm was coming rapidly. He was carrying a pitchfork with him.

We have before us records of two cases where men were struck while standing in an open barn door, and there was nothing in either case to suggest that the individual had been holding any steel object in his hand.

This year has once more demonstrated that is not wise to take shelter under or near a tree. There is apparently no way in which to prevent livestock from doing that, as they generally huddle together and frequent cases are recorded of multiple deaths.

Without attempting to draw up any rules, but merely judging by what has happened, it seems to be advisable not to be out in the open with such an article as a pitchfork or any other agent of the conductor type; do not stand in an open doorway when the storm is close; it seems to be much safer out in the open than seeking shelter under a tree. It is also well to remember that the chances of being struck by lightning are quite remote.

Putting On The Lid

When a newspaper correspondent has been working at one place for 17 years it would seem to indicate he had been giving satisfaction. Especially when he has been furnishing material to reputable newspapers. But Paul Cremona has been told to leave Rome, where for 17 years he has been the accredited correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, the London Observer and the Wall Street Journal of New York. None of the papers has made complaint regarding his work, but the officials at Rome gave him eight days in which to gather together his belongings and leave. Cremona was president of the Foreign Press Association, a British subject, and thoroughly schooled and informed regarding every subject on which he wrote. The nearest thing to an explanation for his dismissal from Italy came from the Foreign Office, where it was said Cremona had "made insinuations about a high personage." There is only one high personage in the public life of Italy and that is Mussolini.

We cannot recall that in any of Cremona's writings he praised the Italian premier, but neither was he writing things which were untrue. The truth probably is that he was not following close enough the policy laid down by Italian authorities regarding what must and must not be reported.

The Italian Foreign Office may not think so, but an incident of that kind actually puts a question mark after the news reports which are coming from Italy. It leaves the impression that if foreign correspondents are not writing material of which the government approves they will have to leave the country, and on that account they will not write actual facts telling of conditions or events which the government does not wish to have published.

Drastic Change In Law

The unsatisfactory way in which all manner of slot machines and pin-ball games of any description have been regulated is about to end. The new law becomes operative on the first day of September; the change in the Criminal Code was made toward the last of the session of the Dominion Parliament. Under the new regulations operating such a machine is not something which can be regulated by a bylaw of a municipal council. All such existing bylaws will automatically become of no effect.

The new conditions are so radically different from the system which has been in existence that the Examiner secured a legal interpretation of the changes. This opinion is presented here:

By amendment to the Criminal Code which passed both Houses at the last Session the difficulties of prosecuting the operators of slot machines have been made easier. Prior to this amendment automatic devices, such as slug machines, were deemed to be a means or contrivance for playing a game of chance and all that was necessary was to find such a machine in the possession of the operator in order to prosecute.

In the case of pin games or slot machines which are operated by depositing a coin or slug and playing the game by means of a plunger the onus was on the Crown to show that the machine was being used unlawfully. Section 986 has been amended so that now any person having in his possession any machine which emits any slug or token, other than merchandise, ordinarily known as a slot machine, is deemed to be a means or contrivance for playing a game of chance, notwithstanding that the result of some, one or more or all such operations may be known to the operator in advance or if the result of one of any number of operations of it is, as regards the operator, a matter of uncertainty. This amendment is to facilitate the prosecution of persons having slot machines, other than ones for vending merchandise and in effect makes all such machines (other than those for vending merchandise) illegal. This amendment was made at the request of various organizations and municipalities.

The Act comes into operation September 1 although it did not receive Royal assent until the last few days of the Session.

Many such machines are in operation throughout the Province under by-laws passed by municipalities and operators have paid license fees covering periods which do not expire until the end of the year and in some cases run into next year.

No instructions have yet been issued by the Attorney-Generals Department to Crown Attorneys or police officers. Similarly municipalities have not dealt with the question of refunding license fees paid for the period of the unexpired term. Many people feel that they are entitled to operate the machines until such time as they receive official notice from the local police authorities or from the Attorney-General's department or until they receive some adjustment for their license fees. Those who have this conception are entirely in error as the Act comes into force September 1. There is no doubt now that the by-laws under which these licenses have been issued are unlawful and could be quashed by any court of competent jurisdiction if any municipality endeavored to enforce any of its provisions as the machines which most by-laws intend to license are clearly now dealt with by the Criminal Code and, therefore, it is not competent for a municipality to regulate same by-law.

It has generally been the practice and it will likely be so in this case that local authorities or the Attorney-General's department will allow some time for the parties affected to clean house. Such a step is not necessary on the part of the police authorities. At the same time it seems reasonable and fair that a date be fixed, probably after the question of refunding license fees has been discussed, after which date any person operating a machine will have positively no excuse for continuing the operation of a contrivance which is made unlawful by the Criminal Code.

In answer to a further inquiry regarding the means necessary to order prosecution under the new enactment the Examiner was informed that nothing unusual was required. Operating such a machine comes under the same general heading as theft, disorderly conduct or any other breach of the law and no special instructions are needed to secure enforcement.

He Should Not Complain

From Skagway comes the report that Premier Hepburn was somewhat annoyed by all the fuss which was being made because the plane in which he had been riding was unreported for 14 hours. It started out for some place, ran into bad weather and had to turn about and come back. Planes we believe have a way of doing that at times, and it seems to be a better plan than keeping on going and getting into a heap of trouble.

But people do get a bit anxious when a plane has not been reported for 14 hours. If it were doing 150 miles an hour it could have covered 2,100 miles in that time and that might have landed our farmer-premier pretty well on toward the North Pole or some other such place.

If we had relatives or dear friends flying up around Alaska or the Arctic circle and for 14 hours they had not been reported we'd probably feel nervous. If it came on toward night we don't suppose it would be an easy matter to drop off to sleep, and at meal times things might not taste just right.

No—we can't see where Mr. Hepburn has much ground for complaining that people were making a fuss about him because he was unheard of for 14 hours. We dare say the folk at home who would be following all the reports would find those 14 hours rather long ones. And probably they'd feel relieved when they read that he had taken a train with the intention after that of getting on a boat.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Rumania has been without beer during a heat wave because of a dispute. Peace evidently has its terrors as well as war.

A charming picture of a checker tourney being held on the lawn of a Lindsay tea-room was not taken around noon on Thursday, we have reason to suspect.

Seems rather strange but no person has so far thought of asking Mussolini or Hitler what should be done with our railway problem.

We can't just get it straight why Japan after invading China should object to Russia stepping across the border into the Japanese Manchoukuo.

A Boston vessel has been damaged to the extent of $5,000 by being bunted by a whale. The latter will probably be charged as a hit-and-run driver.

Kitchener Record has developed its instinct for statistics to the point where it states there are 57 varieties of potato salad and two of these taste not bad if a fellow is very hungry.

There was something in the papers announcing a reduction in the wages of men working in U.S. steel mills. As a rule that is about the same as saying that a strike is on the way.

Man in Montreal is charged with having kept $100 which his fiancee gave him to buy her an engagement ring. And it seems well that the affair ended right there.

The march of the army worm is not pleasant in this province, but we'd rather have that than some of the armies which are marching in other parts of the world.

Marriages in Canada increased by 12 per cent. in June as compared to last year's showing for that month. The old two-can-live-etc. theory seems to be coming back into favor.

A car near London rolled over a couple of times and then smashed into a tree. After which three persons got out and none of them was injured. It's a nice trick after you learn how to do it.

Man and wife from Vancouver have arrived in Halifax, making the journey in a car worth $20 and a trailer which was home made. No wonder our transcontinental lines have been finding business rather flat.

In order to handle auto traffic in Detroit where there is one car for each three residents of the place it is proposed to build tunnels for traffic. In that way the pedestrians will have the new and delightful experience of being on top of the automobiles.

WRONG

(By A. R. K.)

¶ I mind when Skinny went to school, he busted nearly every rule, and got the teacher sore; he used to get his thumpings too, for Skinny it was nothing new, to stay in after four.

¶ When there were ball games played in town, you couldn't well hold Skinny down, he seemed to have the itch; he'd carry bats and water too, one thing he wanted then to do, was learning how to pitch.

¶ And Skinny used to hook from school, as stubborn like as any mule, the teacher strapped some more; they used to say when Skinny grew, one place he sure was heading to, that was the poorhouse door.

¶ But Skinny kept on pitching ball, he only quit with snow in fall, he failed at passing time; but he made curves and all such stuff, inside two years 'twas sure enough, he'd made the local nine.

¶ Then Skinny got his big league place, and kept his team well in the race, he made good money too; and next year Skinny had his way, and big leagues mentioned that his pay, was multiplied by two.

¶ When Skinny was a little lad, his knowledge record tallied bad, he never won at school; but it was very wrong to say, he'd reach the poorhouse door some day—or that he was a mule.

Found Germany Happy and Busy

(Ottawa Journal)

GERMANY IS NOT all guns and Goering, nor just a setting for Hitler's postures. It is a fine country with fine people where life goes on in such a way that most Canadian tourists return to sing its praises.

Two young men from Ottawa, Donald Parkinson and Lawrence Ritchie, have just found it the most interesting of five countries they visited. They're not suggesting that all is peace and quiet in the house that Hitler built, but they're echoing the sentiments of most people who have visited Germany—that we can't despise the whole show because the director is ambitious.

To The Journal Mr. Parkinson pleaded that his first impressions must not be used against him; he is aware they are generally misleading. But taking them with that qualification they nevertheless tell a good story of how Europe unrolls before the newcomer. First impressions, after all, are the lure of travel.

Go from one country to another and for a while you mightn't know the difference. Go from one country to Germany and—"a picture of Hitler in every store window, in every office; banners and flags on every post and soldiers and armored trucks in every street".

But the soldiers were pleasant, helped the Canadian visitors to order food in restaurants, describing Vienerschnitzel by making a noise like a calf, and pulling back a tunic to show the cut was from the rump. Indeed all Germans were pleasant to the visitors and the visitors were pleased. "Berlin is the most beautiful and up-to-date city I have ever seen." Good roads impressed them, much building activity, lots of beer drinking but no drunkenness. They had no trouble getting around, for "despite the fact we didn't know one word of German, the Germans apologized to us for their poor English. That seemed screwy." Yes, screwy, but the English are notoriously spoiled in this respect.

They saw Hitler. Der Fuehrer drove along a Munich street sitting in the front seat of an open touring car with five armed guards in the back seat. "He looked likea gentleman and quite impressive. Everyone around stopped and cheered and helled. The greeting certainly seemed genuine."

For every incident they ran across that might have indicated dissatisfaction with Hitler they found a hundred pointing to Hitler's popularity. No unemployed were visible. Parkinson used the word "visible" intentionally. Munich decorations for Hitler's visit put to shame the Paris turnout for King George. But it was admitted that in Munich every citizen was obliged to hang out his own flags and pay his own cost.

Germans appeared happy. An excellent meal cost at discounted foreign exchange about 75c, in German money about $1.20, plus extras for beverage, roll and butter. A friend they visited in Berlin lived in a very modernistic apartment which was complete with bomb-and-gas-proof cellar under the garage. In Munich there were loudspeakers in all the downtown area through which music was broadcast each evening. They discovered that in case of air-raid such a system would be invaluable for directing operations.

They strolled into a Rhine-side beer garden to find some touring Germans singing in English the "Sidewalks of New York," Pack Up Your Troubles" and "Tipperary". Apparently the songs "caught on" during the army of occupation. Another oddity was a train drawing two flat cars at the rear on which were mounted machine guns. The guns blazed away at rapid fire at all houses and farms as they passed. "Presumably they were blanks, but even so such a sight make a fellow think."

En route to Paris train connections were missed, making a delay of some five hours at the border. The young German woman sharing the compartment with the Ottawa tourists had no dinner and around midnight looked very haggard. They discovered that the delay had upset her budget so that she couldn't afford dinner. So much for the 10 marks allowed Germans travelling in other lands.

The Germans at least know the difference between Canadians and Americans. Over 95 per cent. of the time they were taken for the latter. But at Garmisch-Partenkirchen it was different. "When we tried to crash the Olympic hockey arena we gathered from the talk of a huge German that it did not open until after our bus had left. No amount of talk would get him to open the door until we finally pointed at ourselves and said 'Canadians'. That seemed to be the password for he 'Ja'd' and, beaming from ear to ear, unlocked the gate and gave us the run of the place."

SPEAKING OF MILK.

(New Yorker)

DURING THE recent hot spell, a friend of ours lunched at a large highly organized, air-cooled midtown restaurant, ordering a salad and a glass of nice, cold milk. "Grade-A milk, please," he said. The waitress looked disturbed. "Why don't you just order milk, sir?" she suggested. "I like Grade-A milk," said our friend. "All right," the girl said with a sigh, "but Grade-A milk costs a nickel extra." He said he didn't mind paying it, that he still wanted Grade A. "Well, Grade A is all we got," the girl said, breaking down. "We have to charge a nickel extra when people ask for it."

33 YEARS IN COUNCIL.

(Timmins Advance)

THE SOUTH Porcupine correspondent of the Advance calls attention to the remarkable record of Mr. Alexander McNevin, of Copper Cliff. Mr. McNevin, who is the father of Mr. McNevin, of South Porcupine, is in his 89th year, but healthy and alert, and for 33 successive years has been a member of the Copper Cliff town council. Whether any other municipal councillor in Canada can show as long a record of public service or not, the record of Mr. McNevin is one deserving of special mention and special honor.

PROBABLY NOT

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

DEPERSSION AND RELIEF

Editor Examiner:

Sir: Many are hungry and thirsty for something they can't find, on this earth. For the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof.

The Talmud, a book which treats of the ancient Jewish Civil and Canonical Law, has in it this passage:—"All is regulated by providence except the conduct of man." Ponder well this statement, it is the fact needing emphasis today.

Life is as you deliberately make it, that which they see, that which they feel so affects them that they mold their lives by their senses.

Meditate upon the fact that the brain is located in the top of the body, the feet at the bottom. Each in their proper place. The mind in the head to direct your course, the feet underneath to carry you. When anyone so far forgets this fact as to change the place of each he walks on his brains.

Let me illustrate: The whole happiness of some people is designated by the one word "dancing" night after night they are to be found in the ballroom or dancing pavilion.

"Nature abhors a vacuum." You should have a horror of remaining in a rut. Lift the wheels of your existence out of the place of self-satisfaction, go forward!

"Hitch your wagon to a star. Let others be content to remain indifferent to progress, go forward alone—but go! Why has depression come to Canada? Why has relief to be called for? Do people want to be minus, instead of a plus.

• The Sunday That Used To Be

(Letter in Globe and Mail)

TO THE EDITOR of The Globe and Mail: Twenty-three years ago we moved, as a family, to Toronto, from Vancouver, B.C.

A lady friend said to me, with deep longing in her voice: "I wish I could gather my children in my arms and take them to Toronto." Her remembrance was of Toronto the Good—the city of churches.

For nearly thirty-six years in Canada my husband put his strength and courage into the fight for Christianity and higher ideals—in the mining towns of British Columbia, with their rich experiences—in the beautiful agricultural sections of that Province—and in the more exacting environments of city life in Ontario.

He was only one of a multitude of unselfish ministers of the Gospel who prayed, studied and planned continuously, that they might contribute to the well-being and sobriety of those around them.

He is gone, but well I knew how grieved and disappointed he would have been at the contrary influences being set in motion by some of the city fathers of today. We are, in the one and only morning newspaper, given prominent pictures in the Monday's issue, of young folk who succeeded, the day before, in thinking up ways of amusing themselves and making of Sunday an ordinary play-day— and, of themselves—well, apparently, heroes and heroines of the hour.

They are openly flouting the old-time customs followed by the early settlers in Canada—customs that helped to produce the fine upbuilders of this grand, free country.

Is it to curry favor with theelectors that the powers-that-be are lending themselves to something unworthy of their position? There are enough beauty spots in and around Toronto with its parks and beaches, where one can rest and have quiet enjoyment, without coining new regulations to give more liberty.

All honor to those young ones who could not be found at the much-advertised "wading pools" last Sunday afternoon!

Please let us avoid the thin end of the wedge that might lead eventually to the loss of our sabbath quiet, for which Toronto has been justly famous.

There are those who would pull down, rather than build up, the wise and strong foundations that already exist. The Bible is still only infallible guide for youth and old age. Only as we honor its precepts can we expect to prosper as a nation.

Having had much experience with children, in both secular and Sunday schools, I know surely that the lovely stories from the Book of Books are beloved by them. The lilt of their voices in Gospel singing—now sweet, now full-throated and full of enthusiasm—testifies to their enjoyment. They have, too, a sense of well-being and of rightness in this way of spending Sunday, which to their contentment and happiness. There is joy in worship.

Minister's Widow.

• 38 Years A Long Time To Wait

(Cornwall Standard-Freeholder)

A FULL BROTHER, 38, and sister, 45, met for the first time in their lives, last week, when Jack Pitts, Drumheller, Alberta, came to Eastern Canada to visit Mrs. Thomas Swerdfeger at her home in Osnabruck township.

Both are the children of Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Pitts, but although there is only seven years' difference in their ages, they were born and raised many hundreds of miles apart. Five years after she was born, Mrs. Swerdfeger's parents moved to Western Canada, leaving her in the care of an aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Pitts. Mrs. Swerdfeger grew up in Osnabruck township, and settled down on a farm a few miles from the scene of her birth. Her brother was born at Dauphin, Manitoba, and later became a railroad employe at Drumheller.

Mr. Pitts is 38 and his sister is 45, but they never had an opportunity to meet. Four other sisters are living in Dauphin, and one is residing in Iroquois, but all have visited back and forth. But although he corresponded with her faithfully since he was old enough to write, Mr. Pitts never before was able to come east to visit his sister.

Both said they had little difficulty in recognizing each other when they met at the Swerdfeger home. They had exchanged photographs, and there is a strong family resemblance. "I would know him anywhere by his eyes," Mrs. Swerdfeger exclaimed.

There is another member of his family Mr. Pitts cannot remember seeing. His mother died 12 days after he was born. His other sister in Eastern Canada is Mrs. Morley McMillan, of Iroquois, and his sisters at Dauphin are Mrs. William Taylor, Mrs. Alfred Winters and Mrs. Joseph Coles. All his other sisters have visited Mrs. Swerdfeger and Mr. McMillan in Eastern Canada on different occasions,and Mr. Pitts met his other sister, Mrs. McMillan, when she travelled to Dauphin some years ago.

Mr. Pitts admits that 38 years is a long time to wait to meet one's own sister, but under the circumstances, it could not be helped. He and his wife and son are leaving for Western Canada again next week, but he hopes it will not be 38 years before he comes back.

• The Nobility Of A Man's Soul

(Brantford Expositor)

PARISH BULLETINS distributed in all Roman Catholic churches in Rome attack a lately applied Fascist racial doctrine as "a new type of idolatry." That may be a good description. It is also an old type of nonsense. As the bulletins point out, "for Christians a man has worth not only because he is big, blond, strong and handsome but by the nobility of his soul." Well-timed, also, is the warning that a "religion" which teaches the opposite doctrine "can only saw hatred, war and persecution." One need look no farther afield than Nazi Germany with its regimental and, in large measure, quite unscientific, theories of "Aryan" supremacy to realize the danger inherent in such fallacies.

Efforts to bring about mental and physical improvement of the race by eugenical means are to be encouraged to the fullest extent. It is perfectly sound idea to strive for the preservation of the best characteristics, to seek to eliminate less desirable factors and to check the inroads of degenerative forces. But that is a vastly different thing to throwing out one's chest and developing a silly superiority complex for the sole reason that one chanced to be born in such and such a place, has blue eyes and a flaxen poll. There is little in common between the bombastic neo-pagan formula of unscientific German or Italian cultists and the race-improving science of eugenics. The former overlooks the fact that the "Aryan" may be just as much in need of racial improvement as the "non-Aryan."

Insofar as Nazi or Fascist ideas of racial heritage tend to be reasonable and sound they perform an admirable function, but when misguided enthusiasts endeavor to transform a science into a politico-religious creed they offset useful application of facts with dangerous hocus-pocus.

A SOLUTION FOR PARKING

(OWEN SOUND SUN-TIMES)

Chief Constable Shane, of Kirkland Lake has a solution for the parking problem. "The only way to solve this parking problem," he says, "is to make collapsible cars so they could fold up like accordions or baby carriages and be stood up against the walls."

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

SO JESUS came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum. When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judaea into Galilee, he went unto him, and besought him that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death. . . .

Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

And as he was going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth. Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend. And they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him. So the father knew that it was at the same hour, in which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house. —John iv, 46, 47, 50-53.

NO CAR FOR GOVERNOR.

(New York Sun)

BERMUDA, the place where good Americans go before they die, is a Crown colony. Its Governor is appointed by the Crown and it has a Crown council. Like most far-flung British subjects, the Bermudians are more royal than the King; it is almost possible to imagine them facing London at sunrise, with prayer. But that stiff spine which distinguishes Tories everywhere is as straight and disconcerting in Bermuda as the monkey puzzle tree. The Governor asked the Assembly for the right to have a motor car. Motors are used to transport the few troops, the dusky convicts on their way to road work, and the garbage. It may shock folk in Mayfair to learn that the Assembly, while not emitting what is known as the Bronx cheer, gave the proposal a hearty laugh. The Speaker even said that it was ridiculous for the Governor to plead the need of a motor car for the supervision of a hundred troops. Old-fashioned Britishers are not rubber stamps. The Governor is not likely to attempt a purge of the irreverent members of the Assembly. Englishmen, while they respect the representatives and symbols of the Crown, have no delusions about them. Even a fireside speech would not move them from their ways.

THEY ENJOYED THE MEAL.

(Windsor Star)

WHEN A NEW restaurant was opened in Fergus recently, the proprietor conceived an idea to make the establishment poppular with the populace. He put on a free lunch and must have invited all and sundry, because it is reported that 1,300 people took advantage of the offer.

As the people of the pretty little town in Wellington county are most of Scottish descent, there is no doubt they would enjoy the lunch. But wasn't the proprietor setting a bad precedent? They might even expect him to keep the free lunch idea a permanent one.

POLL TAX FOR WOMEN.

(Barrie Examiner)

BARRIE town council has endorsed the proposal to make women who earn over $100 a year, subject to the same municipal poll tax as men. There is really no valid reason why there should be any more discrimination between the sexes in taxation than there is in giving employment. Some day the provincial legislators may have courage enough to place both upon equal terms in the matter of poll tax. In the meantime, the fair sex has little cause to worry over the matter.

Britain Charges Ship Sinking Was Deliberate

LONDON, July 30—(CP Cable).—The government regards the bombing of the British merchant ship Dellwyn in the harbor of Gandia, Spain, July 26, as deliberate, R. A. Butler, Parliamentary Undersecretary of State, announced during the question hour in the House of Commons yesterday.

The vessel sank as a result of bombs dropped by a low flying warplane, reported to have come from the Spanish insurgent air base on Mallorca. There were no casualties as a result of the bombing.

"Reports received so far have suggested that the attack on this vessel was deliberate," said Mr. Butler. "If, on further investigation, this view is confirmed, the British government will at once request the commission, which is being formed to investigate such cases, to examine the circumstances of the attack."

Events in Spain came to the front again as the House was preparing for its three months summer recess, which begins after today's sitting. The government was taunted from the Labor benches on its Spanish policy and was kept busy replying to a barrage of questions.

"Is it not a fact that this ship was attacked on four separate occasions before, and that aircraft came low and machine-gunned repeatedly?" asked Philip Noel Barker, Labor. "Will the British government, in view of these facts, withdraw Sir Robert Hodgson (British commercial agent to insurgent Spain) from Burgos?"

"No," replied Mr. Butler. He agreed to the description of the bombing but suggested it would be better to refer it to the Commission.

Destroyer Watched.

It came out during questioning that the Dellwyn bombing was committed while the British destroyer Hero stood by without retaliating. This prompted Labor members to taunt the Government.

Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Llewellin, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, said the Hero took no action against the bombing plane.

Albert V. Alexander, Labor, demanded whether there was "any previous case in British history where a British ship was being sunk in any waters under the eyes of the British Fleet and the British Fleet had not taken action."

Col. Llewellin refused to answer. Another Labor member, Frederick Cocks, then wanted to know if naval authorities had given instructions "to allow British ships to be sunk under the very guns of the British Navy and that on no occasion shall anybody fire upon the Italian friends of the Government."

"Instructions were given the Royal Navy," Col. Llewellin replied, "in accordance with the policy of His Majesty's Government which is to give full protection to British ships outside territorial waters and not to give such protection within territorial waters."

To Miss Eleanor Rathbone, Independent, Mr. Butler said Gandia is Spanish territory, although leased by a British company, and "if we were to go on the territory of Spain and defend it, we would be taking part in a war which we are unprepared to do."

Prime Minister Chamberlain said the Government is pressing for information on the death of an observation officer of the Non-Intervention Commission on the British merchant ship Kellwyn in Valencia Harbor. The protest, he said, should come jointly from all nations on the committee. Mr. Chamberlain said he understood plans are being prepared to safeguard observation officers.

Windsors On Hunt

ZELL AM SEE, Germany, July 30 (A.P.). — The Duke and Duchess of Windsor must start house-hunting again.

The 12th century Mittersill Castle which the Windsors rented several months ago with intentions of occupying next September, burned to the ground to-day.

Carpenters, plumbers, and painters were at work conditioning the Austrian castle when the fire broke out. Its cause was not known.

Once Declared Civic Holiday Made Idleness

TORONTO, July 30 (CP).—It's an old municipal custom in Ontario, making the first Monday in August a Civic Holiday but the idea has not spread very widely outside the boundaries of this province.

Some of the western cities have recognized its virtues, however. Winnipeg has been holding Civic Holiday for 23 years and Edmonton since the war. Brandon is another prairie city where the people are exhorted by the mayoral proclamation to take this midsummer day off.

Civic Holiday in Canada originated in Toronto 69 years ago. Records reveal the Toronto city council on August 6, 1869, decided a day of recreation was necessary for the citizens and decided on Wednesday, August 18. Later on the first Monday in August was proclaimed annually as the holiday.

The decision of the city fathers to make it an annual affair met with opposition. One prominent merchant protesting idleness should not be encouraged, pointed out July 1 had been appointed two years previously as Dominion Day, to celebrate Confederation. However, the enthusiasm with which the Toronto people celebrated Civic Holiday seems to have disarmed the critics.

Many other centres in Ontario have established Civic Holiday. The date fills in the list of monthly summer holidays, where it has been adopted, following Dominion Day in July and Labor Day in September. It is akin to the August bank holiday, though the latter is nationwide in England.

While not keeping Civic Holiday as such, some cities in other Canadian provinces have other local holidays in its stead.

Warm Dry Weather Rushes West's Crops

WINNIPEG, July 30 (CP)—Warm dry weather of the past week is rapidly maturing crops in Manitoba and Southern Saskatchewan, weekly crop report of the Canadian National Railways said today.

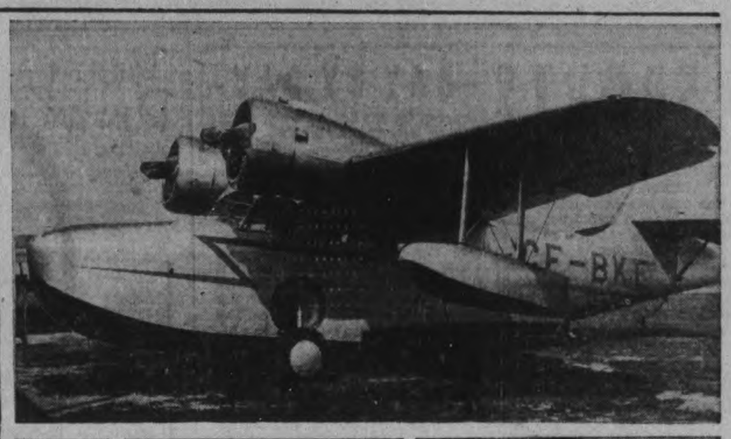
Barley harvesting is becoming general in Southern Manitoba and to a lesser extent in Saskatchewan. Only light scattered showers have fallen throughout the prairie provinces and further rains would be welcome.

In Manitoba grains are ripening fast in the south where wheat harvesting is expected to be general the first week in August. Rust infection of much of the susceptible spring wheat varities has been checked to some extent by warm weather and damage this source is not expected to be serious. Good wheat yields are expected in Eastern sections, depreciating towards the Southwest.

In Saskatchewan crops are suffering from lack of moisture in Regina division, but dry weather has checked rust. Grasshopper damage has steadily increased with loss estimated at 50 to 75 per cent. around Carlyle. Marquis wheat seems to have suffered most from hoppers.

In Alberta harvesting will be later than in the other two provinces. Crop conditions remain satisfactory in Calgary district. Yields of 25 bushels are forecast around Stettler and Three Hills while 10 to 15 bushels are expected around Mantario.

Missing Hepburn Aerial Party Reported Safe



Fears for the safety of the four-man aerial party of Premier Mitchell Hepburn, which was unreported for 13 hours during an aerial survey of Northern Canada, were dispelled with word that the unreported airplane had landed at Carcross, Y.T. The party had set out from Whitehorse, Y.T., on a 200-mile flight to Juneau, Alaska, and when they failed to arrive at their destination fears were felt for their safety. The airplane in which the party is touring Northern Canada is shown, TOP. Premier Hepburn's companions on the trip are shown, BOTTOM, LEFT to RIGHT, Pilot James Towne, J. P. New Mauretania Slips Into Sea

BIRKENHEAD, England, July 30 (C.P.). — They launched the new Mauretania Thursday amid tremendous public acclaim, and seamen, eyes misty, seemed to hear above the whistles of craft on the Mersey the siren of the old Mauretania, once "Queen of the Atlantic," and now broken.

The hull of the 33,000-ton transatlantic liner trundled down the ways, greased with seven tons of tallow, and plowed several hundred yards out into the mile-wide Mersey estuary.

Lady Bates, wife of Sir Percy Bates, chairman of the Cunard-White Star Line, stood on a flag-draped platform of Cammell, Laird's yard, and recalled past glories of the first Mauretania, with the hope they would be passed on to the new ship, as she performed the launching ceremony.

Biggest product of English shipyards, the new liner established a marine record before leaving the ways. Her keel was laid on May 24, 1937, and since then her entire hull structure, comprising 17,000 tons of steel, was added—a feat unprecedented in shipbuilding history.

But that probably will be her only record, for she is not designed to make the speed of great Scottish-built liners Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth. The Mauretania will take her place in the express service to and from New York until the Queen Elizabeth, to be launched in September, is ready.

The Mauretania is intended for the lower-priced tourist trade and is expected to make 22 knots—below the speed of the extra-fare ships, but still fast enough for a quick crossing.

Her maiden voyage will coincide with the opening of the New York World Fair in 1939.

Priest Sails Arctic Finds No Icebergs

BARROW, Alaska, July 30—(AP). "glacier priest,' sailed 700 miles in 'glacier priest,'" sailed 700 miles in a primitive 40-foot skin canoe through Bering sea and the Arctic ocean without encountering a single iceberg.

But, Father Hubbard said to-day, he and his party of eight men encountered such stormy weather on their 20-day voyage they never would have survived if they had a more modern craft.

He recalled 35 up-to-date ships have been wrecked on the hazardous shoals of Seahorse Island, which lies along the route the glacier priest travelled from lonely King Island to this northern-most settlement of Alaska.

The native skin boat is semi-rigid and warps with the motion of the water, Father Hubbard explained. "So we weathered the Seahorse shoals and got out of trouble by using power. An under-powered boat or a rigid one would have been wrecked."

Hubard's coomiak was designed after the type of boats he believes Asiatics used to cross from Siberia to Alaska. The only modern touch was the two outboard motors in place of paddles.

Loyalists Pushing Suprise Advance

HENDAYE, France, July 30. — (AP).—Dispatches from Barcelona said to-day that Spanish government militiamen were advancing north and south of the insurgent headquarters city of Gandesa on a circular front extending 15 miles.

The line was said by government observers to reach from north of Villa Alba De Los Arcos, a secondary communications centre five miles from Gandesa, through the eastern outskirts of Gandesa, to Bot, an insurgent communications junction 12 miles to the southwest.

This front roughly paralleled the Ebro river and the line, 14 miles to the rear, from which Colonel Enrique Lister's "people's army" of 60,000 men started its surprise offensive on Monday.

At the same time, dispatches from Zaragoza quoted the insurgent high command as estimating this last phase of the government attack would "end in disaster" for the government's shock troops.

Insurgents said only 20,000 government troops had been able to cross the broad Ebro and that half that number had either been killed or captured in fighting since Monday.

Advices from Barcelona, on the other hand, insisted that 75,000 government soldiers crossed the stream the first few days and that "countless others" still were crossing on pontoon bridges, heavily guarded.

Government estimates put the number of prisoners taken at 5,000 to 6,000.

Canadian Boys Live 2 Weeks On Warship

LONDON, July 30—(CP Cable).—Thirty-five Canadian schoolboys who have just concluded a fortnight's experience aboard the most modern warships of the British home fleet today expressed regret the eventful days at sea were ended.

The boys, who came to England under the auspices of Overseas Education League were invited by Alfred Duff Cooper, First Lord of the Admiralty, to join such famed vessels as the Revenge, battleship with a displacement of about 30,000 tons, the Royal Sovereign cruiser Southampton and the admiral's flagship Nelson. From the decks of these ships the group witnessed naval exercises in the North Sea.

They were in the thick of active service manoeuvres, with guns booming, planes diving in mock attack and torpedoes being unleashed against targets under cover of smoke screens.

While at sea the boys lived with midshipmen, messed with the tars in the "gunroom" and — after a couple of restless nights—learned to sleep in hammocks.

Alistair Fraser of Vancouver summed up the opinions of the group when he said: "England, you've been wonderful and given us the time of our lives. But above all you've made us most proud of your sons of the sea who man the greatest navy on earth."

After a further round of sightseeing in London and environs, and Scotland, the party will split up, some returning to Canada Aug. 6 and 11, the final group embarking on the 20th.

Kitchen Raider Shot In Stomach

TIMMINS, Ont., July 30—(CP)—Physicians Friday gave Albert Desormeaux, 37, an even chance to survive a gun wound which made several perforations of his intestines and necessitated an emergency operation last night. Meanwhile police held Edward Longpres, 30, Mountjoy township poultry farmer, in custody while they investigated varied accounts of the shooting.

Police were called to the Longpres farm shortly after the shooting last night but en route met Longpres walking towards Timmins. He stopped the officers and told them he shot a man who had broken into his house through a windowand was attempting to steal his chickens in the kitchen.

Desormeaux walked more than a half-mile from the Longpres home to the house of John Steele despite the pain of the yawning bullet wound caused by a revolver shat at close range, police said. Disdaining to wait for an ambulance, Desormeaux rode in the police car more than three miles over rough road to hospital.

Police said Longpres told them he fired through a curtain which separated the kitchen from the bedroom. The form of a man in the kitchen was silhouetted against the curtain by a faint light.

Police said Paul English, who claimed to have been with Desormeaux when the latter entered the Longpres home, told them the shooting was the sequel to a personal disagreement involving the two principals.

Revolt In Athens Quickly Crushed

ATHENS, July 30—(AP).— A revolt against the regime of General John Metaxas, dictator of Greece, apparently was quickly crushed Friday.

The governor of the Island of Crete, where the uprising broke out, cabled Metaxas that order had been restored in Canea, the Crete capital. He said "the islanders strongly disapprove the rebels' action."

All rebel-held government buildings have been re-occupied by authorities, he reported, and the revolutionists have fled.

Four hundred armed men, reported to be sailors, effected the coup by taking advantage of a weakened garrison at Canea. Most of the troops there had been sent to Northern Greece to provide vacation reliefs for other garrisons.

Premier Metaxas ordered army, navy air forces to the island. Communication was suspended and ships were not permitted to depart for the Island.

The official announcement said: "A group of armed men, under the leadership of Mitsotaki, Moundaki, and Hadjiangeli, (not at once identified) last night took the city of Canea on the island of Crete, profiting by the temporary diminution of the garrison.

"The cause and object of the desperate revolt are unknown. General Metaxas ordered military, naval and air forces to Crete. In other cities of Crete absolute quiet prevails. Other places in Greece also are quiet."

Relief Tax Levy "Confiscation" White Protests

TORONTO, July 30 (CP)—Relief and unemployment are a national problem and "should from the very beginning have been recognized as such," Sir Thomas White, Canada's wartime minister of finance, said in an interview Friday. Municipalities "should not be saddled with any part" of relief costs, he declared.

"The main cause of unemployment in Canada today is the crushing burden cast most unfairly and grossly inequitably upon real estate—the lands, residences and other buildings in our farms and cities," he said. Sir Thomas declared municipal taxation to provide relief funds has amounted to confiscation of 25 to 50 per cent of the value of real estate both in eastern and western Canada.

"There are many parcels of real estate that no one in his senses would take as a gift and become personally responsible for the payment of taxes annually charged against them," he said, adding that if real estate does not "recover" then "general recovery in Canada and with it the end of unemployment as it exists today cannot be brought about."

A Vicious Circle

Sir Thomas White declared high municipal taxation was the start of a vicious circle—high municipal taxes "kill" home-owning and stifle the building industry, so long as the building industry is moribund there will be unemployment, and unemployment means high relief costs and high municipal taxation under the present system.

The real estate owner is doubly taxed for unemployment relief, Sir Thomas said. Part of the income tax of the citizen who owns no real estate goes to provide unemployment relief, whereas the "unfortunate" owner of real estate contributes to unemployment relief not only through income tax payments but through municipal real estate taxation, he said.

"A mill rate of 40 mills on the dollar of assessed value, that is to say, four per cent is almost destructive of value to start with, but if the assessment upon which it is levied is twice or four times the selling value of the property—which is the case in many western cities—the real tax rate becomes 8 or 16 per cent, and such rates mean complete, or almost complete confiscation," Sir Thomas said.

Russian, Jap Patrols Fight On Border

TOKYO, July 30—(CP-Havas).—Japanese and Soviet border patrols fought for an hour Friday at Mt. Changkufing, scene of the recent Soviet-Japanese dispute, it was reported here by Domei (Japanese) News Agency.

Japanese dispatches asserted a etrated Manchoukuo territory at a patrol of 10 red army soldiers pen-point about 900 yards north of Mt. Changkufeng.

They fired "illegally" on a Japanese border patrol and the miniature battle ensued, the reports said.

The Soviet patrol later withdrew to its own territory.

Conversations began here yesterday between Kensuke Horinouchi, vice foreign minister of Japan, and the Soviet charge d'affaires on on the various matters at dispute between the two countries.

Nine Affidavits Are Filed In Sidley Case

TORONTO, July 30 (CP).—Affidavits from nine physicians and one barrister were filed Friday by the attorney-general's department in contesting the move by four executors of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley's estate for an injunction to prohibit the inquest ordered by the Crown into her death. The affidavits were obtained after hearing of the motion was adjourned yesterday by Mr. Justice Ainslee Greene.

D. L. McCarthy, counsel for the four executors, contended in the notice of motion that the Crown had no jurisdiction to order an inquest because Mrs. Sidley, who died in Toronto July 6, was buried in Racine, Wis. Affidavits from three Toronto physicians—Dr. W. L. Robinson, Dr. E. A. Linell and Dr. G. W. Lougheed—stated they have parts of Mrs. Sidley's body in their possession at present for clinical analysis.

Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, former lieutenant governor of Ontario, and Dr. Smirle Lawson, chief coroner, made affidavit that when Dr. Lawson asked permission to examine Mrs. Sidley about 30 hours before her death, Dr. Lawson was acting in his official capacity as coroner and not as private physician as contended in an affadavit filed Tuesday by W. Perkins Bull, at whose home Mrs. Sidley died.

Affidavits to support those of Dr. Bruce and Dr. Lawson were made by William Sidley, Jr., of Racine, son of the deceased woman, and by M. B. Buenz, who accompanied him here. Affidavits were taken also from G. M. Huycke of the legal firm of Osler, Hoskin and Harcourt retained by the Sidley interests and from two Toronto neuro-psychiatrists, Dr. Goldwin Howland and Dr. George F. Boyer.

W. B. Common, senior counsel for the attorney-general's department, has taken charge of the case for the crown, which has agreed that pendcrown, which has agreed that pending hearing of the motion no attempt will be made to resume the inquest adjourned July 26 for for week after two witnesses were heard.

Mr. McCarthy declared that the executors will appeal any decision dismissing the motion for an injunction. Since the appeal court would not sit until September, the end of the "long vacation," an appeal by either side would delay the inquest until fall.

Recover Gold Bar From Old Lutine

AMSTERDAM, the Netherlands, July 30—(AP).—A gold bar nine inches long and 2½ inches wide was recovered today by the Netherlands dredger Karimata from the famous British frigate Lutine, wrecked in 1799 at the entrance to the Zuider Zee.

Lloyd's, the insurance corporation which bid the insurance when the Lutine sank, was granted a licence in May, 1938, for the salvage operations. A number of Spanish coins have been brought to the surface, but this is the first time bar gold has been salvaged.

The Lutine carried a rich treasure of gold and silver—estimated at $10,000,000. She sank en route to Hamburg, Germany, while carrying the money to save British merchants' credit during a crisis. Since then, about $275,000 has been recovered.

JAPAN ELIMINATES CANADA IN THE DAVIS CUP TENNIS TESTS

Nippon Pair Gain Finals Of N.A. Zone

MONTREAL, July 30—(CP)—The Japanese marched on up the long highway that leads to the Davis Cup today and Canada watched from the side of the road.

A brawny brown man with a poker face and a little fellow who grins when the going gets tough deposited the dominion on the sidelines in her latest bid for the greatest international honor tennis offers. Together, Jiro Yamagishi and Fumitero Nakano put the finishing touches yesterday to the job they began individually Thursday.

The steady-stroking pair moved into the North American zone finals against either Australia or Mexico with the loss of only one set in three matches to Canada. That set was dropped as they put the clincher to the series yesterday with a 6-3, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5 defeat of Laird Watt and Ross Wilson on top of two singles wins the day before.

Today, they play the last two matches of the five-match series. But it's only exhibition now and by mutual agreement Canada will send in left-handed Doug Cameron of Vancouver against Yamagishi. If anything were at stake, Toronto's Wilson would have to face the superb Japanese in accordance with the draw.

Bobby Murray, who bowed to Yamagishi's highly-polished game Thursday, will go in against Nakano, No. 2 man of the invading Oriental forces. It was Nakano who blew Canada's aspirations sky-high in the opening singles with his defeat of Wilson, a defeat that left the dominion's elimination only a matter of time.

It was the end of the trail for Canada's first entry into cup competition since 1935. There was bitter disappointment in the Canadian camp, for Captain E. Henri Laframboise had figured the Canadians would take the doubles and at least prolong the series until today.

"I am most disappointed," the one-time Davis cup player said after the match. "We should have won, for Nakano was away off his game."

The trouble was that Wilson's game was shaky, too. The Japanese lost no time in sizing up the strength and weakness of the Dominion's team and concentrated their artillery on the Toronto player.

Motorbike Races Here On Holiday

The Canadian half-mile dirt championship races will be held here on Monday, Civic Holiday, in the Exhibition Grounds. It will be started at 1.30 in the afternoon and last till about 5.30, and a huge crowd of city and district people will be in attendance. A large gathering of spectators last year witnessed this colorful event, and a bigger bunch this time should be on hand for a bigger motorcycle extravaganza. Speed, thrills and possibly spills are bound to attract men, women and children to the holiday outdoor show. The affair is sponsored jointly by the Kawartha Motorcycle Club and the Lions Club, with a C.C.A. sanction.

Several touring professional riders, outstanding cyclists, will be here Monday, having returned from a trip to Europe. They are Harold Bain, Cy Henry and John Millett, all Class "C" experts and Same Davis, who won in Oshawa on July 1st. Romeo Masses, the Flying Frenchman from Montreal, who won here a year ago, will be back. Also Bill Matthews, Bill Sturges and others. Two Verdun Quebec aces are George Day and Irwin Knight. Besides the pro race and an all-star amateur event in the six-event program, a local race will be ridden. It promises to eclipse the thrilling motorcycle show put on here a year ago.

The playoffs is only a week away and these fixtures should oughta get the boys moothed out for series with the Oshawa GM-men.

Regatta Days Is Here

These is the days of regattas and reading the results from the various districts it looks like the boys and girls must win the events from memory the same prizewinners turns up so often around the circuit. Well it's good sport and anyway a regatta is a colorful sorta thing to look at even if it is impossible to watch the blondes in the sun-suits and the lads splashing down the stretch both at the same time.

Up in the big show Mac, they aint been many upsets during the past week. Them Pirates is getting quite a lead over the Wisecracker choice for the National league honors but whatever Bill Terry may feel about it I aint scared yet. I still got the feeling that the Giants will be very much in there when the world's serious blows around. 1 thing is certain the Magnates in both loops is reaping a harvest from the close race even if the rain has cut into the gate receipts pretty frequently lately. In the American loop them Clevelanders is hanging on and the Boston Red Sox, even with Mister Grove out of the picture for the time being is sure putting up a battle to get up there on top of the heap.

Still and all however I call the two New York teams to be in there when it is all over.

And now let's call it a day. The folks won't have time over the holliday weekend to read it, anyway.

Sportfully yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

WHO SHOULD WALK in on us yesterday, ere departing for Oshawa, but the manager of the House of David pro ballsters? The club had been billed to play the Petes Thursday and Saturday nights here in exhibition games, but a heavy fall of rain ruined the setup for Thursday. The Davids were to play in Oshawa on Friday night and Saturday afternoon, and now they plan to play here Saturday night and again on Monday eve. If the weather is right tonight, a huge crowd should be on hand as it'll be a mighty interesting struggle. Good ball, color, fun and entertainment under the arcs, starting at 9.15. A nifty pepper-ball act is slated as part of the show. And the same goes for Monday night, always of course provided the weather behaves.

HAD QUITE A CHAT with the Benton Harbor skipper. He said his gang have played against many organized professional teams through the south in the spring and they hold their own, too. They like to move around and always plan a trip through Ontario in midsummer. May go now to Ottawa and into Quebec. Lost money in Kingston—due to free fans—and in Belleville, but broke even in Napanee. Figured to make some dough in this town. Lost one of his best pitchers just recently to Ottawa in the Can.-Am. loop, a gee named Smith. Says the bearded players have a lot of fun on these trips, get in some good ball, and maybe make a little dough.

When Iron Horses Race

NO KIDDING, THE BIG motorbike meet at the Exhibition Grounds on the afternoon of Monday, Civic Holiday, should be a thriller. A flock of ace riders, pro and amateur, will perform at top speed in Canadian championship heats. With an all-local race, too. The high-powered iron steeds don't step on the brake when they hit the corners—just let 'er go and try to skid around the bend while still staying on the track! It was a good meet last year before a huge crowd, and promises to be a bigger and better affair this Monday, with another large holiday crowd likely. Show should last from 1.30 to 5.30, officers of the Kawartha Motorcycle Club and the Lions Club state.

* * * * * *

QUITE A DIVERSIFIED sports industry here now. Almost every kind of summer game that is known is played locally, and quite a few of 'em draw big crowds. Baseball, softball, boxing, lacrosse, motorbike racing, soccer, tennis, cricket, etc. and etc. Not forgetting the heavy list of lawn bowlers in action. Something doing every night but Sunday through the summer months, with senior football just around the corner and then a heavy season of winter games. Yep, Peterborough in an athletics' sense is undoubtedly Canada's biggest little town! Well, then, name a rival spot this size.

Can't Kill a Good Man

WE WERE QUITE tickled, to say the least, when Buster Whitton strode out with the Petes' lacrossers last night. On account of it was reported the flashy local player was missing from his Lakefield home and it was feared Buster had drowned. And him what swims like a fish! It seems Buster had merely decided to catch a nap in the cool and quiet of his attic, and he was sore as a boil when he woke up to discover all the fuss his impulse had created. Whitton was far from a dead one in the gutted-stick game last night, playing his usual bangup style. He was the liveliest "corpse" we ever hope to see, in fact!

* * * * * *

THE PETES PULLED out a 12-9 nod over Woodbridge but had to work for it, as 600 fans will testify. The visitors were late getting here, some 20 minutes, and had no subs for one period, but they sure hustled the locals in the second and third heats. But the Petes had the legs in the fourth to take a safe lead. Some dandy goaltending dished up, and all our crew turned in a good game. Kingdon was the big noise for Woodbridge, and he was practically deafening! Kiwanis and Kinsmen, in their new sweaters, put up a good midget melee which ended in a 3-all draw.

Gutted Stick Goings-On

OUR LACROSSERS are having it ladled right to 'em during the next two weeks. The Petes play Monday in Orangeville, Thursday in East York and entertain Brooklin here Friday. The following week, they play Brampton here Monday, Long Branch here Friday and journey to Brampton on Saturday! Five of the seniors are putting in a lot of time coaching the midget squads, and this is an excellent way to keep the game alive. Dutch Pammett handles the Rotarians, Rowan Chute looks after Kiwanis, Jerry Creighton has the Lions, Ira Dundas manages the Y's Men's gang, and Norm Worthy the Kinsmen. No more Saturday midget scraps, but likely a double-header this Tuesday eve, one game being scheduled and the other being the postponed Saturday fray. By the way the midget winner here this summer goes into O. L. A. playdowns.

A DELUGE OF RUNS, a flood of errors and a storm of arguments levelled the crops over at the Bowl last night as Westclox grabbed a 19-17 win over C. G. E. in a terrific tussle in the Girls' Softball League. Runs came in batches on hits and errors, sprinkled with disputes, and a couple of injuries. A little bit of everything, but just the faintest dash of good softball. Four flingers saw duty and the win may prove costly to Ab Delahaye's damsels as Helen Bradley had a finger broken late in the tilt, and she is a good pitcher. P. Bigelow and A Sturgeon paced the belters. Same two clubs clash again Tuesday in the Bowl, while Keene meets Westclox here next Wednesday e'en.

GRAB-BAG: Lefty McNally is slated to pitch for the Petes tonight with Russ Kitchen going in Monday. . . . Knotty Lee's team will tackle the Petes at Riverside next Wednesday twilight. . . . Sec. Jim Dorris of the locals says if it rains tonight, a certain secretary may slit his throat and end it all! . . . Young Petes play Cobourg juniors at three this aft in Riverside Park. . . . C. G. E. Gals were trying today to line up a softball scrap in Cobourg on the holiday . . . Tigers and Pirates have a junior ball game at the Ex. on Tuesday. . . . Art Calhoun of Toronto, ex-Belleville flinger now in a minor pro loop in Nova Scotia, got over the 'flu, an injured ankle and now has a broken rib. . . . Toronto cops took an 11-6 exhibition softball win over a Scugog crew in Lindsay on Wednesday last. . . . Motorists and Omemee have a men's softball game tonight at the Bowl. . . . Oshawa report that 3,000 fans saw the House of David team play here Thursday was a trifle off, the 3,000 people being hung up at home by a rainstorm. . . . Hendy went good here last eve in lacrosse; and so did Shorty Reid. . . . And a merry Civic Holiday to all of youse.

Ball Players Of Twenty Years Ago Return To Diamond To Win 15-9

TORONTO, July 30.—(CP).—They rolled back the years of a lighter vein of the Great War and into the early hours of this morning more than a score of the men who played baseball among themselves in France 20 years ago played once more in a vastly different setting. It was an hilarious time, this meeting of Montreal and Toronto veterans' ball teams in a part of the 1938 re-union of the Canadian corps.

No one really cared the Toronto veterans won 15-9. Seventeen thousand crowded Maple Leaf stadium and whooped it up for three hours with bands and ball players, firecrackers and fun.

It took a little less than three hours to play the game, a regulation nine-inning affair with umpires, uniforms and everything to make the setting real.

It was all in a nice way too—no rough stuff. And while the "boys" played ball, the bands played music and between innings the army songs took their beating. Out on the field men like Joe O'Brien, grey-haired and sprightly, romped around and if there are stiff muscles to-day, the fun must have been worth it.

Of the Toronto squad were Fred (Sailor) Barker, Bill Bakewell and Jimmie Willy, three of the boys who helped the 3rd Division Engineers win the corps' baseball championship at Tinques, France, in July, 1918.

Number Players In Big Matches

SCARBOROUGH, England, July 30 — (CP). — Falling in line with practically all other branches of team sport the Football Association will identify players taking part in outstanding matches. At the summer meeting here it was decided to number players, other than goal-keepers, in the F.A. Cup final, semi-final, international matches, and international trials.

New Zealand put forward the resolution through Brig.-General W. R. N. Maddox, and the proposal will bring about the numbering from 1 to 10.

The match between England and the Rest of Europe—in connection with the 75th anniversary celebrations of the F.A.—was fixed to take place on October 26 on the Arsenal ground.

The International Selection Committee recommended that negotiations be entered into with Norway for an international match in the north of England on a suitable date in November or December next.

(NEW RECORD ESTABLISHED)

Clerks Advance Hastings Loop

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, July 30—The Clerks moved to within half a game of first place when they defeated the league leading Outlows 6 to 4 last night in the local softball league. Trailing 4 to 1 going into the last of the eighth innings the Clerks scored 5 runs, three coming when Jones hit a long homer to left field with two men on.

G. Gibson pitched a nice game for the Clerks as he limited the Outlaws to five well scattered hits. He got 7 via the strike out route and issued but 2 free passes to first. It was a great comback for the Clerk's pitcher who had a sore arm most of the season. McKeen for the losers allowed 9 hits, 5 of them in the fateful eighth innings. He had 9 strike-outs and passed four.

Downs collected the most hits for the Clerks with a double and 2 singles in four trips to the plate. Dit Clapper and I. Bonds each with two hits got the most for the Outlaws.

The Clerks played a peppy game all the way and deserved their win in one of the best games run here this years. The teams:

Outlaws: Tunbridge, ss; Radford, cf; McKee, p; Stickles, lf; Clapper, 1b; I. Bonds, c; Walsh, 2b; Scriver, 3b; Lobb, rf; B. Bonds, pinch hitter.

No Beetle Scare

WASHINGTON, July 30.—(AP).—The United States' Agriculture Department sought to-day to ease any fears of New Yorkers that Japanese beetles which invaded the city in recent weeks might start an epidemic of cholera or other Asiatic disease. The Department said there was no danger of the crop-destroying pest reaching the United States on ships from China and added that the beetle does not carry plague germs.

Birth in Tokyo, Japan, averaged 363 a day in the last year.

NEW YORK, July 30 (A.P.). — Note to Johnny Vander Meer: Everybody's got to get them ears pinned back sometime, Johnny.... We can't get over seeing good old Brooklyn up there in fifth place—and hanging on.

Ball players feel Mickey Cochrane would be taking a desperate chance in going behind the plate again.... What's this about Ambers and Armstrong being put back to September? ....The Cards are calling Roy Henshaw "Lands Jr."....It was so hot in New York this week the Cardinals were wishing they were back in St. Louis, which means it is plenty warm here.

Extra!....Even Brooklyn is going into the Hall of Fame....They're going to put facsimiles of Johnny Vander Meer's two perfect games (one against the Brooks) in the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.....Yea, boy!....The other 3 a.m. someone called up Warren C. Giles and asked him if he was general manager of Cincinnati Reds, and when Giles said "Yes," the guy solemnly inquired "Why?" and hung up.

Walter Cox, veteran Goshen trainer, may return to prominence as a Hambletonian threat this year ....Back in 1928 Cox trained the first four horses to finish in the historic trotting event....He drove and won with one of them....This year he has high hopes for a speedster named McLin....McLin romped into the role of a sleeper when he trimmed the favorite, Long Key, up in Mass.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

During a conversation, the other day with a gentleman who has been keeping close tab on the affairs of our bowling club, he hits right out from the shoulder and says: "To what do you attribute the success of your club?" We admit, we were caught off guard with that inquiry inasmuch as we were talking along a different line. However, we stalled around a bit and just then our friend was called away, so that gave us a little time to prepare our answer.

To our mind there are many reasons why our club has so far been a successful organization—we will just cite a few:

1.—Right from the very start and up to the present we have been very fortunate in having on our board of directors men of the business world—men who have gone through life and had their share of the ups and downs; broad-minded men; men who could adapt themselves to any emergency that might arise; men who could see the other fellow's viewpoint, and men who had one aim and one aim only—namely, to work for the good of the club as a whole

2.—Our club motto, "Play the Game," has been enacted in every phase of our organization.

3.—That there is absolutely no favorites; no special rule for this one or that one; no class distinction; no grafters; no one receiving ridiculous sums of money to put on a show for an hour or two; no middleman.

4.—That it is a club built by the money from men and women in every walk of life; for people of all creeds; it is for the people of the city of Peterborough.

We believe that the above are some of the main reasons why ours is a successful bowling club. And, further, we believe it can be all totalled up in the words of Charles Mackay. He says:

The King can drink the best of wine;
So can I;
And has enough when he would dine;
So have I;
And cannot order rain or shine;
Nor can I:
Then where's the difference—let me see—
Betwixt my lord the King and me?

300 Marksmen In Title Shoot

LONG BRANCH RIFLE RANGES, Long Branch, Ont., July 30 (CP).—More than 300 marksmen, among the best in Canada, will compete here next week at the 64th annual meeting of the Ontario Rifle Association The session opens Monday and ends Thursday with the firing of the featured Lieutenant Governor's match.

Centre of interest will be members of the Canadian Bisley team which arrived Friday at Montreal from England and Bugler Eric Cowan, 17-year-old Ottawa boy. It was expected a number of the Bisley team would hurry here to practise for the Dominion session.

Bugler Cowan last year qualified for the 1938 Bisley team but was barred from making the trip because of his age. He also finished in third place in the Governor General's match, feature contest of the Dominion meet.

Kiwanis In Tie With Kinsmen

Kiwanis and Kinsmen battled to a 3-3 draw in a neat midget lacrosse game last night at the George St. arena before a big crowd of fans. Both sides dished up a lively scrap, and showed up to advantage in their new sweaters. There was no score in the first frame but Doughty took a pass from Hallihan to give Kiwanis a counter in the second. Flynn made it 2-0 in the third till Mattucci got one back for Kinsmen. Bloom tied the count in the fourth on Plumpton's assist, while Rochetti tallied another for Kinsmen with Kiwanis sewing it up at 3-all on a goal by Caravaggie, aided by Hallihan. Only one penalty was drawn in a clean struggle. The teams:

Kiwanis: Goal, Lehman; defence, Murphy, Patterson; centre, Carvaggie; wings, Doughty, Flynn; rover, Hallihan; subs, Stewart, Carter, Berardi, Dyer, Condon.

Westclox Girls Defeat C.G.E. By A 19-17 Score

Westclox girls pulled out a 19-17 victory over C.G.E. in a wild and woolly contest at the Bowl last night before several hundred fans. It was a slugfest, packed with hits, errors and arguments. There was a big holdup in the second frame due to arguments over pitchers' deliveries. H. Bradley had a finger broken trying to stop a drive by E. Craig in a ninth-inning rally. B. Blade was hurt in the seventh but stayed in the game. Both teams had five-run splurges at the last. A. Clarke started for C.G.E., allowing 11 hits and four walks as she fanned two. M. McCarthy took over in the fourth to give up eight bingles and a free ticket while striking out three. H. Bradley hurled nearly nine innings for Westclox, allowing 16 hits and three walks while fanning one. M. Snowden finished the tilt.

P. Bigelow realized a player's dream by homering with the sacks loaded in the thrid. She also got a triple and single, while M. McCarthy hit a triple and two singles. A. Clarke conked three hits and G. Mann two. For Westclox, A. Sturgeon got a homer, triple, double and single. M. Selkirk, M. Ferguson and J. Corley had three hits apiece, and M. Allison two. Fielding features were supplied by J. McCrank, P. Bigelow, A. Sturgeon and M. Allison and Westclox tossed in a double play. The teams

Favor Buffalo To Win Title

PORT DALHOUSIE, Ont., July 30.—(CP).— It was strictly up to Toronto Argonauts to-day to stop Buffalo Westsides from copping the club championship honors at the Royal Canadian Henley. But the swing of the pendulum back to Buffalo after a four year lapse seemed quite definite.

After two days' competition in the 56th annual regatta, Mike Broderick's Buffalonians led their arch-rivals from Toronto by five points—30 to 25.

Each of the rival clubs has an entry in eight of the 12 finals on to-day's program. Argos have taken the title every year since 1934 and in all but one year Westsides were runners-up.

Aside from the duel for club honors, the spotlight was focussed on the championship singles and the championship eights.

Joe Burk of the Penn A.C., Philadelphia, defending champion and diamond sculls winner this year, was favored in the singles event.

Pitted against him were William Carroll of Westsides, association champion and three Argonauts — Johnny Coulson, Jimmy Russell and Herb Miller.

HITS FASTEST 100

WOODBRIDGE LOSES TO LOCAL LACROSSERS IN SPEEDY GAME

Gain Victory In Hot Tilt By 12-9 Score

The Petes pulled out a 12-9 O.L.A. senior "B" victory over Woodbridge here last night before 600 fans in a good game. The contest was a little late in starting, and the visitors didn't have their subs till the end of the first frame, but it was a nifty number most of the way. Woodbridge put on a strong spurt halfway through to draw up to within a goal of the locals. The Petes scored eight in a row without a comeback and then the visitors blanked them and scored seven in a row.

Play was lightning fast the last half with the ball moving rapidly from end to end and the players hitting a high clip. While it was a bit rugged in spots, and enlivened by two fist fights, the game was mostly clean. Whitton and James mixed in lively style in the second quarter, and shortly afterward Kingdon and Sloan grappled and were gated, too. The score was 5-0 for the homesters in the first, 8-3 for them at halftime and 8-7 going into the fourth. The Petes finished stronger.

Goalies Shine

Both goalies shone in this tilt, with Whitton, Worthy, E. Creighton, Chute, Hendy and Vitarelli all playing a steady game throughout for the winners, and their teammates close behind. Kingdon starred for the losers, and Brewer, James and Hatton also turned in a fine effort, with the whole team playing good lacrosse after the first period.

The teams:

Woodbridge: Goal, Frankum; defence, McKenzie and James; centre, Castator; wings, Collings and Norton; rover, Brewer; alternates, Kingdon, Hatton and Wilkes.

Petes: Goal, R. Creighton; defence, Whitton and Worthy; centre, Reid; wings, Dundas and Dallin; rover, King; alternates, Chute, Sloan, Magee, E. Creighton, Hendy and Vitarelli.

Sandy Advances To Golf Final With Ted Adams

LONDON, Ont., July 30 (CP).—A 21-year-old Missouri school teacher and a London insurance man met today for the serious business of settling Canada's amateur golf championship.

The insurance man is Ross Somerville, Canada's ace amateur, just plain "Sandy" to thousands, known on both sides of the Atlantic for his golfing ability.

The school teacher, whose vocation would never be guessed as this quiet, soft-spoken southerner plays methodically over a golf course, is Ted Adams of Columbia, Mo.

He is no big name in golf—not yet. He claims no championships.

Adams neither smokes nor drinks. He has a ready smile, a winning personality, jet black hair and eyes that just about match it.

That's the fellow who today faced Somerville, six times champion, former United States amateur titleholder and several times entrant in the British amateur.

Playing his semi-final match yesterday with a brand of golf that was just about unbeatable in any championship, Somerville overwhelmed Ven Savage of Salt Lake City, 12 and 11. The golfing faithful were still thumbing the record books today to try to find a worse drubbing in a Canadian semi-final.

Away back before the turn of the century there were two final matches that ended with the same score. And in the 1930 final right here in London Somerville handed out an 11 and 10 lacing to J. W. Platt of Philadelphia.

Adams entered the final by defeating Ed Kingsley of Salt Lake City, one up.

Cricket Results

LONDON, July 30 (C.P. Cable).—Yorkshire retained first position in the English County cricket championship yesterday with a six-wickets decision over the bottom-place Northamptonshire eleven. Second and third positions in the standing were switched.

Although idle, Middlesex climbed into the runner-up position ahead of Lancashire, beaten on the first innings by Essex. The third day's play of the Lancashire-Essex contest was rained out.

Worcestershire surprised with a decisive 10-wickets victory over the fourth-place Surrey eleven and Hampshire improved its standing by an innings and 62-run triumph over Warwickshire. First-innings points were registered by Leicestershire over Sussex and Nottinghamshire over Gloucestershire. Rain halted to-day's play in these matches.

In first-class encounters the touring Australians overwhelmed Somerset by an innings and 218 runs and Glamorgan defeated Sir Julien Cahn's eleven by six wickets.

The scores:

Northamptonshire 283 and 155 (Greenwood 52, Verity five for 52); Yorkshire 311 and 128 runs for four wickets—at Scarborough.

Essex 300 and 85 for five; Lancashire 178 (Wasbrook 52, Nichols six for 65, P. Smith four for 59)—at Manchester.

Worcestershire 406 for nine declared and seven runs for no wickets; Surrey 149 and 261 (Perks five for 87)—at the Oval.

Warwickshire 238 for nine declared and 123 (Wyatt 58 not out, Herman six for 53); Hampshire 423 for seven declared—at Bournemouth.

Nottinghamshire 332 and 97 for two; Gloucestershire 227 (Hammond 111, Emmett 53, Woodhead five for 56)—at Nottingham.

Somerset 110 and 136 (Fleetwood-Smith five for 30); Australians 464 for six declared—at Taunton.

Sir Julien Cahn's eleven 215 and 69 (W. M. Jones three wickets for 11 runs); Glamorgan 210 and 75 for four—at Newport.

One-Run Victories Feature Games In National League

NEW YORK, July 30 (AP).—Along about this time every years, the figure filberts confidently conclude that Joe Zilch or Luke Glutz has a chance to break Babe Ruth's 41-year-old record of 60 homers for one season. Baseball men say those filberts might just as well spend the time figuring up their next year's income tax(because they'd come as close to the right answer. For, when you start monkeying with the Babe's all-time fence-busting high, the way to do it is to begin with the final month of the season—that gaudy September when he parked 17 balls among the cash customers—and work back.

This year, however, the boys might have something there. Big Hankus Pankus Greenberg is on a spree. Right now he's 15 games in front of the Bam's record four-base pace.

But the odds seem against big Hank doing it. He's a right-handed hitter, and American league parks are a lot friendlier to the fellows swinging from the south side of the plate. He still has to meet up with Ruth's merriest month. And, the Detroit lineup as now constituted, offers opposition pitchers a chance to walk the Jewish jolter rather than let him tag one of their select offerings.

Adds Two to Total

On the other hand, there's Hank with 35 round-trip whacks to his credit already. He hit two more yesterday as the Tigers trampled the Athletics 9-2—the third time in a week and the sixth time this season he has paired his pokes. He's getting hotter all the time, has clouted 13 this month to date, is the only man to hammer one in every park in the league. Ruth belted his 35th in his 105th game. Greenberg's 35th came in his 90th yesterday.

Greenberg's is taking a lot of the play away from the red hot fight the Yankees and Cleveland Indians are putting on in the pennant race. The Yankees remained on top by a slim game yesterday when a bad case of butter-fingers a-field enabled them to nip Chicago White Sox 4-3. Hal Trosky poled out a pair of four-baggers as the tribe trampled the Senators 12-4.

Butter-fingers also beat Chicago Cubs, as Billy Judges' error enabled the Phillies to push a run in the 11th inning for a 5-4 decision.

Pittsburgh Pirates stayed five games in front of the National league pack by topping Brooklyn Dodgers 7-6, after kicking a five-run lead away. The second-place Giants came from way behind to tie in the seventh and beat the Reds 5-4 in the ninth.

Debs Garms' payoff single drove in a pair of runs and Boston bees nipped the Cardinals 2-1.

Bears Flatten Buffalo By 8-0 Count

TORONTO, July 30 ((C.P.). — They're getting ready to ship the International Baseball League pennant to the Cleaners in Newark, where the Bears are about convinced they're going to have plenty more use for it next season.

Twelve games in front with a third of the season to go, the Bears' lead looks safe. The second place Buffalo Bisons, who have come closest to the Bears this season (once they were only nine games away), are among the first to admit their superiority.

Several times during the season, the Bisons have come up against the Bears with high hopes of cutting into the champions' margin, only to get batted down like a bunch of tailenders. They ran into the same sort of reception last night.

The Bears, with Atley Donald pitching a brilliant three-hitter for his twelfth victory of the season, flattened the Bisons 8-0. While Donald was subduing the Herd, fanning six batters in the process, the Bears tore into big Bob Kline and Norm Hibbs for 10 hits, six of them for extra bases. Frankie Kelleher led the bombardment with a homer, double and single and drove in three runs. Les Scarsella also hit for the circuit and Donald helped his own cause with a double and single in two trips to the plate.

The teams were scheduled to play a double-header, but rain, which also washed out the Tornto-Jersey City and Montreal-Baltimore contests, forced postponement of the second game.

Rochester Red Wings and Syracuse Chiefs managed to play their twin bill, with the Chiefs taking the opener 5-2 and the Wings the nightcap 2-0.

The Chiefs backed Ted Kleinhan's four-hit flinging with a four-run splurge in the third inning of the opener, but the Wings came up with some high-class portsided hurling by Ken Raffensberger in the windup. Raffensberger stopped the Chiefs with three hits and fanned eight to score his 11th victory of the season against three defeats.

Millbrook Lays Its Fair Plans

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, July 30. — The regular meeting of the Millbrook Agricultural Society was held in the council chamber on Wednesday evening with the president, P. Stinson, in the chair, and a fair number present.

Routine business conducted included the choice of judges for the fall fair, which this year is to be on Thursday and Friday, September 29 and 30. Judges, who will be secured if possible, included: For light horses, S. Hastings, of Tottenham, or T. Cowan, of Orono; heavy horses, F. Beatty, Brooklyn, W. Ross, Campbellford; dairy cattle, W. J. Murphy, Lindsay; beef cattle, J. Webb, Oshawa; sheep and swine, left with Agricultural Representative A. E. Summers, junior farmers being used for three classes; poultry, to be decided upon later; roots and vegetables, Jos. Hickson, Lindsay, or Bruce Johnston, North Monaghan; grain and seed, H. A. Attwool, Millbrook; domestic science, Miss Taylor, Cartwright; ladies' work, Mrs. H. Mitchell, Port Hope; fruits, W. J. Oke, Peterborough; flowers, David Jordan, Peterborough, who has for over forty years performed this service.

Referring to the fact that, owing to the all day rain on July 1st, when the Agricutlural Society holds its annual sports' day and street dance at night, the president noted that all events this year had been postponed; a mistake, however had been made in not arranging for a dance at night, as scores of people had come to the village expecting such to take place. After discussion, it was decided not to go on with the postponed event this season, but in future to advertise on the bills that, in case of rain, the dance will be in the Armouries at night. An orchestra of radio fame had been arranged for this year, at heavy expense, and it was not thought wise to bring them in face of adverse weather conditions.

In connection with the revision of the prize list it was decided to include another special for a single waggon horse in harness in the Percheron class; and to combine the Shropshires and Southams; and the Lincolns, Leicesters and Cotswolds in the sheep classes. The prize money for the speeding in the ring was limited to one hundred dollars, and the matter of races was left with the committee for ultimate decision; also the entertainment at night, and the dance, were left with the committee for that purpose. The same committee, president, vice-president and secretary, will look after the donations for special prizes.

A letter from the Department was read, offering an "Agricultural Service Diploma" to be awarded to "anyone who has rendered outstanding service to agriculture, or to rural life in the community," and the decision was unanimous that Mr. Thomas Donaldson, for over sixty years a director and active worker in the local society, and a pioneer settler who has always given constructive service in the township, should have this honor. The district director, Mrs. H. Mitchell, of Port Hope, will be so notified.

It was decided, on motion, to split the fifty dollars in the 'draw' last year into three prizes this season—$25, $15 and $10. Coupons will be placed with local merchants, and distributed as widely as possible, this having been found a good advertising effort in the initial year of its trial, 1937.

Delays Balloon Trip

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 30.—(AP). —Anthony Fairbanks began his vacation to-day but not in the way he hoped—in a balloon. A weather man's forecast ruined his plans. Fairbanks and a group of others had hoped to take of fi ntheir balloon on a trip to New Jersey, but after scanning forecasts, he said, "The trip's off until later this year."

Japan's gasoline rationing has caused a boom in street car riding.

Spinning Wheel

Four generations of the Webb family in Alnwick Township have used this home-made spinning wheel. The wheel was made 70 years ago by the late John Douglas of Alnwick and has been in use each year, and even yet, although the Webb family have all the modern conveniences including electricity in their large home, they still use the old spinning wheel. Mrs. James Webb seen in the picture spends many hours spinning and knitting socks for her husband and son.

Rangoon Calls Extra Troops

RANGOON, Burma, July 30. — (AP)—Additional troops were called out Friday to restore order in this sacred city where 46 have died the past four days in fighting between Burmese Buddhists and Indian Moslems.

During the night knives flashed, stones flew and sticks were wielded from the darkness as troops patrolled the streets in armored cars, set up machine-guns and barricaded trouble areas. A Government decree forbade assembly in groups of five or more.

Great Britain maintains 4,500 English troops in Burma, and the additional forces called to-day were two volunteer corps—the Burmese Auxiliary Force and the Burmese Rifles.

Special guards were posted at banks and jewelry stores as a wave of looting continued. Vounteer staffs aided city hospitals in caring for the injured, numbering more than 300.

Forty were killed yesterday in the biggest riot of the past several days, when Buddhists undertook to avenge what they held to be an insult to their faith in a new Moslem book.

The book was withdrawn, but Buddhist monks and their sympathizers entered a native bazaar where a Moslem trader was reported to have distributed copies.

Two newspapers suspended publication to-day, protesting an official ban on news and pictures of the rioting which authorities felt might inspire new hatred among the religious groups.

Wed In Plane Couple Honeymoon Despite Ruling Act Illegal

Pontiac, Mich., July 30. MR. AND MRS. Edward L. von Glatte, honeymooning here today, still don't know if their marriage, performed in an airplane three miles above Los Angeles, was legal.

Los Angeles legal authorities were divided on whether the captain of an airliner three miles up was in the same position as the Captain of a ship beyond the three-mile limit at sea, who is entitled to perform a marriage.

Mrs. von Glatte, 24, is sure her marriage is legal, and refuses to go through another ceremony, although Los Angeles civic authorities told the county registrar not to record the marriage.

Rebels Cut Dams To Flood Ebro

HENDAYE, France, July 30.—(AP)—Spanish insurgents opened all dams today in the Ebro river and its tributaries in an attempt to sweep away bridges behind the government's advancing armies on the Catalan front.

An insurgent news agency report from St. Jean-de-Luz, France, said General Franco's high command had released a swirling nine-foot-high wave of floodwater from dams high in the Pyrenees Mountains.

It said the torrents "made the river impassable" in 30 minutes.

Government advices admitted the Ebro had risen noticeably, presumably from the opening of dams. They denied, however, their bridges had been swept away and insisted their communications lines were intact.

Insurgents said they had breached all the dams of the Noguera-Pallaresa river and the Segre hydro-electric system above the government's feeder lines across the Ebro.

The waters, swollen by recent rains, were said by the insurgents to have carried away all that was left of the pontoon bridges after three days of air bombardment.

Dispatches from Barcelona said government militiamen were advancing north and south of the insurgent headquarters city of Gandesa on a circular front extending 15 miles in the Catalan war zone.

Poison Pen Letter Probe Demanded

DETROIT, July 30—(AP). — The president of the United Automobile Workers of America disclosed today he had asked postal inspectors to investigate what he said were "poison pen" letters sent to locals of the Committee for Industrial Organization Union.

Homer Martin, the U.A.W. head, charged that the letters requested funds and were sent by "some of the four suspended international vice-presidents of the union who are on trial before the executive board."

One of the letters, Martin said, was introduced as evidence yesterday at the secret hearing. He said it was dated March 30, 1938, and bore a Detroit post office box number as the return address.

Martin suspended the four vice-presidents—Richard T. Frankensteen, Walter N. Wells, Ed Hall and Wyndham Mortimer—and George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer, who already has been expelled, June 13, for alleged "Communistic activities" and attempts to "disrupt" the union.

Volunteer Firemen Rally In Barrie

BARRIE, Ont., July 30—(CP)—Ontario gathered here Friday for the Ontario gathered here today for the 37th annual convention of the Firemen's Association of Ontario. The convention closes Monday.

It was expected about 100 brigades will be represented, and that at least 5,000 firemen would attend.

Registration started today when a long queve of delegates formed before the registration desk.

Be-decked with banners and flags, the stores and streets of Barrie presented a gala scene in welcoming thousands of visitors here. Firemen arrived by train, bus, truck and automobile.

A civic welcome was tendered the delegates by Mayor H. G. Robertson, Barrie, and Richard J. Wolfenden, chief of the Barrie fire brigade.

"There should be closer cooperation between municipal bodies, such astown and city councils, and volunteer fire associations, with regard to insurance rates," Mayor Robertson said.

"If a town or city spends good money to improve the efficiency of a brigade by adding new equipment and fire-fighting apparatus, then this should have a direct bearing on rates of insurance in that town or city."

Mayor Robertson explained that at present, there was no relation between the value of equipment and rates of insurance.

"That is a question for legislation by an organization such as this," His Worship suggested, adding that if municipal councils could see a reduction in insurance rates around the corner, they might be more willing to purchase better fire fighting equipment and spend more money on fire bridgades.

Mussolini 55 Today Doesn't Boast It

ROME, July 30—(AP)—Premier Mussolini Friday observed his 55th birthday without fanfare.

Italian newspapers, usually lyric about any occasion involving the premier, were silent. In the Mussolini concept, fascist Italy personifies youth; Mussolini personifies fascism; hence any notice of his advancing age is taboo.

Il Duce doesn't look much older than a year ago. His head is almost completely bald, his waist is thicker, but his vigor continues.

He pilots his own bombing plane. He can lead his aides in stiff inspections on foot. He can show up less hardy men in doing the Italian version of the German military goose step.

Earlier this month he gave peasants a view of his exuberant health by helping them thresh grain under a blazing sun, appearing before them stripped to the waist and proudly flexing his firm muscles.

20,000 Pheasants Ready For Hunt

TORONTO, July 29.—(CP).—Ontario pheasant shooters wil have 20,000 birds to shoot at next October instead of 5,000 as was the case last year. D. J. Taylor, Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, today said that a revolutionary change in the province's pheasant shooting policy will be in effect in October when 50 townships in 13 counties are opened to hunters for one to three days.

"Each township will issue from 100 to 250 special licenses," Mr. Taylor said. "The township clerk will have the right to reject the application of any person he doesn't think is a real sportsman."

The Deputy Minister said the Department experimented with the system last year and found it a success despite the fact only 5,000 government-raised birds were released during the year. The 20,000 birds available this year is the greatest number to be made available in any one year in the history of the province.

Open Townships.

Following are the townships which will be opened in October: Onondaga and South Dumfries in Brant County; Markham, King, East Gwillimbury, Scarborough in York County; Caledon, Chinguacousy, in Peel County; Bertie, Hubertson, Wainfleet, Willoughby, Pelham, Thorold and Crowland, in Welland County; Dereham, in Oxford County; Townsend and Wingham, in Norfolk County; Metcalf and Westminster, in Middlesex County; Caister, Clinton, Gainsboro, Gratham, Louth, Niagara, North Grimsby and South Grimsby, in Lincoln County; Nelson, Trafalgar, in Halton County; Canboro, Dunn, North Cayuga, Oneida, Rainham, Seneca, South Cayuga, Walpole, Moulton and Sherbrooke in Haliday County; Bayham, South Dorchester, in Elgin County; Ancaster, Barton and Beverley, Binbrook, East Flamboro, and Saltfleet, in Wentworth County.

Mr. Taylor said the Government hopes to eliminate the type of shooting seen in the province three or four years ago when hunters left a trail of damaged property and dead pets and live stock in their wake.

"We have entered into an agreement with each Township Council," he said. "They receive the dollar fee and we place pheasants in the township, which then had the status of a controlled game preserve."

Township residents, so they may be identified, must purchase a 25-cent licence to hunt. Some townships will be open for hunting only one day, other others for two, and some for three.

Charge Japs Bomb Refugees Purposely

SHANGHAI, July 30—(AP). — Japanese fliers were accused in Chinese reports to-day of causing hundreds of civilian deaths during persistent bombardments of the Middle Yangtse River region.

Chinese despatches from Nanchang said Japanese raiders spied 3,000 refugees in the Lushan Mountains south of Kiukiang and dropped bombs on them, killing "uncounted hundreds."

A Japanese naval communique charged that Chinese planes bombed the Japanese hospital ship Tachibana Maru near Kiukiang although she flew a Red Cros sflag. No mention was made of the damage.

Another report asserted Japanese airmen raided Nanchang, important air base 90 miles south of fallen Kiukiang, "gateway to the Hankow region," and dropped 30 bombs that killed or wounded 600 and destroyed many houses.

The past two days, it was said, Japanese planes have continuously raked the Kiukiang-Nanchang area with bombs and machine guns and demolished 400 buildings.

The Japanese were silent about the trend of battle on the Kiukiang front, but Chinese maintained the situation on the south bank of the Yangtse was "developing favorably."

A Chinese counter-offensive was said to have severed Japanese lines south of Kiukiang, only 135 miles downstream from the provisional capital of Hankow, while "further Chinese air attacks on Japanese warships" near Kiukiang "damaged seven more."

Chinese reports said their forces were counter-attacking at Taihu, while their rearguard units were blocking Japanese attempts to advance northward from Kiukiang.

Insurgents Active On 3 Fronts

Continuing their drive against Valencia, insurgent forces are reported to have been repulsed with heavy losses in many sectors and held at a virtual standstill in others as the loyalist forces battle desperately to stave off the capture of Valencia. In the Don Benito sector of western Spain (1) the rebels report that two of their columns pinched off a former loyalist salient (shown by broken line) by meeting near Campanario. At the same time insurgent forces were massing in the Benabares region (2) to advance on Seo de Urgel and Puigcerda. Slow progress was reported around Viver (3) in the eastern drive toward Valencia.

Attic Sleeper And Dam Trespasser Gives Lakefield, And City Double Drowning Scares

Two suspected drownings gave police and residents of Peterborough and Lakefield a few hours' anxiety yesterday.

At Lakefield Buster Whitton, prominent lacrosse star, was thought to have been drowned in the canal across the street from his home. Police and residents of the town searched for his body for two hours from two to four o'clock in the afternoon, found he had been asleep in his attic all the while.

In Peterborough a 15-year-old girl Jean Lalonde, Waterford Street, brought firemen hurrying to the London Street dam with a report she had seen a girl, aged about eight years, fall into the water. An hour's search and the fact that no girl in the district was reported missing, convinced the searchers the young girl had been mistaken.

Whitton, 28 years old, and night employed, usually slept during the day. His wife wanted him to sign a cheque, and went to his bedroom to wake him. He was not there, although all his clothes were still in the house with the exception of pyjamas he had been wearing when she saw him a short time before. Frantic, believing he might have walked in his sleep and fallen into the canal, she notified Police Chief Wallace Hendren.

The Lakefield Fire Department turned out in full force, together with a band of volunteer searchers, and the canal was dragged for two hours, when Whitton appeared on the verandah of his home. He had been asleep in the attic, had been awakened by the noise of a car attempting to stop. He looked out the attic window and saw a large crowd gathered at the edge of the canal and went out of the house to learn the cause of the excitement, only to find his own appearance caused considerably more.

It was nearly half-past nine o'clock at night when Jean Lalonde ran to the home of F. T. Tuggey on Wateford Street to say she had seen a girl disappear from the darkened dam. She and a four-year-old brother were about to climb over the newly erected fence across the dam when she noticed a young girl, whose age she later estimated to be about eight years, crossing ahead of her. Suddenly the unknown girl disappeared from sight, although she heard no outcry, heard no splash, she said. When she reached the spot where she had last seen the girl she saw no ripples on the water. Police said no youngster had been reported missing, although all parents in the neighborhood heard about the reported drowning in a few minutes.

World's Fair Exhibits Science Show

One year before the rest of the world will have an opportunity to see the New York World's Fair, Peterborough folks will witness a few of the feature exhibits, At the Exhibition Grounds next Thursday and Friday, under the sponsorship of The Examiner and civic clubs of this city, General Motors will present "Previews of Progress," a dramatic presentation of the modern wonders of science.

"Previews of Progress" is a stage show, and more than two tons of laboratory apparatus will be used in the demonstrations and experiments which make up the show. By actual demonstrations of things heretofore believed impossible, the performance clearly points out that the future holds new opportunities for progress and development.

Some idea of the life humans will lead 20 years hence will be afforded by the science spectacle. Conveniences of tomorrow which today are merely scientific curiousities will be dramatically demonstrated. Many of the experiments to be conducted on the platform in "Previews of Progress" will form the foundation, in all probability, for new industries which will provide a higher standard of living and bring about the employment of thousands of men.

The amazing science circus will come to Peterborough on the invitation of the Examiner with the combined support of the Chamber of Commerce, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions Club, Wisemen and Kinsmen Clubs. Through the co-operation of merchants, manufacturers, and other townspeople a huge welcoming parade is being planned which is expected to be one of the biggest and best ever conducted in Peterborough.

Only one performance will be held each evening Thursday and Friday at the Exhibition Grounds. The curtain will rise promptly at 9 o'clock, and the show will last nearly two hours. Admission is absolutely free to all.

Peterboro' Uses More Power At Less Cost

The average domestic consumer of electric power in Peterborough used 7½ times as much power in 1937 as he did twenty years ago in 1917 and paid only ½ times as much for it.

This was one of the favorable comparisons in a summary of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission's annual report for 1937 as presented to the Utilities Commission Thursday afternoon by R. L. Dobbin, manager.

"We are part of the Eastern Ontario system which comprises all the municipalities in central Ontario, east of Toronto," Mr. Dobbin commented in setting forth the following comparison of total revenue for the Peterborough and Eastern Ontario systems.

The statement proceeds as follows:

Earnings

	Peterborough	Eastern Ontario
Domestic	39.9%	42.4%
Commercial Light	21.7	21.0
Power	31.4	27.6
Street Lighting..	6.3	6.8
Merchandise	.7	2.2
Total Earnings	100.0%	100.0%
Expenses
Power Purchased	66.7%	67.8%
Operating Costs	15.2	18.7
Fixed Charges ..	18.1	13.5
Total Expenses	100.0%	100.0%

It will be noted that power revenue is a larger percentage of our total revenue than for the system generally and that our domestic revenue is not as high.

It will also be noted that operating costs are a lower percentage of our total cost than that of the system generally and that our fixed chrges are considerably greater. A large number of municipalities are out of debt while we still have five years to go before we pay off our original debenture issue.

Our cost of power increased $28,000 over 1936 in spite of a reduction for part of the year in the interim rate.

Domestic Customers

The number of kilowatt-hours per year per consumer was 2040 as compared with 1716 in 1936, this is nearly a 20% increase. In 1917 the number of kilowatt-hours per consumer was 264.

The average cost per kilowatt-hour to the consumer was 1.2 cents in 1937 as compared with 1.5 cents in 1936. In 1917 the cost was 4.1 cents per kilowatt-hour.

In 1937 the average consumer paid us $25.44 per year as compared with $25.08 in 1936. In 1917 the average consumer paid us $10.56.

These figures show that the average domestic consumer used seven and one-half times as much current in 1937 as he did in 1917 and paid only two and one-half times as much for it.

The annual report of the H.E.P.C. groups together twenty-five cities over 10,000 population in Ontario. The net average cost per kilowatt-hour to the consumer for these cities was 1.45 cents and the monthly use per consumer was 155 kilowatt-hours. It will thus be seen that Peterborough consumers using 170 kilowatt hours at 1.2 cents use more than the average for the cities of Ontario but pay less per unit.

Commercial Lighting Consumer

The average consumer used 4908 kilowatt-hours in 1937 and paid $85.20 for these, or 1.7 cents per kilowatt-hour. In 1936 he used 4392 kilowatt-hours and paid $81.84 for these, or 1.9 cents per kilowatt-hour. In 1917 he used 960 kilowatt-hours and paid $41.88 for these, or 4.3 cents per kilowatt-hour.

These figures show that the average commercial consumer used over five times as many kilowatt-hours in 1937 as he did in 1917 and paid very little more than twice as much.

Power Consumers

The average revenue per horsepower per year for 1937 was $19.09 in Peterborough and for the twenty-five cities grouped in the report, $20.64.

In Peterborough the power consumers paid 1.01 cents per kilowatt-hour in 1937. No figures are available for the other cities.

All Consumers

The average revenue per kilowatt-hour for all consumers in Peterborough was 1.24 cents in 1937 and the average cost of supplying these consumers was 1.18 cents per kilowatt-hour."

There was a rare display of the Aurora Borealis early this morning when the sky was alive with shooting green colored streaks. Many citizens watched the fireworks display put on by the Northern Lights with great interest.

DRAW STARTS 9 A.M.

Final preparations for the big Civic Holiday tournament on the Peterborough Club greens have been made and the members are set to start the first draw at 9 a.m. (daylight time) instead of 9.30 as first arranged.

MATCH CANCELLED

The match arranged to be played at the Oval on Monday (Civic Holiday) between Whitaker's and St. Edmund's of Toronto has been cancelled. The local secretary received word this morning that the visitors could not make the trip.

JUNIOR FAIR ACTIVITIES.

Junior farmers of Durham county are sending sixteen head of cattle to the Peterborough Exhibition's junior division. Four breeds will be represented in that group. Joe Tully of Otonabee and F. C. Patterson selected this week eight head of Holsteins for the calf club entry from this county.

A LIGHT DOCKET.

Three drunks formed the docket at police court this morning before Magistrate E. A. Gee. One was a Rama Reserve Indian whose case was remanded until Wednesday night. Another was an eighteen-year-old boy who pleaded not guilty and asked for and received an adjournment until next Saturday. The third accused followed a similar course.

SEND VEGETABLE EXHIBIT.

John Kitney and F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative, visited the members of the Peterborough Vegetable Growers' Association this week for the purpose of preparing for the Association's composite exhibit at the C.N.E. Mr. Paterson said he had seen quite a spendid lot of vegetables, and the members were all keen about sending the strongest exhibit they can select.

MOURNS DEATH OF "FRIDAY".

Jimmy Conway of Hood and Cumming's garage is mourning the death of "Friday" the black bear at the filtration plant that was killed by lightning Thursday. The cub was captured by Ross Hood a year ago last Good Friday, back of Buckhorn, and Mr. Conway had brought him down to the city, and nursed him along during the first days of its captivity at the garage. Then, "Friday" was presented to Ross Dobbin's zoo after Jimmy found that he had taken on more than he bargained for. Since then he has watched the cub grow into a regular sized black bear, and the prize specimen at the menagerie. Farmers are grieving for stricken crops after this weeks flattening, but Jimmy is thinking of the friendly little bear Ross Hood turned over to him; and is speculating whether it mightn't have lived longer back in the woods.

CHIEF HONORED.

Fire Chief George Gimblett was elected second vice-president of the Dominion Fire Chiefs' Association yesterday during the organization's annual meeting at Sault Ste. Marie.

A BUSY MAN.

Two hundred and forty-nine note book pages of closely written shorthand has been taken so far on the police enquiry which was adjourned last night after three days. Figuring three hundred words to the page the total would be 74,200 words of evidence. The shorthand reporter from Toronto who took down the evidence was ready for a well-earned rest when the judge announced the adjournment last night.

GRANDSTAND FOR CROWD.

No admission will be charge to the grandstand at the Exhibition Park Monday for the motorcycle races that are being held under the auspieces of the Lions Club. This action has been taken by the club to enable the public to keep out of the infield and to avoid danger from possible accidents. Some of the local cyclists have been trying out the track this week, and although they are not in the same class with the "pro" riders, they intend to give a good account of themselves in the events that have been included for them.

IVY FLOURISHING.

Ivy planted at the base of the Hunter street bridge on the east side of the river a few years ago is making splendid progress and soon will be curling over the railing at the top. The suggestion was made by ex-Mayor Roland Denne to relieve the bare walls and the results are even better than anticipated. The bridge from the Ashburnham Bowl presents a picture of rugged beauty and the tourist camp with its grassy award and spreading elms makes the spot the prettiest in the city. Few people, however, seem to realize that the place exists and only by going under the bridge can one really appreciate the beauty of the section.

WANT WARD SYSTEM.

Storm signals are flying in Ashburnham if street talk is any criterion, and Ashburnham residents incensed over the closing of the London street dam are clamoring now for the reviving of the Ratepayers' Association former a few years ago. Gossip in several quarters indicates the residents want the ward system back to ensure representation on the City Council, a stop sign at Douro and Armuro and Armour road, trees planted on the Hunter street boulevard from the bridge to Mark street church on the north side, and improvement to the street lighting on Hunter street. Arrival of the autumn might reveal that Ashburnham residents will demand a place in the sun.

CHECKER-BOARDS ERECTED.

Board of Works Department erected two checker-board signs at each end of Douro street in Ashburnham this week as a safety measure. One at the west end of the street warns motorists of the blind end and may save someone from drivng over the bank into the Otonabee River, while at Douro and Armour Road the board will slow down traffic at what is regarded as one of the worst corners in the city. During the past four year there has been six accidents at this particular spot.

THE COUNTY HERD.

Peterborough county will not be represented in the herd competition at the Toronto Exhibition next month. Several enquiries failed to elicit the reason local breeders are withdrawing from the field which they entered several years ago with encourging results. Those who have been interested in the project of keeping Peterborough cattle in competition with those of other county groups will probably feel much disappointed that the ambition is about to become grounded this year.

LIFEGUARD BUSY.

Leonard Martin, former rugby player on Peterborough Collegiate teams, who was appointed lifeguard at Inverlea a short time ago, has been kept busy during recent weeks watching the hundreds of children and adults who use Inverlea bathing beach. Reliable sources state he brought seven swimmers to shore within a four-day period, most of these getting into trouble near first pier, where the current is tricky and often surprises those not familiar with the river when they attempt to reach the first concrete pier.

Germany has nearly 20,000,000 employed workers, a new high record.

Canada Will Never Lose Tourists Says Visiting Yachtsman Tickled With His Reception

Canada will never lose the tourist traffic from the United States so long as the people continue to be so friendly and hospitable, Skipper B. H. Perry, of the yacht "Lucetta" remarked yesterday when his cruiser docked at George street en route to Lake Ontario and its home port, New York.

Mr. Perry with his wife, daughter and Walter Ellison came from New York up through the Hudson river, Erie canal and the Great Lakes to Georgian Bay and is now cruising the Trent waterway on his southward voyage.

"It is the most glorious trip we have ever made, he remarked and added that he feels more at home in Canada than he does in the States. "The canal and other waters are marvellously marked for the benefit of navigators and what surprises me is the service that is given by the lockmasters on the whole system," he said. He explained that he blew the whistle on leaving the Lift Locks and that both bridges and the gate locks at the lake were ready for him to proceed, a fact that appeared to amaze him.

"The employees of the Erie canal could learn a valuable lesson if they saw the Canadian lockmasters at work and their attitude towards visitors," the American stated. He told a reporter he carried a gift of cigarettes from a friend in Cleveland to a chap named "Angus" who operates the Marine Railway on the upper stretches of the canal. 'This Scot exemplified Canadian courtesy and is well known by all the Americans who ever made the trip by boat through the Trent Waterway." The visitor added that new potatoes were the only fresh vegetable available at Tober Mory on Georgian Bay.

He is a member of the United States Power Squadron and a past Commander of the New York Squadron. This organizatin came into existence at Boston in 1912 as a result of a desire to create a naval auxiliary which would be useful to the country in a possible emergency and has gradually turned to teaching with a view to establishing a high standard of skill in the handling and navigation of yachts and to keep the waterways safe. To-day there are 2,500 members and the organization has extended to Detroit with a strong possibility of a similar organization starting in Canada with Windsor as a birthplace. Mr. Perry's boat flies the squadron flag, which is the reverse of the U.S. coastguard flag and can only be earned through attaining proficiency in the use of a boat. The flag is valued because it cannot be bought.

The "Lucetta" is a 42 foot craft and is powered with twin Elco engines. It is one of the largest boats to pass through the canal this year.

Motor Official Dies

REGINA, July 30 (C.P.).—W. J. Ward, 54, well known in Canadian automobile circles, president and general manager of Canadian Motors, Limited, Regina, died Thursday. Mr. Ward was born in Meaford, Ont., came to Winnipeg with the Ford Motor Company in 1910. During the Great War he served on the headquarters staff with the late Sir Arthur Currie.

Gordon Suggests Full Time Crown Attorney

Commenting this morning on the police enquiry Alderman Gordon suggested to the Examiner it might be advisable to request the Attorney General of Ontario to make the position of Crown Attorney a full time engagement.

"This is no reflection on Mr. McElderry," Ald. Gordon said, "but it seems to me the number of cases coming into the courts from the city and county has increased to such an extent that the Crown Attorney should be in a position to devote al his time to this work. That is my own impression only, and I don't know what others might think of it. The point is that Peterborough has grown in importance to the place where its Crown Attorney should be enabled to give all his time to that work."

Ald. Gordon said the inquiry would probably run through two more days, exceeding the $350 the council had appropriated, but the Legal committee had some surplus of funds that would cover the excess.

FICTION AND FEATURES

TWO WORLDS
BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, is in love with Dr. Julian Paige, a serious-minded young physician who declares he will not permit himself to fall in love with Noel because of the contrasting worlds in which they live. Determined to show Julian she has stamina, Noel gives up a long trip with her aunt, turns over her income of $100,000 to her uncle who is in financial difficulties, buys her first outfit of inexpensive clothes and tells Julian she is going to find ing house, she finds an ad for a a job. After moving to a dingy room-governess. About to start on her new adventure, she finds her purse has been stolen, leaving her with only $4. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 4

NOW THAT she had less than $4 left, following the theft on the park bench, Noel knew she would have to get a job of some kind at once. The money she had would probably last a day or so with careful managing. After that, she'd be penniless.

Noel was thankful that she had eaten a good breakfast. She might be able to go without her lunch and not miss it so much. And perhaps Julian would ask her to have dinner with him at the De Luxe.

It seemed very queer, almost laughable, in fact, that she, Noel Shayne, should be counting her nickels and hoping that a man would invite her to dinner, so she wouldn't have to spend part of the little money she had left. But then, of course, she wanted to have dinner with Julian, with or without an excuse. Just to be near him, to be within sound of his voice, was as near heaven as she could ever know on earth, he told herself.

One thing was certain, in order to save what she could, she'd have to walk all the way out to Belvedere place to see about the governess position. She knew exactly where it was for Belvedere place ran into Belvedere drive, a long and pretty boulevard, which was only a short distance from her own home. Then if she succeeded in getting the place, she could afford bus fare back. Noel had ridden on a bus only once in her life. That had been when she was returning from a party in the country in her little coupe, and had car trouble, several years ago. She had telephoned for a service car, and had ridden an interurban bus into town.

But Noel was accustomed to walking, for she had played golf and tennis a lot. However, long before she reached her destination, she was thankful that she was wearing the oxfords. She'd never have managed this long distance in high heels.

As it was, it was past noon when she reached the number on Belevdere place. The house was an enormous structure of gray stone. For a moment, Noel stood at the big stone entrance gates conscious of a feeling of panic. She was afraid her inexperience in applying for a position might cause her to do the wrong thing.

And this is what happened. She walked up to the imposing front door, with it beautiful fanlight and touched the bell.

The door was opened by a stiff-looking butler in mauve livery who held his head so high he had to look down his nose to see her.

"I've come to answer the advertisement for a governess," Noel tried to say in a steady confident voice.

"All applicants for jobs go to the side door," the butler said without moving a muscle of his face. He closed the door with a little bang.

For a moment Noel stood there looking angrily at the closed door. Then with a hilosophical shrug, she walked around a flagged path to what she supposed would be the side door. She hadn't known that a governess was classed with all other domestic help. But she'd remember it next time.

When she reached the side door, it was thrown instantly open. The same stiff-necked butler stood there. Noel could have laughed because he looked so much like a movie version of a butler. Maybe he had learned his manners from the movies. It was an amusing thought.

"Follow me," he told her curtly.

Noel followed him through a beautiful formal hall and up a long flight of carved stairs. Then she was ushered into a room which was so crowded with pink damask over-stuffed furniture and flowers that Noel did not at first see the blonde woman in the black lace negligee who was lying on a chaise lounge among innumerable little satin pillows.

When Noel's eyes met hers at last, the woman was staring at her rather peevishly through a lorgnette. She continued to stare for a long moment. The she looked at the butler. "Isn't there—I mean, aren't there some more girls out there—Hichens?"

"No modom, I sent the others away."

"Well, send this one away too. She won't do," the woman said coldly, and turned her face away.

"But Mrs. Garwood," the butler began coaxingly, "we had ought to —I mean, we should give this girl a chance."

Noel was again conscious of the lorgnette being turned in her direction. "What's your name? Where have you been working? Are you good at speaking French and giving music lessons on the piano?"

Noel felt confused at the sudden marrage of questions. She drew a quick breath and began, "My name is Noel Doran. I've worked—that is —I'm experienced with children. I've had training in French and music. I know, I mean—I feel sure I can please you."

Mrs. Garwood's protruding blue eyes were glaring at Noel. "I don't think you know what you mean!" she snapped. Then she called the butler who had resumed his stiff position near the door. "Show her out, Hichens."

Noel felt the butler's eyes upon her now, a queer light in his rather fishy eyes. But he spoke to the woman on the chaise longue. 'If modom will pahdon me," he began, "I suggest that we take this young lady's address—er—just in case—"

"Take it," was the impatient reply, "but she can't have the job."

Noel gave the butler her name and address, which he wrote down carefully in a small notebook.

As she made her way to the side door, he followed. "You're too pretty," he said, "that's your trouble." As he closed the door behind her, he said: "Maybe you'll try again some day."

As Noel walked around the flagged walk, she happened to look up. At one of the upstairs windows the face of a little girl was pressed against the window pane, a pale little thing with large unhappy eyes. Even in that one glimpse there was something about the wan little face that haunted Noel.

She felt that this was a very queer household indeed. A lovely old house with everything furnished in such perfect taste except the crowded sitting room belonging to its mistress. Both the butler and Mrs. Garwood seemed to have some strange difficulty with their English, speaking correctly for a time, even pompously, then lapsing into bad grammar. And Mrs. Garwood's manner and temper were almost insufferable.

The butler was queer, too, with his unnatural movie mannerisms. The whole atmopsphere of the place seemed sinister. Noel thought, but that, she supposed, was only her imagination. However, she felt that she would always remember the face of that little girl she had seen in the upstairs window.

Since she had failed in getting the place, there was nothing else to do but to walk back to town. Judging from the time it had taken her to get out here, it would be almost 6 when she reached the De Luxe. She was almost sick with disappointment at not getting the position as governess, since it seemed to be the one kind of work she could do. But the thought of seeing Julian, even if only for a few minutes, was cheering. She would pass the Medical Arts on her way back.

So she decided she would stop for a minute and see if he was busy. He had insisted that she was to keep in close touch with him, so in stopping by, she was only doing as he had asked. Noel smiled tiredly to herself, thinking how easy it was to find excuses to do the things one wanted to do.

But she was hoping so much Julian wouldn't be busy, and that he would suggest immediately that they go over to the De Luxe. It was surprising how hungry you grew when your pocketbook was almost empty.

A Henpecked Husband or a Doormat Wife Never Make For Happiness; Marriage Must Be a 50-50 Proposition If It Is To Be Successful

DEAR MISS DIX—My girl and I have one main topic of dispute. It is this: She says that marriage is a fifty-fifty proposition, that there should be no boss and that all domestic problems should be settled by mutual agreement and not by either one party. I say that there must be one person who is boss and that marriage is like business in that it must have some one individual who is at the head. What do you say? BOB.

ANSWER:

I think your girl is right; that the only happy marriages are those that are run on a fifty-fifty proposition, where a husband and wife have equal authority. A henpecked husband and a doormat wife are nobody's idea of matrimonial felicity.

Your comparison of marriage to business is good, but you don't carry it to the logical conclusion. When two men form a partnership, put into the business the same amount of capital and do the same amount of work neither one will submit to being bossed by the other one. Neither one is subservient to the others. Each has his own particular department in which he is supreme and they meet on a common plane for discussion of matters of finance, policy and the general good of the business. And they expect to share equally in the profits of the concern.

That is the way it should be in marriage. When a man and woman marry they form a partnership and they both put into it everything they have and are, the woman no less the man. Each should rule in his or her own sphere. The wife should not interfere in her husband's business. The husband should not poke his nose into the icebox, pry into the garbage can, audit the wife's accounts with the butcher and the baker and the candlestick maker, or tell her whether she should have pink curtains or blue in the bedroom. These are her affair, just as running his business is his affair, but when it comes to deciding on the domestic policy, about the budget and the rearing of the children, et cetera, then they should talk it over together and agree about what is wisest to be done.

If a girl hasn't enough sense and judgment to cope with her end of the partnership; if she doesn't know enough to be able to manage a house and spend money intelligently, or what to wear and how much lipstick to use; if she is so stupid she needs a boss to tell her what to do and how to do it, then she isn't fit to marry.

This question of who shall be the boss wrecks more marriages than any one thing and brings about more family quarrels. In many households there is one long battle from the altar to the grave between the husband and wife about which one shall rule the other. Sometimes the husband wins out and we have a cantankerous, nagging wife who takes out her venom over her defeat by thwarting her husband in little ways and being bitter and disgruntled and complaining. Sometimes the wife gets the upper hand and then we have a meek, spiritless man, whose ambition has been crushed out of him, or else one who takes to drink, or seeks solace with some other woman who will flatter him and restore his lost self-respect.

But always it is an unhappy home unless the husband and wife give and take equally, unless each accords the other equal rights, unless each gives the other liberty in his or her sphere, unless they share fifty-fifty in the profits and emoluments of marriage, as they share in its sacrifices and labors.

And no man need be afraid he won't be boss in his own household and that his wife won't look up to him and defer to him if he is worthy of it. If he shows the qualities of leadership and if his judgment is sound and just, his wife will be glad to be guided by him. For mighty few women like responsibility. It is something they duck whenever they have an excuse.

* * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—We have been married for only a few months. My husband seems to be happy and I could be if only he wouldn't be forever telling me about his former affairs with women—how beautiful this one was, how thrilling that one was and how much in love he was with another. He relates these domantic episodes in such a way that it draws an invidious comparison between me and those glamorous females and makes me feel as if I am just a sort of drab, unexciting, uninteresting, homely housewife with no charm whatsoever. I know I am not that way at all now, but I will be some day if he doesn't stop killing all of my self-confidence. Is there any way I can stop my husband's reminiscences and make him realize how much happier I would be if he would just let me fancy myself the only girl he ever really cared about? MARGOT.

ANSWER:

It is easy enough to stop him. The next time he begins relating some amorous episode break in with one of your own. When he tells you about some beautiful blonde, throw some stalwart football hero in his teeth. When he relates how much in love he was with Maud, tell him how near you came to marrying Tom. Resurrect all of your old dates and feed him on them morning, noon and night. When he blows up with jealousy, as he is sure to do, then have it out with him and tell him that it is no more pleasant to you to have to listen to him sing a song about his old loves than it is for him to have to hear about the men that you used to run around with before marriage.

Furthermore, you can tell him that neither a man nor a woman is a good sport who brags about his or her former love affairs after marriage and reveals the secrets of those who trusted him or her. Only cads kiss and tell.

Of course, your husband preferred you to any of the ladies whose charms he now exploits, or else he would not have picked you out from all the women he has loved as a wife. Hence you need not be jealous of them, or feel that he is belittling you when he ballyhoos their charms to you.

Indeed, quite the contrary is true and his whole object is to exploit himself in your eyes and make you feel how blest you are above other women to have captured such a lady killer for a husband.

But all the same, no woman wants to listen to her husband tell how much in love he was with some other woman and you are quite right to stop it.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, July 31

Sunday's horoscope is a rather perplexing one, with many signs of a subtle, mysterious or intriguing nature transpiring in the private affairs, but signs for enterprise and activity in other affiliations. It is probable that there may be peculiar entanglements in relation to elders, possibly in a sentimental way or involving some subtle undercurrents.

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for a year of rather unusual, secret or singular adventures or experiences, in which elders seem to have importance. Intrigue, romance or mystery prevails, although the faculties and forces may be under high pressure for success and attainment in a business way. Move discreetly in all affairs.

A child born on this day may have a rather profound and subtle nature, although being mentally alert, enterprising and energetic, its success being largely in cultural or professional channels.

For Monday, August 1

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather difficult day, with much to impede, thwart and confuse. Finances and credit may be involved, with the most promising situations coming through hard work and sound judgment, especially where the element of justice might be involved.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of some difficulties and possible financial embarrassments in which industry, application and good judgment may save the day. Private affairs may offset such perplexing and disconcerting situations.

A child born on this day may be hard-working and dependable, although rather eccentric, high strung, nervous and difficult to understand. It may have its crafty, shrwed and peculiar methods of attaining its ends, and may require sympathetic handling, owing to its sensitiveness.

For Tuesday, August 2.

A particularly lively yday is forecast from the predominate astral influences. There may be much merriment that may be marred by a lovers' quarrel. Business should be brisk. Writing and publicity also should thrive. Tact and strategy may be desirable in "tight" places.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively year, with much festivity, though it might be well to "keep the brakes on," as there is indication of violence and unruliness. Generally, however, matters should flourish.

A child born on this day may be lively and energetic, but possibly wayward. It may be full of fun and like parties. It should be quite popular.

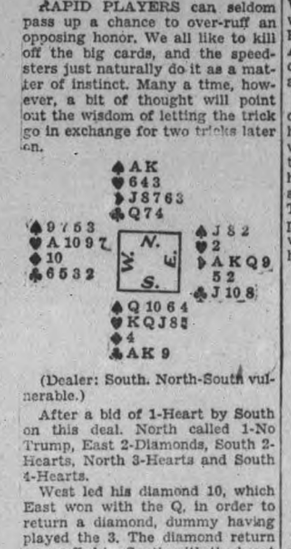
REFUSE TEMPTATION

RAPID PLAYERS can seldom pass up a chance to over-ruff an opposing honor. We all like to kill off the big cards, and the speedsters just naturally do it as a matter of instinct. Many a time, however, a bit of thought will point out the wisdom of letting the trick go in exchange for two tricks later on.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

After a bid of 1-Heart by South on this deal, North called 1-No Trump, East 2-Diamonds, South 2-Hearts, North 3-Hearts and South 4-Hearts.

West led his diamond 10, which East won with the Q, in order to return a diamond, dummy having played the 3. The diamond return was ruffed by South with the heart J and West over-ruffed with the A. He returned the club 2, which South won with the K. The hearts K and Q were cashed, leaving West with the high trump. A spade was played to the A, and after the K was taken a club was led to the A and the remaining spades cashed. Declarer lost two hearts and one diamond, making game.

Had West discarded on the second trick, instead of using his heart A to capture South's J, he would have made three heart tricks instead of two and would have set the hand. South also made a mistake by playing his honor. The heart 5 should have been played, which West would have won with the 7. He then would have been limited to two hearts.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

"AH MY good friends! How are you?" Ting-a-Ling asked joyfully as Knarf and Hanid, the sadows with the turned-about names, came down the garden path up to the steps of his little house. Ting-a-Ling, you know, was a Chinese; he lived inside the little blue China plate which always stood on the table in the dining room of the children's house.

"I want you to come with me."

"We're feeling fine," Knarf answered for his sister and himself. "Are you in good health? Oh, you are going somewhere, aren't you?"

Ting-a-Ling nodded and smiled. "Yes, indeed. I am going somewhere. And you are coming with me."

"But where are you going? You must first tell us that, Ting-a-Ling," Hanid said.

"I'm going to pay a visit to my brother, Bong-a-Bong. We haven't seen each other since we were small boys together in the village of Tra-La-La. That was a good 20 years ago. Now he is the owner of a real circus. He has clowns and animals and acrobats."

"Where is it? Where is it?" the two shadows cried excitedly.

In Hurry Now

"Just a little ways out of town. There's where I'm going now. And I want you to come with me. That's what I said before."

This time the two shadows didn't hesitate. They each took one of Ting-a-Ling's hands and hurried with him down the garden path.

"Faster . . . walk faster!" they kept urging him. "We don't want to be late."

All of a sudden they heard loud music and laughter and the clapping of hands. Then Ting-a-Ling exclaimed: "Look, there it is! In the field beyond the pond on the other side of the wood."

The two shadows looked. Sure enough, there was the top of the circus tent, with the white and gold flag flying in the breeze at the top of it. They didn't wait another instant. They seized Ting-a-Ling's hands again and dashed with him around the pond and through the wood and straight across the field,

And finally they came to the tent.

WARSAW

It is a long time since Warsaw town hall was so crowded as on Thursday evening last, when a shower was held for Mr. and Mrs. Trevor Watts. Mrs. Watts wore her wedding gown. Dancing to music supplied by Fife's orchestra from Norwood was much enjoyed. There was midnight intermission for supper, when everyone had a bit of the wedding cake. The groom thanked the guests for the enjoyable evening and the lovely gifts. All were useful and included a good deal of household linen, flanellette blankets, useful dishes and kitchenware.

A course in meal-planning will be held in the Women's Institute room on the five days, August 15-19 inclusive, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Those wishing to join the class will please hand their names to Mrs. Charlotte Cooper as soon as possible. These classes have been very popular and are for the young and old.

We Noticed

That navy is expected to be the choice of colors for the children's fleece coat this fall.

✧ ✧ ✧

That the armholes are deeper in the new fall coats, which is good for larger figures, and very comfortable to wear.

✧ ✧ ✧

That the flared short skirt is a great favorite for tennis this season, and may be had in one-piece style, or with skirt and top.

✧ ✧ ✧

That dotted frocks are seen everywhere. Navy and white is most popular, with black and white a close second.

✧ ✧ ✧

Veils have by no means shot their bolt! Women have become, and are still entirely veil-conscious, and they'll be worn a great deal this fall.

✧ ✧ ✧

Brighten up your dark dresses and accent your slim waistline all at once with a snappy, gay, colored belt. Leathers in one color, or woven materials in many colors, are all smart and ad zest to a dull dress.

Dorris Kelly Is Saturday Bride

A lovely house wedding took place at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon, July 30, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. James Willan Kelly, 252 McDonnel street, when her daughter, Doris Greta, became the bride of Dr. Rodger Secord Chenoweth, son of Dr. Nancy Rodger-Chenoweth and the late Rev. George Chenoweth, Escanaba, Michigan. Rev. J. E. Todd, of Toronto officiated.

The house was decorated with phlox, gladioli, daisies, hydrangea, and roses, and during the ceremony wedding music was played by Mrs. B. E. Kelly of Bobcaygeon, aunt of the bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, W. S. Kelly, Toronto, was gowned in white net, made with a bouffant skirt, fitted embroidered bodice, and long tight-fitting sleeves that were pointed at the wrists. Her white net veil, finger-tip length, was caught with white roses, and she carried a bouquet of talisman roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Whipple Kelly, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, wearing a powder-blue chiffon frock made with fitted bodice, short puffed sleeves, and full, flowing skirt. Her bouquet was of American beauty roses.

Dr. Harry Dunham of Hamilton was best man.

During the ceremony a reception was held, and the bride's mother received the guests in a gown of Parma violet chiffon with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow roses. The groom's mother was gowned in rose and grey crepe with matching accessories, and corsage of sweetheart roses.

For travelling the bride wore a dress of parisand and beige crepe made with a short cape, and matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Chenoweth will live in Toronto.

Cooked Cucumber One of Best Vegetables

Cucumber cooked is one of the very best vegetables, and any tricks it may play when raw on delicate digestions are quite circumvented by cooking.

Peel a moderate sized cucumber, quarter and remove the pips. Flour, peper and salt the pieces. Fry lightly in butter. Add to the pan two good tablespoons of stock (or milk can we used instead, if the ever-watchful care against curdling is shown). Stew the cucumber gently for 20 minutes, then remove the pieces and keep hot. Thicken the liquid with flour, taste and season if required, and boil up. Serve the cucumber in it.

Cubes of cucumber may also be breaded and fried, like egg-plant, or boiled in water and served with butter, like summer squash.

Sandwich Fillings

Egg Fillings — Whites of eggs, chopped yolks grained, watercress, salt and pepper, moisten with mayonnaise.

Variation: (1) Use sardines mashed up instead of watercress, season with lemon juice and cayenne.

(2) Anchovy sauce, hard-boiled eggs mashed up with butter.

Cheese and Anchovy—Butter, cup grated cheese, 1 teaspoon vinegar. Season with salt, paprika.

Ginger and Cream Sandwiches—Spread with whipped cream. Thin slices preserved ginger.

Fruit Sandwich—Finely chopped figs, add small quantity of water, cook until all smooth, add lemon juice. Cool mixture, spread on buttered bread, cover with chopped walnuts, then more buttered bread.

An Interesting Group of Four Generations

Cultivate Good Features—Ignore Unalterable Ones

It might be a good idea—at least it would be a consoling idea—for the woman who is habitually unhappy about her appearance to ask herself: "Is it possible for me to correct the defects that worry me?"

If the answer is yes, then the sensible procedure would be to get busy and correct them. But if it is no, she ought to figure out a way to make the best of them, then stop worrying, and concentrate on learning ways to minimize bad points and dramatize good ones.

For instance, if one who is flat-chested has done regularly and correctly all the exercises designed to strengthen and develop the chest muscles and the results of her time and trouble are nil, then she might as well stop worrying and start buying clothes which make her figure look more fully developed. In the long run, she'll be happier because she faced the fact instead of spending much of her life searching for a cream or lotion or a cure-all treatment. Your doctor will agree (and this is a problem about which he should be consulted, anyway), that few and far between are records of flat-chested adults who were able to develop their breasts.

Unless your budget can be stretched to cover a plastic surgery job, you cannot do anything about the shape of your nose, either. So you might as well concentrate on attaining a perfect figure and simply beautiful hair. And spend time figuring out a coiffure and a make-up which tend to draw attention away from your nose.

And you cannot change the bone structure of any part of your body. No use to fret because your hands are too large or too small. If they are smooth, white and perfectly groomed, and if you have learned to use them gracefully, it really doesn't matter about their size.

Chinese investments in merchandising companies in the Philippines are now greater than those of Filipinos.

SEASON UNITES FABRICS, COLORS

Combinations Give Interest to Suits And Dresses for Warm Days

By LISBETH

Fabric combinations in this season's costumes are most interesting. Two different materials may be combined in one dress or suit; or one garment may be of one color and material and another in the same suit may be another fabric and shade.

We have two warm weather costumes illustrating this article and the above assertion. At the right is a dress of linen and cotton—making a perfect combination for summer wear. The cotton lace used for the dress resembles a homespun weave, and is patterned in a large coin dot motif. Because the use of these two fabrics together is so interesting, the dress is made on simple, classic lines, with collarless square neckline and short sleeves.

The same machine that makes your gossamer evening clothes has woven this lace to make the suit, shown left, for town wear. It is ideal for the warm days when your lightest woollens are anathema. It is cool and crisp and will bring you compliments wherever you go.

Jacket Especially Smart

The navy monotone lace skirt is topped my a jacket of the same lace pattern in navy and white. The trim little fitted jacket is particularly smart. The lace is of cotton yarn, woven to look like homespun.

From Paris comes news of a number of subtle combinations of color and fabric used by the noted houses. Black lace and black veiling is not unusual, of course, but it is used in striking gown with long, full sleeves, the veiling banding at intervals the black lace of which the gown is made.

A striped lace gown has a front bodice of gray net with the lace used in wide band effect in the skirt.

Venise lace is applied to another gown of white faille which is laced with rose colored ribbons and still another model is a lampshade gown banded at intervals with vari-colored satin.

Still another charming frock is of pink lace trimmed with pansy ribbon bows, and has a wide skirt and matching bolero.

Reversing the order of the materials of linen and lace dress shown here, is a pink linen gown with four-inch insertions of lace. White muslin dresses trimmed with lace frills and worn with matching capes are shown in Paris and are quaint and summery.

Grace McCannan Becomes Bride Of Wm. C. Wedlock

Standards of gladioli, ferns and palms decorated Knox United Church for the marriage at one o'clock this (Saturday) afternoon of Rebecca Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert J. McCannan, 612 Walkerfield Avenue, who became the bride of William Charles Wedlock, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Wedlock, 221 Rubidge Street, Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt officiating.

Wedding music was played by Mr. W. R. Potter, organist of the church, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. T. Williams sang "Love's Coronation."

Given in marriage by her father, the lovely bride was gowned in ivory chantilly lace over heavy ivory satin. The gown, fashioned along princess line, flowed gracefully into a long train at the back. The sleeves were pointed at the wrists, and the heart-shaped collar was clasped in front with a cluster of pearls. Her veil was of fine, cloud-like net, which fell from a tiara of orange blossoms, and swept into a train, and she carried a shower bouquet of pink Briarcliffe roses, lily of the valley, and baby's breath.

The bride's sister, Mrs. J. H. Daynes of Toronto, was matron-of-honor, wearing a carnation pink frock of silk net over taffeta. The skirt was trimmed with rows and rows of net ruffles that formed a point in front, and a short train at the back, and net ruffles edged the tiny jacket and made the puffed sleeves. Her short net veil of the same shade fell from a halo of pink flowers, she wore pink satin slippers, and carried an arm bouquet of Premier roses and blue cornflowers.

The two bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Curtis and Mrs. Wm. Brady, cousins of the bride, wore forget-me-not blue gowns which were fashioned in the same style as the frock worn by the matron-of-honor. Their veils were caught with tiny blue flowers, they wore blue satin slippers, and carried arm bouquets of Premier Supreme roses.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. A. Wedlock, and the ushers were Prof. Cutler Andrews of Pittsburgh, cousin of the groom, and Mr. J. H. Daynes, B.Sc., of Toronto.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, and Mrs. McCannan received in a gown of powder blue suede lace with large-brimmed leghorn hat banded in blue velvet, and corsage of Premier Supreme roses. Mrs. Wedlock, mother of the groom, wore orchid lace with white accessories, and a corsage of Talisman roses.

For travelling the bride wore a parisand crepe dress with parisand accessories, and carried a beige polo-cloth coat. On their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Wedlock will live in Peterborough.

Our House Is Haunted

Ann Booker writes amusingly in The Glasgow Herald of that imp we all know who makes things go wrong at the most embarrassing moments.

Our house is haunted—not by a ghost in clanking chains, but by a Puckish imp with an exasperating sense of humor.

His favorite joke is to wait until I have my elbows deep in flour, soot, or soapsuds, or until the milk in the saucepan is reaching danger-point, or until I have sunk into a steaming bath, and then to inspire some hawker to ring the bell with an insistence that cannot be ignored.

As I murmur crossly, "Not to-day, thank you," I can hear that goblin's thin, ghostly laughter in the sizzle of the milk on the stove or in the gurgle of the bath water in the pipe.

Another of his merry little tricks is to prompt me to take off the lounge chair covers for a long-needed wash on the very day that the minister's wife calls about the church bazaar Then it must be he—for it certainly isn't me—who polishes beneath the hall rug, so that, in a frantic endeavor to catch a train, I nearly don't need a train but a ambulace.

On those days-before-payday when I have managed to save a few precious shillings from house keeping, it is his delight to send the window-cleaner along, or the man who does the drains, and so ensure that I end up the day, as usual, in a state approaching insolvency.

As Always Happens

Nor does he confine his attentions to the house. When we are expecting horticulturally minded visitors, that little imp steals into the garden overnight and completely divests it of its normal blaze of color. As I listen to myself murmuring, "You really ought to have seen it last week," or "It's not at its best just now, that flibbertigibbet shrieks with laughter and rattles the seed-pods of the delphiniums with great glee.

But even an imp has his kindly moods, and now and again it is his pleasure to give us poor stumbling humans a helping hand. Just occasionally, when we have important business friends to dinner, he waves a benevolent hand over our everyday linen and cutlery and gives them a magically aristocratic air. To him, also, I give the entire credit of choosing the ticket that won us a turkey last Christmas, for unaided I cannot win so much as the booby prize at a whist drive.

Full Recompense.

Then I must not forget that day when Mrs. Jones came in to borrow a vacuum cleaner—but really to tell me that the youngest had been chosen to do a solo dance at the school concert. It could only have been my darling little imp who decreed that my Willie should come in at that very mement and report that he had come out top in his school examination.

For these flashes of rare and benign condescension I can forgive my puck all his less endearing ways.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"It's good to have money, and the things that money can buy, but it's good, too, to check up once in a while, and make sure you haven't lost the things that money won't buy."—George Horace Lorimer.

Dear Friends:

Now, don't think I am scoffing at money, for it isn't a thing that anyone should scoff at It's easy to say, "oh money isn't everything," but you cannot go very far without it. Yet, if you think that money will cover your nastiness, you are very far wrong.

And if you think it will buy loyalty, try it and see. If you imagine it will buy friends, stop giving for awhile, and see how many friends you have. If you think it will purchase dependability, close your purse, and see how many you can depend on.

So many think they are immune from the common decencies of life, like courtesy or kindliness, but money will not cover rudeness or carelessness of other people's feelings. After all, money is only a means to an end, and it is only in the way you use the power it gives you, as to whether you get any benefit from it, or are cursed by it.

And as it came, so can it go, and if there is anything more pitiable on earth than the one who has depended on his money then lost, I don't know what it is.

Money gives power, not to lord it over those who don't have it, not to cover up lust and greed, not to ride roughshod over the feelings of those less fortunate, but for doing good, for easing another's burden, and when it is used wisely, it can be great.

And, it is generally in the way it is used as to whether one retains it or loses it. It was never meant to be hoarded, but neither was it meant to be squandered. One trouble with me was, I didn't think enough about money in one way, yet I never seemed to be meant ot have a great deal of it, for I gave so much away.

But, if you have been fortunate enough to get money or make it, it will pay you to check up and see how much good you are getting from it. Like happiness, you get more good from it when you share it, but if you make the one you are sharing it with feel cheap and miserable, if you impose your will on them because of your favors, you are doing more harm than good.

Amongst the upper classes in England money is seldom spoken about. It is considered poor taste to say how much you have or how little you have. Unforunately, we cannot all be like that, for many times we must say, "oh I haven't the money for this, or I cannot afford that."

It would be grand to have enough so that we didn't have to think about it, not to be extravagant or wasteful, but enough that our minds were free from even the thought of it, to be able to give when someone else needed some, without stopping to consider whether we can do that or not.

But if you think you will acquire any virtues along with it, you are vastly mistaken. I have known men who had the ability to make loads of it, but they never got any benefit from it, no enjoyment for themselves, and gave no pleasure to anyone else with it.

And I have known others who were rich on small wages, who enjoyed what they could get with it, and always had enough to give a small portion away. He knew the benefit of money with the little he had.

As for me, I feel rich when I can pay my way, beholden to none. I am rich in my friendships, in my contact with people, in all the beauties of the world. I am rich in those who love me, rich in their loyalty and their companionship. I am rich when people are happy to see me come, and sorry to see me go, for I know it is not my money they like me for, nor the favors my money can do for them.

And yet, I feel that soon I shall have lots of it, so I pray that I shall remain unspoiled with it, that I shall still be as I sign myself so often, just Your Friend, ROBERTA.

What About Your Manners?

1—Does it show good breeding to have a studied and artificial speech?

2—Is it good taste to speak constantly of the cost of things?

3—Is it good taste to sprinkle your conversation with foreign phrases?

4—When you get your tongue twisted and say a word you do not mean, is it best to laugh at yourself and go on?

5—Is it good manners to grab for yourself the best seat or the most advantageous place in a line?

What would you do if:

Someone in your group makes a bad conversational blunder—

(a) Change the subject abruptly?

(b) Ease the conversation into other channels?

(c) Let him blunder on?

1—No.

2—No.

Summer Draperies

Many of us like to give our windows a new look for summer. We like the cool look of a crisp chintz or linen, or the practicality of the smart new cottons that are sun and tub-fast. If you like to sew, you will be surprised at the curtains you can turn out yourself. For a standard window, one width of 36-inch fabric is enough for each drapery. For a window about 50 inches wide, use a width and a half, and so on. For the length measure from the top of the casing to the floor, allowing for seams and heading. If your house is well shaded, you need not line summer draperies; but if it gets strong sun, line them to protect the fabric.

A decorative and inexpensive summer curtain is of plain white voile, with a draped valance of plain chintz, both trimmed with the same ball fringe. For a standard window you will need three yards per valance. The valance is hung on a cornice board.

The French Tricolor and the Union Jack Seen As One Flag

As Britain rushes ahead with her rearmament program and the reorganization of her armed forces, the Royal Air Force employs this touring recruiting office as a means of getting the youth of the land to join up. Ten of these mobile stations will be constructed to tour the country. Sir Kingsley Wood, Britain's Air Minister, is shown at the LEFT, shaking hands with the recruiting sergeant, as they stand beside the new go-get-'em office.

Where Bomb Killed 39 In Palestine

The building at the RIGHT is the vegetable market at Haifa, Palestine, where 39 Arabs were killed when, during the height of the shopping hour, a bomb exploded. Forty others were injured, and the death toll is expected to increase. Following the bombing, maddened Arab mobs sacked and burned Jewish stores. Police, unable to handle the situation, were forced to call on British troops and marines.

IN MEMORIAM

CULLEN.—In memory of Thomas J. Cullen, who died one year ago today.

Gone is the face we loved so dear;
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember him who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.

—Ever remembered by his Wife and Family.

HUGGINS.—In loving memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. W. R. Huggins, who passed away July 31, 1936.

There's a smile we'll remember for ever,
Though we try to forget every tear,
There's a sad but sweet remembrance,
There's a memory fond and true
And a heartache, dear Mother, for you.

—Ever remembered by the Family.

LEESON. — In fond and loving memory of Mrs. John F. Leeson, who departed from this life July 30, 1929.

"Gone, but not forgotten."

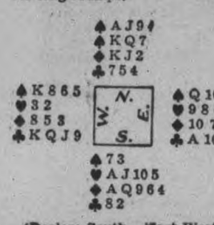
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

SAVE THE LONG TRUMPS

WHEN YOU have only four trumps in the closed hand opposite three in dummy, it is highly dangerous usually to ruff with the four-card length so you can no longer protect yourself against a four-trump bunch in the hand of a defender. Sometimes you have no option in the matter, but frequently you can find a way to save the long trumps.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

North and South reached a contract of 4-Hearts on this deal and West started the defense with the lead of the club K. When the 6 was played by East, West continued the suit for two more rounds. South ruffed the third with the heart 5. He then led out three trumps and was disappointed to find East held one more. The diamonds were next tried and on the third round East ruffed. He cashed his club A and switched to a spade. West's K forced the A and declarer lost the next two tricks to East.

Instead of ruffing the third round of clubs, South should have tossed one of his spades. With the set up diamond suit, he could then have afforded to take four rounds of trumps and in that way only the three club tricks would have been lost.

Babs and Count Decide On Separation

LONDON, July 30—(AP). — Attorneys for the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, and her estranged husband, Count Court Haugwitz - Reventlow, announced Friday the couple had reached an agreement for a separation.

The Count was granted certain "parental rights" toward Lance, their two-year-old son. They entitle him to make some of the final decisions affecting his son's education, religion and career.

The deed of separation already has been signed both by the Count and Countess. It is subject to approval by the Danish Minister of Justice but would be valid both under Danish and English law.

Count Court is Danish and the Countess has adopted her husband's nationality.

Thus their heiress and the Danish nobleman she married in Reno, Nev., May 14, 1935, came to the parting of their ways.

Peaceful Basis.

The separation was on a far more amicable basis than had been foreshadowed by the sensational hearings in a Bow Street magistrate's court, the guards around their home and the Count's promise not to see his wife.

In one of the hearings, the Countess' lawyer said her husband had threatened to give her "three years of hell with headlines" and to "shoot like a dog" an unidentified London society man.

The Count waived any rights he might have had under Danish law to one-half of the "common property of both parties."

Since the Countess may not always "preserve Danish nationality," she decided to settle "an appropriate sum on Lance forthwith and the settlement has been executed with the Count as one of the trustees."

This was disclosed in a formal announcement.

Provision was made that "while the child remains of tender years the Countess shall have care of him for the greater part of the year and when he becomes of school age he shall spend one-half his holidays with the Count and the other half with the Countess."

No mention was made of any possible settlement on the Count.

It was recalled that the heiress' attorney in the Bow Street hearing had said the Count once demanded the price of "$5,000,000 and the child" in return for a divorce.

The nobleman, Countess Barbara's second titled European husband, was represented then as being "insulted by an offer of a mere $250,000."

The day before her wedding to the Count, the Countess was divorced in Reno from Prince Alexis Mdivani, who later was killed in an automobile accident.

Norwood Social Is Jolly Affair

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, July 30.—Wednesday night, under a rather threatening sky, a large crowd gathered on the spacious lawn of Mr. and Mrs. G. Irving to enjoy a lawn social under the auspices of the Norwood United Church Women's Association.

While the audience assembled, Fife's orchestra favored with several selections. Rev. M. Robinson spoke a few fitting words of welcome, after which came the program. This took the form of a dramatic play, entitled "The Wild Flower of the Hills," presented by the Young People's Union of St. James' United Church, Peterborough. The veranda of the Irving home was converted into a stage for the evening, and this proved a very novel and delightful idea. The play was well presented and the players held the interest of the audience throughout.

Between acts, Fife's orchestra again played, and an octet consisting of Misses M. Marks, R. Pakenham, R. Ferguson, J. Johnson and Messrs. L. Bongard, J. Stewart, D. McNeely and M. Bongard, sang two selections, "Flow Gently, Sweet Afton" and "Stars of the Summer Night."

The program was brought to a close by a short prayer and the singing of the National Anthem.

The ladies then served a delicious lunch.

The cast of the play was as follows: Mammy, the old colored servant at the Burke's, Mrs. Henry Turner; Lily, her daughter, Dorothy Freeman; Mose, Lily's husband, Matt. Drysdale; Mrs. Caroline Burke, a jealous woman, Mrs. M. Wood; Chloe, an unwelcome waif, Hazel Palmer; Sue Jackson, a designing girl, Mrs. R. Police Probe

Alex Lyons testified he gave ten cases of beer for the police ball. He said Chief Newhall accepted it and told him to put the beer in the Long house or wherever the men wanted it.

"I called at the Chief's office on the Thursday before the dance and told the Chief I had a donation for the ball, and said "of course you could use some beer up there."

He said—"I don't know. There's no harm in it. Whatever is right is right."

Lyons said he got a letter of thanks for "the donation" from Constable Puffer.

Mr. Carley—"You say you saw Chief Newhall at the ball. When?" "Yes, anywhere between 9 and 12 o'clock. I wasn't talking to him, just saw him."

"Did he refer to the house as the Long house?"

"I cant say. He said the house at the back of the Legion."

"Did you see anyone when you put it there?"

"There was a constable in uniform, but it was dark and I couldn't see who it was."

Paid For the Beer.

Lyons said he paid for the ten cases himself.

"Did you tell anyone else besides Wheeler you had received the letter?"—"No."

"You knew this inquiry was to be held?"

"I've been out of jail only nine days."

Lyons said he kept clippings of local newspaper stories of infractions of the liquor laws, if they interested him. He said Chief Newhall was responsible for his sentence to jail. He had the evidence and was probably right.

A Brewery Agent

Ray Lee said that he recalled the policemen's ball in 1936.

"What is your occupation?" "I was working for a brewery."

"What brewery?" "City Club."

"Did you have any conversation with Chief Newhall or any other member of the police force in regard to supplying beer?"

"None whatever."

"I was with Lyons the night the beer was put there," Lee said. "We drove to the house and I handed the beer out and Lyons handed it inside. It was a small house back of the Legion Hall on Murray street. I gave five cases of City Club beer."

"How did you come to place the beer there?"

"Lyons told me he was going to put some there so I thought I would, too."

"Were you speaking to Chief Newhall or other members of the force about it?"

"No, I didn't know Mr. Newhall well enough."

"You didn't get a letter of thanks?"—"No."

Lee stated that he had said nothing to nobody about placing the beer there.

"Why shouldn't you have got the credit?" asked Mr. Frost. "Were you trying to create goodwill?"

"No. I knew the other brewery was putting some in so I chipped in too."

"Did Lyons tell you why he was putting the beer there?"

"Only for the policemen's ball."

"Did he mention Chief Newhall's name?" "Not that I can recall."

"Did he mention any other member of the force?" "No."

"It has been suggested that your contribution of beer was for the purpose of establishing good will with the police force. How has it worked out?"

"I was convicted of selling beer this year and last year I was convicted of illegal possession."

Not Much Goodwill

"So that in any event it has not produced in your case very much goodwill?"

"Not very much."

Lee said the approaching inquiry had been discussed in a general way among prisoners in the jail and that Lyons was present at some of these discussions.

Inspector James F. Reid testified that he had given members of the police department their orders in regard to the night of the ball in 1936 but had not given Constable Naples any orders in regard to the Long house. He had not gone near the latter place himself that night. "The question of refreshments was discussed at one of our meetings," said the inspector, "but I do not remember beer being discussed."

"I did not give Naples any orders to look after the refreshments," said the witness.

"They couldn't look after themselves," remarked Judge Deroche.

"I believe Naples was there and from what I have heard refreshments were served there," said the Inspector, who said that Long had been paid $2 for the use of a room and not $10 as alleged by Wheeler.

Could Not Remember

Rowland Long, tenant of the house used as a refreshment parlor could not throw any light on the identity of the man who had rented the place for the night.

When asked what member of the police force had negotiated with him witness replied that he could not remember.

"Was it a man in uniform?" "I think it was."

"We would like you to help us on this point," said Judge Deroche.

"I cannot remember who rented his place and I have asked my wife and she cannot remember either," replied Long who stated that he was suffering from a very serious illness at the time. He had been paid $2 afterward by Constable Puffer.

Witness said that he was there when Lyons and Lee brought the beverage there. It looked like beer, he said.

"What members of the police force did you see in your place during the evening."

"I saw Wheeler and Deannard there."

"Who else?" "That is all I can remember."

"P. C. Naples was there in charge of the beverages," said the witness, "and handed the bottles out to the people who came in."

"Was the beer given away or sold?" "It was given away."

"Did you see Chief Newhall there?" "Not at any time."

"Did you see Puffer there?" "No sir I did not."

"Did you have any negotiations with Chief Newhall in regard to renting the place?" "No, sir."

"How long before this present occasion was it since you had talked to Chief Newhall?" "About ten years ago."

Took the Empties

The witness said there was no policemen present when the beer was delivered. The day after the ball Constables Puffer and Deannard came and took the empty bottles away and some full ones were left. He had seen them after the officers had been there but did not know what had finally become of them.

Witness said that he helped Constable Naples in serving beer and heard Naples tell Wheeler that he had enough and had better go outside and take a walk.

John Deennard, former constable, told Mr. Frost that at the time of the police ball in 1936 he was a member of the police force.

"Can you tell me how the Long house was hired?"

"The Legion Hall and the Long house were hired on the same day by Inspector Reid. It was given out by the Inspector at a meeting of the committee."

Witness said the house was secured for entertainment purposes.

"What do you mean by entertainment purposes?"

"To keep some beer in for the policemen and their friends."

Deannard said that he himself had had two drinks of beer in the Long house that night but could not remember seeing any other policemen there. The next day he and Constable Puffer had gone to the Long house and he carried out 4 or 5 cases of empty bottles.

"Did you or Puffer carry out any full bottles?"

"I don't know what Puffer carried out but I only carried out empty ones. The bottles were taken to Puffer's house and placed in a shed."

Wasn't Watching

To Mr. Carley Deannard said that he did not see any full bottles of beer when the car was being emptied at Puffer's house. He had seen Chief Newhall at the ball but couldn't say how long he was there. "I wasn't watching him," he said.

Police Constable John Naples was asked who had made the arrangements for the use of the Long house.

"I don't remember."

"Who instructed you to go to the Long house that night."

"I believe it came indirectly from the Chief but I can't remember who told me."

Constable Naples said that he had arrived at the Long house about 9 o'clock that night and the beer was there then.

"How many cases?" asked Mr. Frost. "I cannot just say. I don't drink myself."

"Oh yes I know that, but you can count can't you?"

Naples replied that there were about 10 or a dozen cases there."

He said that he had not handed out any beer in the early part of the evening, letting visitors serve themselves until he thought Wheeler had had too much and then he took charge. Both men and women were drinking there that night, he said.

Asked as to what officers he had seen there besides Deannard and Wheeler witness said that he could not recall anybody else but Bruce Menzies. Probably 100 people had visited the house during the night.

To Mr. Carley Constable Naples said that his duties there that night also included looking after the back door of the Legion hall.

"But your chief duty was to look after the beer, wasn't it?" interrupted Judge Deroche. "Yes, sir."

"Then why don't you say so and don't hedge?" remarked the Judge.

The Big Thing

"The back of the hall was incidental and the beer was the big thing, wasn't it?" he continued. "Yes, sir."

Constable Naples said he didn't see the Chief Constable there that night. He explained that when he said that the orders for him to go to the Long house had come indirectly from the chief he said so because it was the customary thing for orders to come from the head of the department.

Constable Gordon E. Puffer, the next witness said that the ball was handled by a committee of policemen, not by the Chief. He himself was chairman of the dance committee and chairman of the Association in 1936.

"And as such do you take the responsibility for renting the hall and the Long house on that occasion?" "I do not."

Witness said that Chief Newhall was not a member of the dance committee.

He said that a few days before the ball Lyons had come into the station and asked for the chief but the latter was not there.

Mr. Frost questioned the witness as to the arrangements for the ball and on the matter of refreshments. "There was no refreshments served in the Long house but beer, were there?" he asked. "What arrangements were made to have the beer there then. You wouldn't have a wedding without the bride, would you?"

Constable Puffer said that he would not say that the matter of beer for the dance was not discussed but he could not recall it.

"You can't recall it or don't you want to recall it?" asked Mr. Frost.

"Were you surprised to find it was there?" asked the Judge and the answer was in the negative. "I knew we had not assigned any money for it," the witness said.

Was a Donation

"Then if there was beer there it must have been a donation?" asked Mr. Frost.

"Yes," agreed the witness.

Describing what happened the day after when he and Deannard called at the Long house he said they had only taken away the empties which were placed in his shed. Witness said that he did not drink much beer because it was bad for the gastric ulcers from which he suffered.

"Did you ever discuss with the chief constable the renting of the Long house?" "No sir."

"Does he exert dictatorial power over you in regard to the ball?"

"No, he gives us a free hand and tells us to behave ourselves."

Inspector Reid was recalled at his own request and denied that he had anything to do with hiring the Long house.

"It seems to me," said Judge Deroche, "that the member of the department who was responsible for engaging that house should come forward and tell us."

"I think so too," said Mr. Carley. "He should understand that he would not be in a worse position by being frank."

Judge Deroche said there were three things he wanted to know. "First," he said, "who negotiated for the beer"—"If it was negotiated for," commented Mr. Carley. "With these beer agents you do not need much negotiating."

"Second," continued Judge Deroche, "Who sent Naples there that night and third, who engaged the Long house?"

Chief Newhall's Evidence

Chief Newhall said that he attended the police ball when he received a ticket. On the occasion of the ball in 1936 he had only been there about 15 minutes because he had been ill with shingles and his wife had suffered a bereavement. He explained that he had nothing to do with the dance and his orders had always been to keep clear of liquor.

"You have heard the evidence of Lyons that he called to see you shortly before the ball," asked Mr. Frost.

"It was a rotten lie," declared Chief Newhall, remarking that he had not spoken to Lyons since an occasion when he met him near the brewery warehouse and told him that he wanted nothing to do with him or his beer.

"I deny having spoken to him before the ball in 1936," said the witness. "He's nothing but a dirty rat. He is the cause of Wheeler and Deannard being dismissed from the police force, taking them off their beats and giving them "mickey-mice."

"It's your conduct that is being investigated—not his," said Mr. Frost who went on to seek from the chief his opinion of the propriety of beer being given away by policemen during the progress of a police ball.

Chief Newhall said that the facts were not known to him for several months afterward. If he had known of it at the time he would have stopped it. When he did learn the facts there was no use then creating a disturbance about it and giving the police dance a black eye.

Mr. Frost wanted to know if there was any record in the chief's office of any penalty having been handed out in connection with the affair and was told "None whatever."

"Is there any record of any investigation being made by you?"

"What was there to investigate—the law was not being broken."

"When beer was being given away at a police ball by officers in uniform don't you think it was your duty to make an investigation and report the matter to the police commission?"

The chief replied that he had investigated quietly and as a result there was no beer at the ball last year year and when Wheeler and Deannard had had liquor in rooms in the White House they had been rooted out of there.

"You have no doubt about beer having been delivered there that night?"

"I don't believe Lyons put 10 cases there."

"How did the beer get there then?" asked Mr. Frost.

Mr. Carley's Protest

Mr. Carley voiced a protest. "When this inquiry began," he said, Mr. Frost conducted the examination of witnesses most fairly but now he is adopting the attitude of a crown prosecutor."

"Well I don't think I am being met with frankness," explained the examining counsel.

Chief Newhall said that Ray Lee told him that it was through Wheeler that the beer had been placed in the Long house on the night of the ball.

"Do you claim Wheeler was the man who rented the Long house?"

"I don't know who rented it."

"Regardless of how the beer got there policemen were giving out beer on that occasion," said Judge Deroche. "Do I understand you approve of it? I don't think the public will."

"Are policemen any different from firemen or anybody else?" asked Chief Newhall.

"Forget the legal side of it," said Judge Deroche. "You know that liquor causes crime. If you think it is all right for policemen to hand out liquor that may cause crime you and I don't agree on that point and I don't think the public will agree with you either."

Mr. Carley suggested that the judge and the chief were at cross purposes on the question.

"You were thinking of the legal side," he said to the Chief. "You did not mean that you approved of beer being handed out by the police on this occasion."

"Oh, no," declared the Chief. "I do not and there will be no more of it at police dances."

"I am glad to hear you say that," returned the judge. "Had you not done so my report would have been decided on that point."

Raymond Lee was recalled for examination in regard to the statement made by the Chief in which Lee was credited with saying that Wheeler was responsible for the beer being placed there that night.

"Neither Wheeler or Deannard asked me for beer on that occasion," he declared. The witness said that he could not remember telling Chief Newhall what the latter had said Lee had told him. He also said that he did not remember telling the Chief that he had paid Wheeler money.

John Deannard asked to be recalled before the session ended and denied that he had had anything to do with putting the beer in the Long house on the night in question.

Endorse Chief

Daniel Thompson, former Chief Constable of Peterborough, was a witness Friday, recalling that as chief he had recommended the promotion of Newhall to the position of detective sergeant and finally to succeed him as chief.

"Chief Newhall is one of the high ranking officers in the police departments of Canada," Mr. Thompson said. "He is recognized for his experience, ability, fair judgment, knowledge of law, and justice tempered with mercy. He will go out of his way to help the under dog."

London Calm As Russians Japs Tangle

See Moscow Afraid Of War In East, Busy Eying Hitler

LONDON, Aug. 2 (CP Cable) — Russian-Japanese fighting for disputed territory on the Manchoukuoan frontier is regarded in official circles here as a border incident which is unlikely to lead to a flare-up.

Official reports from Tokyo and Moscow stress "no need for alarm." They do not attempt to minimize the grave nature of the crisis, but point out the local nature of the dispute so far.

The British government does not see any need of mediation but unofficial reports stress the possibility of third party assistance in delineation of the frontier.

Incidents along the frontier between Manchoukuo and Russia have been numerous over the last few years and none led to war. Commenting on this fact, the Manchester Guardian (Liberal) says "In this case Russia and Japan would seem to have the best reasons for keeping the peace," adding:—

"Japan already is engaged in one war which is taxing her strength to the utmost; her relations with Great Britain and the United States, the other great powers of the Pacific, are by no means good; and recent reports have suggested she is now faced with serious trouble in Manchoukuo itself.

"Russia, though in a stronger position, is well aware that to become involved in war with Japan would encourage Germany to strike in Europe, which she is anxious to prevent. War on two fronts is the last thing she desires."

The Guardian says no more dangerous site for a frontier incident is imaginable than Changkufeng, which is 75 miles from Vladivostok and overlooks Rashin, the Japanese port of Korea.

Uneasy Over Fascists.

MOSCOW, Aug. 2—(AP)—Unflinching determination to repel vigorously every attack on Soviet territory characterized Moscow's reaction today to heavy fighting between Soviet and Japanese troops in the Lake Chanchi Siberian border district.

At the same time newspapers and utterances in Soviet circles indicated equal determination that Soviet Russia is not to allow itself to be lured into a large-scale conflict in the far east which might play into the hands of Fascist powers.

Japan, Germany and Italy, considered here the "Fascist bloc of aggressors," are represented as pursuing a coordinated policy of provocation in an effort to involve the Soviet in far-reaching military actions on one front while the Fascists prepare for aggression on another.

Foreign observers saw significance in the language of a communique which carefully pointed out that Soviet troops neither before nor during the Changkufeng battle crossed the Manchoukuoan border.

Newspaper headlines referred to the frontier fighting as "provocative intrusion of Japanese on Soviet territory" while the communique drew a distinction between "Japanese militarists" who launched the attack and the Tokyo government.

Experts Change Views.

The Soviet government earlier instructed its charge d'affaires to Tokyo to warn Japan of "possible terrible consequences" of an invasion into Russian territory.

Foreign military observers had viewed the current border trouble as likely to be only another of indecisive disputes when it started July 11, but the large scale battle over the weekend inspired a far more serious outlook today.

A Soviet communique said more than 400 Japanese were killed or wounded, and 13 Russian soldiers killed and 55 wounded (Japanese versions estimated Russian casualties at 600.)

The Russians captured five artillery pieces and 14 machine-guns, and lost a tank and field piece. One Soviet plane was brought down, the communique admitted, and the pilot who parachuted to the ground likely was captured (Japanese listed five planes shot down, four of them in Japanese Korea.)

The Khabarovsk rally was part of a nation-wide celebration of anti-war day Monday.

Japanese Grip On China Slipping Fast

SHANGHAI, Aug. 2.—(AP)—The Japanese army is threatened with loss of effective control of areas captured since hostilities began July 7, 1937, a survey indicated today.

Continued resistance by the Chinese, ambush and surprise offensives by Chinese Communist and irregular armies, the Russia-Manchoukuo border tension and the need for all available forces in pressing the offensive toward Hankow are the reasons.

Reports from widespread areas show the Chinese already have reoccupied many districts, sometimes without a fight after tactical withdrawals by the Japanese and frequently after the capture of small garrisons. The reoccupations are scattered, however, and the Chinese appear not yet to have taken full advantage of the situation.

The Hankow offensive still centred today about Kiukiang, 135 miles down river from the provisional capital of China. The Japanese command announced capture of Susung, 30 miles north of Kiukiang.

Budding Lion Tamer?

KITCHENER, Ont., Aug 2 (CP).—Slinky cats and "hound" dogs are the backbone of nine-year-old Harry Manning's menagerie—but he has other pets. Possessed of a peculiar magnetism for animals, Harry, son of Mr. and Mrs Fred Manning, Kitchener, can make animals, normally shy and wild eat out of his hand in a relatively short time. His latest feat is the taming of Blackie a wild crow. Possession of Blackie consoled him for the loss of his pet groundhog, which died a few days ago.

126 Less Dead On Roads Up To Aug. 1

Toll Is 265 To 391, Safe Driving Spirit Seen Growing

TORONTO, Aug. 2 (CP)—Growing consciousness of the necessity for safe driving was indicated in a preliminary report issued today by the Ontario Department of Highways. The report showed that in the first seven months of 1938 there were 126 fewer fatalities than in the same period of last year.

The total of deaths in highway accidents to the end of July was 265 with 35 during the past month. In the first seven months of 1937 there were 391 deaths, 101 of them in "black July" the worst month on record.

A. H. Rowan, highways department statistician, leaves at the end of the week to participate in a two weeks' course in traffic study at the University of Michigan.

5 Bank Robber Suspects Nabbed In Raid

OTTAWA, Aug. 2.—(CP).—Oscar Campbell, 41, was in jail here today, charged with the armed robbery of the Richmond, Ont., branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia last July 19, and four others, two men and two women, were also in custody as the result of a raid Sunday by Ontario Provincial Police on a cottage on the banks of the Rideau River between Kars and Manotick, Ont., eleven miles south of here.

Campbell was reported to be wanted in connection with a murder in Outremont, Qnue. Arrested with him were Mary Donnelly, 28; Adelia Rogers, 38, and Harold Proulx, 45, all of Toronto, and William Byrne, 50, of Hull, Que. Miss Donnelly was charged with conspiracy to stage an armed robbery, and the others were held for questioning.

After the raid five officers hid in the cottage in the belief other members of the gang, reported to number more than twelve would return. Campbell's brother, Melville, arrived in an automobile shortly after but jumped back into the machine and escaped. Constable L. C. Carr of Perth, Ont., fired four shots at the fugitive.

Five automobiles were found covered with tarpaulins and hidden in the thick bush about the cottage. One of them was believed to have been used in the Richmond holdup when $12,000 was taken.

They Stopped Her Guide

LONDON, Aug. 2—(AP).—Blind Hazel Hurst, 22, of Oneonta, New York, refused to enter England when the liner American Merchant docked here yesterday, because officials said they would quarantine the German shepherd dog she uses as a guide. "I'm ready to go back to America if I can't take my dog ashore," said Mrs. Hurst. Friends undertook to get the Ministry of Agriculture to waive the customary regulations for dogs, who must undergo quarantine until it is apparent they are healthy animals.

Two Women Sail 660 Miles Of Colorado Gorges

BOULDER CITY, Nev., Aug. 2—(AP)—Two Michigan school teachers, who sailed 666 miles down the treacherous Colorado River past rapids and whirlpools, patted their tanned cheeks with a powder puff today and ordered a victory dinner of rattlesnake steak.

The only women in history to complete the perilous voyage from Green River, Utah, to Boulder dam, Elizada Clover, 40-year-old University of Michigan botanist, and her assistant, Lois otter, 25, arrived here with five men companions last night.

They came in three small, motorless boats towed gently over the placid surface of Lake Mead by a launch after 43 days in the jagged gorges of the Colorado.

In command was Norman D. Nevills, veteran riverman of Mexican Hat, Utah.

With him and the two women were Wilbur C. Gibson, San Francisco photographer, only other member of the expedition to make the entire journey; Emery Kolb, Del Reed and Loren Bell, who joined up at Lee's Ferry, the half-way point.

Their food supply had run low when a Boulder Dam launch met them near the head of the man-made lake, but they scoffed at the hardships in traversing one of the most perilous river routes on the continent.

"I'm going to take a hot bath," was Miss Jotter's comment as the boats docked at the Boulder City pier after a day of 139-degree heat.

"I'm buying myself a new hat," said Dr. Clover.

Mad Professor Vanishes Off Liner At Sea

Normandie Seaman Grabs Victim's Wife In Time To Save Double Tragedy

NEW YORK, Aug. 2 (AP).—United States Federal authorities were conducting an inquiry today into the bizarre story of a midnight death struggle on the liner Normandie which ended in the disappearance of a young college professor and the serious injury of his wife.

Officers of the French liner reported yesterday that Dr. Robert Moore Duncan, 35, assistant professor of politics at Colgate University, had vanished at sea, 450 miles from New York, after attempting to throw his wife Alice overboard.

Mrs. Duncan, mother of two small children, and daughter of an associate of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., arrived in the ship's hospital, bruised and beaten, and was secluded today in her parents' home in Montclair, N.J.

Her father, Williard Samuel Richardson, former Baptist minister, has been an advisor on philanthropies to the Rockefeller family since 1912.

Dr. and Mrs. Duncan left June 25 for a cruise on the liner Paris. They visited Duncan's father, the Rev. William Duncan, in Scotland, and boarded the Normandie at Southampton.

Appeared Happy

Henry Villar, the Normandie's purser, said they appeared happy on shipboard and ate dinner in their cabin Sunday night, their last night together.

Then, strolling on the wind-swept boat deck, they started an argument which was overheard by Seaman Joseph Brouard, the purser reported.

"Duncan grabbed his wife by the throat," Villar said, "and hit her several times over the head, apparently with some instrument, knocked her unconscious and attempted to throw her over the side."

The seaman "went down in time to tear Mrs. Duncan from her husband's grip," Villar said. "He carried her to a companionway, put her down and then went back to see about Duncan, but the man had disappeared."

A search disclosed no trace of him. "When Mrs. Duncan was revived," said Villar, "the first thing she said was, 'Get my husband. He is going to commit suicide.'"

The purser said Mrs. Duncan could not explain her husband's actions. French line officials said United States attorneys would take testimony from the Normandie's crew today.

Fascism First To Italian Youth

CREMONA, Italy, Aug. 2 (AP).—The newspaper Il Regime Fascista asserted today Italian youth would choose Fascism if it had to decide between lovalty to the Fascist state and Catholic action.

The newspaper is published by Roberto Farinacci, former secretary of the Fascist party and an anti-semitic leader in Italy.

Its statement evidently was inspired by Pope Pius' declaration last Thursday, during his discussion of Fascist racial doctrine, that: "Who injures Catholic action injures the Pope and who injures the Pope dies." (The latter was interpreted to mean "dies spiritually.")

Il Regime Fascista in its statement on Catholic action, a lay organization of the church, declared it "would be absurd to pretend that the Pope should make a common cause with Catholic action."

It struck a new note in the church-state controversy precipitated by the Pope's criticism of the Fascist racial doctrine formulated July 14 which declares Italians are an aryan race and that Jews do not belong to it

"It is said Catholic action represents the church and that to harm it will be to go against the Holy Father," said the newspaper.

"Beyond the fact that Fascism knows no limit and barriers when it battles for the nation and Italian civilization, and that previous in 1921 it knew how to triumph over the coalition of popular (that is, clerical) forces of Communists, Socialists and Democrats, we do not believe supreme forces can make common cause with Catholic action which, according to the Concordat, must not concern itself with political problems which interest the state."

New German Car To Be Sold For $2 A Week

LEVERKUSEN, Germany, Aug. 2 (AP).—Germany's new "people's car," the Volkswagen, is to cost 950 marks (about $380), can be bought on the instalment plan at the rate of five marks ($2) a week, will travel at a speed of 62½ miles per hour, and will run about 40 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

Details of the popular, low-priced automobile, the development of which Chancellor Hitler has pushed personally, were disclosed today by Dr. Robert Ley, Leader of the German Labor Front, in an address to 15,000 workers on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Leverkusen works of the I. G. Farben Dye Trust.

"A whole family with four or five children can be seated in the Volkswagen," Dr. Ley said. 'I hope most families will decide to have four or five children as a result."

He added that "ten years from now there won't be any workingman in Germany who doesn't have or can't have his car."

Beginning today, Dr. Ley said, every German worker can begin saving for his car in special savings accounts arranged for the purpose.

Knitters Strike

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 2 (CP).—A group of 54 workers in the full fashion department of the Monarch Knitting Company remained on strike this morning. The workers went on strike Friday night after negotiations with company officials for wage increases collapsed.

Strike leaders today said no arrangements had been made for any further conferences with mill officials.

Russians Hurl Tanks, Troops Across The Border On Jap-Held Changkuteng

Heavy Guns, War Planes Go Into Action And Infantry Battles Hand To Hand Before Tokyo Reports Attack Repulsed

TOKYO, Aug. 2 (AP)—The Japanese government announced today its forces had repulsed a large-scale, two-edged attack by Soviet troops in the disputed area on the Siberian-Manchoukuoan frontier.

A later communique charged the Russians repeatedly were bombing Korean villages in the vicinity of Changkufeng, focal point, since July 11 of Soviet-Japanese conflict.

Tanks, heavy artillery and aircraft were thrown into action this morning by the Russians, the War Office announced, to clear the way for infantry attacks from the north and south against the Changkufeng Hill region.

The clash was the latest episode in a weekend of fighting for the area Russia claims to be in Siberia and Japan holds to be in Manchoukuo.

"We consider the situation exceptionally serious," the communique said.

The Russian forces opened the offensive at 9 a.m. (9 p.m., Monday, E.D.T.) with an artillery bombardment against the Changkufeng Hills, an area claimed both by Japanese and Russian Siberian and Japanese Korea frontiers. Suddenly from a pall of smoke screen, eight tanks appeared, followed by infantry.

Japanese returned fire with anti-tank guns against the troops advancing from the north. At the same time, Soviet infantry surged from the south.

Both attacks were repulsed, the War Office said, with heavy losses among the Soviet attackers after sanguinary fighting.

The War Office said civilians were slain in the air raids and "planes are ready and we must answer."

Ten Soviet bombers, flying in formation, bombed Chankufeng and villages in the vicinity, the war office communique said.

Rail Line Severed.

(Private advices to Japanese in Shanghai, from Manchoukuo, said Russian air bombers raided Yuki province southwest of Vladivostok, and severed the railway line between Kirin, in the heart of Manchoukuo, and the coastal city of Yuko).

A Korean army commuique announced that army and navy planes were ready for the worst emergency, and that "if they once go aloft, enemy positions could not resist, no matter how strongly defended." The communique was issued before the Russian attack.

The Osaka and Fukuoaka districts of Japan proper were ordered under "partial" control, although there had been no recent air raid threats from China and the step presumably was a precaution in connection with the frontier dispute.

The minister of war, Lieut.-General Seishiro Itagaki, outlined the critical state of affairs to the cabinet, and later went with Gen. Kazushige Ugaki, foreign minister, to the resident of the premier, Prince Fumimaro Konoye.

Prince Konoye left a short time later for Hayama to report to the emperor at his summer villa.

War Planes Start Fracas

An attack upon Japanese positions yesterday on the Manchoukuo-Siberia frontier by a squadron of Soviet warplanes intensified the gravity of the trouble, which took precedence over all other matters of government.

"Japan's policy is one of non-aggression, but she will not tolerate invasion of her territory," said one member of an official group.

"However, despite fighting in China, Japan is capable of engaging in a major conflict with Russia. The Kwantung army, which probably is the empire's best, still is intact, both in men and muntions."

Domei (Japanese News Agency) attributed to the foreign office spokesman the statement that Russia's attitude would determine whether a major conflict developed.

Famed Ft. Henry Is Reopened By Premier King

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 2—(CP)—After a busy day at Kingston's 100th anniversary of its municipal incorporation, Prime Minister Mackenzie King left for Trenton where he today was scheduled to inspect the air service activities.

Before a great audience in the recently restored Fort Henry, Mr. Mackenzie King yesterday declared the fort open to the public as an historic site to further serve the cause of peace. The old fort had been built as a threat against invasion; the reconstructed fort would be a welcome to visits from other lands.

The Prime Minister was the guest of honor last night at a dinner in which many former mayors of Kingston were present. He had been presented in the afternoon with a miniature golden cannon and in expressing his appreciation last night he said: "It was the last thing I would have expected to be presented with but it illustrates the changes which have come over men's minds in Canada in the last 100 years. I shall treasure it as a symbol of peace."

Similar cannons were presented to Labor Minister Rogers, Kingston's member in the House of Commons, and to R. M. Smith, Ontario deputy minister of highways, a Kingstonian.

Half Million Well Spent.

Former Mayor H. C. Nickle was toastmaster in the absence of Mayor Stewart. "Perhaps the restoration of Fort Henry cost half a million dollars," he said, "but it was money well spent. It gave relief to many who otherwise would have been on relief. We wish to express our appreciation to the prime minister for the money his government has spent in Kingston." Amid laughter, he added "If his government will continue to spend money in Kingston, we will continue to express our appreciation."

In a jocular mood, Mr. King replied that Kingston had expressed its appreciation in the last election in sending so able a supporter as Mr. Rogers.

The prime minister took occasion to express his appreciation of Ontario Highway Minister McQuesten. While much had been said about lack of co-operation between certain governments, the co-operation of the dominion ministers and the Ontario ministry in giving the people historical sites was an indication of what could be accomplished. He also paid tribute to the work done by Hon. Colin Campbell, Ontario minister of public works.

Her "Eyes" Barred By Britain Girl Must Return To U.S.

LONDON, Aug. 2.— (CP).— The government to-day refused to admit without quarantine the German shepherd dog which Hazel Hurst, 22, blind, uses as a guide. The Ministry of Agriculture expressed "every sympathy" for Miss Hurst, who is from Oneonta, N.Y., but added an exception in her case would open a loophole in the regulations for others.

The woman wept when she was advised of the decision aboard the steampship American merchant, said it was the first time "I ever felt blind in my life," and declared "I shall never stand up to 'God Save the King' again when I go to Canada."

"I am going back to America when the boat sails Friday and I shall never want to come to England again," she said.

The regulations require that visitors' dogs be quarantined until the authorities are satisfied they are free of contagious disease.

NO PLEDGES GIVEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—(AP)—Officials of the British Consulate here today said no assurance had been given Hazel Hurst, 22-year-old blind girl of Oneonta, N.Y. that her guide dog would be permitted entry in England.

"We are not a branch of the customs and have no authority to interpret the customs act," a spokesman said "Insofar as we know, no animal is allowed entry at British ports without going through the customary six-months quarantine"

No More Escaping Fort Henry, By War Prisoners

Kingston, Aug. 2.

PRISONERS OF WAR will never again escape through the tunnels of Fort Henry.

Today R. M. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways, told a reporter that as a Kingston boy he used to play and wade in the underground passages to the outer moat. These, however, have been closed during the Great War when prisoners of war held at the fort had escaped through them.

3rd Time Unlucky

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 2.—(CP).—When the Maroon fruit store here was robbed on two successive Sunday nights, Detective John Mahoney of the Windsor city police had a hunch it might happen again. Last Sunday night he hid in the store and arrested Joseph Dragomier, 17, Windsor, as he entered the shop through a rear window. Dragomier, who police say has confessed to the other two robberies, is held on a breaking and entering charge.

Aged Indian Is Greatly Disappointed When He Learns Premier Hepburn Safe

L'AMABLE REVALLE, an aged Indian living in the vicinity of Hay Lake, Nipissing District, and whose means of communication with the frontier is limited to sketchy rumors and reports from passing tourists, is a well known character in the North.

While reports had reached him earlier in the week that Premier Mitchell Hepburn had been lost in an airplane trip over the Rockies he had not heard, what was regarded as a most favourable report of his safe landing published to the world on Thursday at 2 p.m. Murray Smye of Toronto, a former Bell Telephone employee here, and Dr. Ralph Honey while fishing on Hay Lake met the old Indian who eagerly in search of further news about the Prime Minister promptly asked them:

"Did they finw Premier Hepburn yet" to which they both gladly assured him that he had landed safely days ago. The expression on the old Indian's face, however, lost its enthusiasm at once and in disappointment he observed, "Isn't that too bad."

Staggering Death Toll Of 53 Recorded In Canada As Dominion Celebrates

Cars Kill 22, Waters Add Another 20; Quebec's 21 Victims Top List With Ontario Trailing One Behind

TORONTO, Aug. 2 (CP).—A long weekend of fine weather—many Canadians celebrated Monday as civic holiday—left a staggering toll of dead and injured across the country. A recapitulation of fatalities early today showed at least 53 persons dead, 22 after automobile accidents, 20 by drowning, and 11 in other mishaps.

In spite of the greatest weekend toll of the year for all Canada, Ontario, most populous province and usually leader in the fatality list, showed a comparatively small death report. Though most Ontario cities and towns observed the holiday, there were only four fatalities reported Monday.

With Toronto's traffic in a complete snarl due to the invasion of 100,000 war veterans for the Canadian Corps reunion, only one fatality was reported on the holiday. Two-year-old Sidney Huggins was killed when he ran in front of a truck. The merrymakers themelves succeeded in preserving their lives although many were sent to hospital with minor injuries.

21 In Quebec.

Every province except little Prince Edward Island contributed to the death toll. Quebec led with 21, including four persons who died of poisoning after a rubbing alcohol debauch; Ontario reported 20 deaths, 16 of them on Saturday and Sunday; Nova Scotia and Manitoba had four each; and British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and New Brunswick one each.

Ontario's toll may yet be raised by two. After being given up as drowned two young Stratford residents were believed to have possibly eloped at Port Stanley, where they left most of their clothing in a cottage and disappeared. They are Cynthia Carter, 17, and John Till, 21. Police er-opened an investigation into their disappearance when it was learned they were seen walking barefooted on the highway an hour after they left the Carter summer cottage.

Dragging of the lake was being continued, however, in case they perished in the rough water Sunday night.

A motor fatality at London, Ont., took the lives of Mrs. Elizabeth Gilhooley, Toronto, and her seven-year-old grand-daughter, Elizabeth. Four others were injured in the crash, one critically.

Two were killed and two injured at Port Arthur when a truck crashed into a pole. Matt Yukovich, a bridegroom of three weeks, and Mary Yelich, 11, were the victims.

At Neville, Sask., Mrs. Jacob Reidiger, 43, was killed when a team of horses ran away. She attempted to jump with her husband and son but was caught in the wheel of the carriage.

Two young sons of Abram Wiebe, whose names were not learned immediately, drowned while swimming at Plum Coulee, Man. J. Edward Martin, 26, of Windsor, Ont., met death in the Ottawa river at Woodriffe, Ont. He was a machinist with the Royal Canadian Air Force and prominent athlete.

4 Die Suddenly After Orgy With Alcohol

MONTREAL, Aug 2 (CP).—Four persons were dead last night as the aftermath of a day-long drinking bout, and police feared more might die from the effects of poisonous liquor served at the party in an east-end home.

A father and son and a woman were among the dead, believed to have drank rubbing alcohol with other liquor during the ten-hour party in a boarding-house. Another man was in hospital, his condition serious.

The dead: Rosario Leclerc, 59; Roland Leclerc, 27, his son; Mrs. Adrien Desjean, 36, and Joseph Legare, 48, all occupants of the St. DoDminique street house. Omer Larocque, 33, was in hospital.

Police said other persons who might have drank some of the liquor with the other five Saturday may possibly have been stricken also without report being made. Several individuals, detectives said, had wandered in on the party and taken a few drinks before leaving.

At first, only two fatalities were ascribed to the liquor. The woman and Legare died in hospital early Sunday, after they had been found unconscious shortly after midnight Saturday. It was not until hours later that young Leclerc was taken to hospital when he collapsed while talking to officers who found him at work.

Detectives, learning Larocque had been at the party for a time, found him and told him the fate of the first three. He became violently ill almost immediately.

The elder Leclerc had died in the meantime, but his death was not considered immediately as having been caused by the liquor. Not until police talked with his dying son, did they learn the 59-year-old lodger had indulged in a few drinks of the fatal beverage.

A small quantity of liquor found in the boarding-house room where the party took place was being analyzed by police department experts. They said its nature had not been positively determined, but it was believed to be rubbing alcohol.

Loyalists Press Upon Teruel

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 2—(AP)—Two columns of Spanish Government militiamen, seeking to wrest the offensive from the insurgents, reported to-day they were pressing determinedly toward Teruel, capital of Truel province.

General Jose Miajas attack on the city, which has changed hands twice during the civil war, apparently was co-ordinated with the Governments Catalan offensive against Gandesa to take advantage of reductions in insurgent manpower.

One column was driving up from the southwest along the valley of the Camarena River. Dispatches from Valencia said the unit had captured "the tooth of Camarena, a promontory dominating the upper valley less than ten miles from Teruel.

On the other side of Teruel, Miajas veteran mountaineers reported they were advancing on a 15-mile front through the fringes of the Albarracin Mountains.

Dispatches said Verges, Griegos, Portillo de Gaudalavier and Frias were captured and passed in the face of heavy insurgent resistance.

Hawaiian Wharf Riot Sees 36 Get Shot

HILO, Hawaii, Aug. 2. — (AP) — Thirty-six persons were treated today for buckshot wounds and other injuries suffered in the fiercest labor riot in Hilo's recent history.

One longshoreman was stabbed in the side with a bayonet, several persons were peppered about the head with buckshot and many received head injuries yesterday in an encounter between police and some 500 waterfront strikers and sympathizers.

The fightstarted when an inter-island navigation company's steamship, the Waialeale, docked from Honolulu in defiance of a strike called by longshoremen May 27 when contract negotiations with the company collapsed.

The crowd pushed through police lines as the steamer drew up alongside the dock. Tear gas and fire hoses used by police had little effect, and when the mob approached the vessel the officers opened fire with shotguns.

Underestimate West's Oil Says Bennett

CALGARY, Aug. 2 (CP).—Necessity of underestimating present production of Turner Valley oil fields was emphasized by Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former Conservative leader, speaking of western resources, during an interview here.

"One of the most satisfactory developments in this territory in recent years is the discovery of large pools of crude oil in Turner Valley," he said. "A great deal of interest is being manifested in these oil discoveries in eastern Canada."

"If I might be misunderstood I would like to give the impression to all who are interested in development of the oil fields that it is necessary to underestimate rather than overestimate present production," he added.

If production of the field increases to the extent anticipated in some quarters the problem of transportation to the Dominion markets is not incapable of solution, he declared.

New York Robbers Get $50,250 In Raid

NEW YORK, Aug. 2—(AP)—A branch of The Banco li Napoli Trust Company, in the crowded pushcart market district of lower Manhattan was robbed of $50,250 in cash Monday by four armed men, one of whom was masked.

They fled in an automblie after threatening fourteen customers and nine employees.

The handkerchief-masked robber and a confederate stalked into the railed enclosure of Joseph Salvo, Manager of the branch, while the two other robbers shepherded the customers and employees.

From the cage of Peter Cocuzza, the cashier, they took a burlap bag, half-hidden on a chair under a desk which contained $50,000. Then they scooped $250 from the cash drawer.

Widow Shoots Lover Suicides In Trailer

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 2—(AP). — The bodies of Mrs. Ann Bowman, attractive young widow, and Henry Murray, 28, were found yesterday in the woman's trailer, parked near the Allegheny County Airport. Coroner P. J. Henney reported the woman "probably" fired two bullets into the breast of Murray, her sweetheart, and then killed herself. A revolver, with three shells fired, lay between the bodies. Both Murphy and Mrs. Bowman lived in Homestead. A note "To whom it may concern," was on a dressing table. It said: "I did it. It's between us two only. I borrowed the gun without consent, if you know what I mean." It was signed "Ann Bowman."

100,000 'Vets' Rip Toronto Wide Open For Weekend

Wild Street Scenes "20 Years After" Give Queen City Lively Memories

TORONTO, Aug. 2 (CP).—They hoisted a grand piano into a street car and burned another on a corner. They sent a motorboat put-putting down Yonge Street—aboard an automobile trailer—and started bonfires at downtown intersections. They shot crap on the sidewalk and played crown and anchor in the gutter.

It was the final fling of the great 1938 reunion of the Canadian Corps that fought in France in the Great War, a spontaneous celebration that started early last night and continued until long past dawn. One hundred thousand former soldiers were evacuating a city they had held for three days.

An estimated 10,000 veterans, the remnants of the 100,000 who got together "20 years after," participated in the last night of fun. It started when a red-headed ex-serviceman got hold of a policeman's coat and hat—the means by which the garments were obtained were undisclosed—and paralyzed traffic on busy Yonge Street.

Music on Every Corner

War veterans by the thousands turned out to say "s'long" to each other. They appeared determined to make the parting prolonged and so enthusiastic that Toronto would not forget for a long time to come. Impromptu bands and quartets sprang up on every corner. Beer bottles were hoisted openly in the streets.

Those who were content to "call it a night" and lay down to slumber in the middle of street car tracks were aroused quickly by the clatter of dishpans and refuse cans. Many a street car had its trolley pole pulled off the power lines and so dense was the crowd in several sections rerouting of cars was necessary.

The highlight of the evening came when a crowd trundled a piano along a street, raided a street car and edged the big instrument into the aisle through the side doors. Another piano was tossed atop a big bonfire at the corner of Queen and Yonge and the jubilant veterans staged a war dance.

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 2.—(CP)—Charles N. Perrin, chairman of the bands committee for the London Old Boys' reunion, who suffered a heart attack while attending a concert at the armories Sunday, died last night at his home.

Mr. Perrin conducted a general store, blacksmith shop and post office at Plover Mills for some years, and for 37 years was employed at the London Post Office from which he retired in 1928.

Resident of London about 50 years, Mr. Perrin was a member of Dundas Centre United church, and had been secretary of the Musicians' Union since it was organized in the city.

3 Dead And 302 Hurt At Corps Reunion

TORONTO, Aug. 2. — Reunion casualties at midnight last night after three days' boisterous merry-making were place at 3 dead, 302 hurt in 71 automobile and other accidents, and 73 collapses.

The Canadian Corps Reunion officially ended at midnight, but exuberant veterans still occupied downtown streets, and the police, the city ambulance service and the three large downtown hospitals were hard pressed to cope with disabled and injured ex-service men.

EMMETSBURG, Ia., Aug. 2. — (AP).—Emmetsburg's octogenarian lifeguard, with a perfect record in 14 years of duty, has resigned. Henry Hughes, 82, who has been on duty at Medium Lake since 1924, decided a younger guard was needed, so he gave up his job to Dayle Roberts, 21. Not a single drowning occurred at the lake he guarded. He rescued about 75 youngsters during his service.

Only future to show irregularity was the May, which rose a cent and then fell back to its opening price.

Sharply lower cash wheat prices, lack of export demand and inclination of brokers to await the Canadian wheat board announcement on the pegged wheat price slowed dealings.

Anticosti Being Surveyed As Aerial Defense Base

HALIFAX, Aug., 2—(CP)—H.M.C.S. Venture, auxiliary schooner of the Canadian Naval Service, sailed yesterday for Anticosti, the Magdalen Islands and points along the St. Lawrence littoral.

Under instructions of Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defense, the Venture carried a joint Canadian Naval and Air Force expedition to survey bases for the defense of the St. Lawrence.

At Ellis Bay, Anticosti Island, the Venture will make rendezvous with other Air officers who will fly direct from Halifax.

The joint operations are part of the National Defense plans to build up and establish adequate defenses for the protection of Quebec, Montreal and all the cities and towns along both shores of the St. Lawrence.

Air-Raid Threat

It has been realized that the menace to Canada from the Atlantic in the event of hostilities may primarily be air attacks launched from aircraft carriers.

The Royal Canadian Air Force will establish its front line of defense at the strategic area of the St. Lawrence, where the gulf narrows into the river and Anticosti and Magdalen Islands command the approaches.

On the north side of Anticosti the ship channel is only 19 miles wide, and on the south side a 35-mile stretch of water lies between Anticosti and the Gaspe Peninsula.

Anticosti Island is 360 miles below Quebec, 530 miles below Montreal. The "venture expedition will make an aerial survey of

Wheat Prospects Easing In West

REGINA, Aug. 2 (CP).—Taking the province as a whole a considerable decline in crop prospects has taken place during the past two weeks due chiefly to hot weather and lack of moisture, Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture reports. The decline, however, has not been uniform in all parts of the province and some areas have stood up well.

The best crops in southern districts are on Regina plains. Prospects in south eastern Saskatchewan are extremely varied ranging from poor at many points in the south and central portion to fair to good in south central district where the areas of poor crop have widened.

Crops between the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the South Saskatchewan River and in the south west corner have been further damaged by heat and drought and prospects have been materially reduced in the better crop area in the south eastern portion of the district.

No Single Girl Has Yet Come Out Clean And Conscience-Clear After Playing Around With a Philandering Married Man, But Too Late, They Learn the Cost

DEAR MISS DIX—Can't you say something to the young office women who spend all of their spare time helling around with philandering married men and make them realize the folly and wickedness of what they are doing and how it is bound to be disastrous to them in the end? Can't you make them see the sinfulness and craziness of these messy affairs?

A DISGUSTED MAN.

ANSWER:

I am afraid not. For if they will not heed the emphatic warning contained in the Ten Commandments about coveting your neighbor's husband and committing adultery, and if they learn nothing from the wrecks of the lives of other young women who have had affairs with married men whom they see all about them, I cannot hope that any poor word of mine will bring them to their senses and make them realize that when they play the love game with married men the cards are always stacked against them and they are bound to lose out.

Besides, I have written about this thing a million times. I have shouted my warning to girls and told them that the philandering husband boded them no good through so many columns of print that if they were posted end to end they would reach to Reno and back again.

But, you see, the trouble is that no girl wants to be advised against doing what she wants to do. Every girl who is in love with a fascinating married man thinks that she is going to be the exception to the rule, and that the husband who has been unfaithful to his wife will be faithful to her. Every girl who is pleasure-mad, clothes-mad and who runs around with married men because they have more money to spend than poor young men, thinks the game is worth the candle until she suddenly finds herself old, with her looks gone, her allure for men gone, her chances of marrying gone.

Time and again I have told girls that there wasn't a man who was worth a girl's forfeiting her self-respect and her good name for, and this is what every girl does who has an affair with a married man. She is doing what she knows to be a dishonorable thing in stealing another woman's property from her and aiding and abetting a man in being disloyal to his wife. As far as the general public is concerned she has simply thrown her cap over the windmill. Nobody credits the platonic myth. It believes the worst of a girl who runs around with married men.

I have told girls over and over that the married man who made love to them was a cad of the first order because he used his age, his knowledge of the world, his experience, often his position as their boss to win their hearts and ruin their lives just to gratify his own amorousness, or his vanity. I have bidden them notice how often the men who complain that their wives don't understand them, that their wives don't sympathize with them, that their wives are cold and unfeeling, make no effort to divorce these ladies in order to marry the girls whom they claim are their real mates.

I have warned them that the girl who has an affair with a married man jeopardizes her chance of ever having a husband and a home of her own, for her married lover can't marry her and to all other men she is damaged goods. Few young men want some married man's leavings for a wife.

I have pointed out to girl that a love affair with a married man poisoned their whole lives, because they were either to take their happiness at the expense of a sister woman, or else they were doomed to go through life living on the crumbs that fell from their lovers' tables, the scraps of time that they could give them, the dabs of money, while most of their income went to their wives; the going out together to shabby places where they will not be recognized, the hopeless waiting, the ever-present fear of sharing the common fate of the "other woman" and being forsaken.

And I have appealed to girls' sense of sportsmanship to play the game and to treat wives as they hope to be treated when they are wives, and not because they are young and beautiful to use their sex attraction to take some silly, weak man away from his wife, break up a home and orphan helpless little children.

I have told them that philandering with a married man is bad business from start to finish and that no girl comes out of it with clean hands and a clear conscience. But how many, if any, ever listen to me, I do not know. It is hard to reform those who do not wish to be reformed.

* * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a school teacher. For five years I was engaged to a widower. For financial reasons we had to postpone our marriage, so I stood by him through all his struggles and troubles and helped him in every way I could. Last spring he got a better job and salary and we were to have been married in June, but suddenly I found myself jilted and double-crossed and kicked out for a girl of 17 whom he married. I have nearly gone insane with grief and humiliation. Since this happened to me others have insulted me and laughed at me for being made a fool of and I have been so desperate that I have considered committing suicide. Is there any way for a girl to make a man pay without hurting herself? This ex-fiance of mine has turned out to be a scoundrel and a hypocrite, yet society welcomes him because he is a man and I alone have to suffer. What do you advise a girl in my plight to do? MARY.

ANSWER:

Forget it. Get down on your knees and thank God that you escaped marrying such a man instead of beating on your breast and bemoaning your loss.

The most amazing thing on earth is the ability women have to make themselves miserable over things that they should rejoice over. They seem not to be able to differentiate between good luck and bad, so you see them shedding tears over the death of a husband who has never been anything but a disgrace and a sorrow to them, and breaking their hearts over the unfaithfulness of some worthless philanderer when they should be willing to pay any woman good money to take him off of their hands.

Don't try to get even with the man. Don't humiliate yourself by suing for breach of promise. The woman who does that is no sport, and she makes herself a figure of fun.

DOROTHY DIX.

The Evidence Was There

The keeper of a beverage room in Woodstock is reported to have missed three salt shakers when some customers left his place of business, so he went to look in the car where they were loading. He found only two which he recognized as his, but there were others which were said to have belonged to some place in Ingersoll, and some more which were admittedly the property of some establishment in Tavistock. In all we learn there was a collection of 15 of these shakers.

That may seem very odd and to some perhaps a little amusing, but it is worth thinking of for a moment or so. Tavistock is about 14 miles from Woodstock and Ingersoll is even less. Would the collection of salt shakers from beverage rooms indicate that the people in the car had been driving around and visiting and patronizing as many beverage rooms as possible. If as announced they had 15 of these shakers in the car it would be fair enough to assume they had visited a number of places. Nor could they just walk in and take the shakers without stopping to place an order for drinks. And judging by the number of salt shakers which had been lifted there had been quite a few visitations and therefore quite a few drinks while driving. And that's the very thing the courts are trying to stamp out.

Why Kingston Celebrates

The Kingston Whig-Standard published a Century of Progress edition, and made of it a 54-page number which it says is the largest paper it has turned out. Publishing a paper every day and preparing for an extra one which runs to 54 pages is work enough, but there was sufficient occasion to warrant the issue. In fact there appears to be several occasions. It marks Old Home Week and the 100th anniversary of the incorporation of the municipality. Covers as well the near completion of the re-establishment of Fort Henry with its notable collection of military museum collections, and touches the near-completion of the Thousand Islands Bridge, which according to an official announcement connects Canada and United States from Ivy Lea (near Gananoque) to Collins Landing (near Alexandra Bay in New York State).

We learn that the incorporation of Kingston required a documentary process which was so voluminous that the Kingston Whig of 1828 found it could not print it for the wordage would have more than filled the paper. However there was to be a mayor and it was necessary for him to have been a resident for ten years and to own property or receive rentals to the extent of £75. Typical of the development of the city has been the growth of Queen's University. In 1841 there was two professors and their business was to import instruction to 10 students, while in 1938 there are 223 teachers and assistants with a student body of 4,678.

There is something in the Whig-Standard edition which is seldom seen in a Canadian paper, and that is the appearance of advertising matter in the form of greetings from business men in Watertown, N.Y., near the United States end of the new bridge, and the working runs much the same in many of these announcements, the general message being "Greetings to Our Friends in Canada."

As though to keep the feet of the community firmly on the ground during the period of celebration the Whig-Standard has included in its excellent centenary edition an editorial with the heading "We Owe Seven Billions," that being written on the strength of latest reports from the Bureau of Statistics. It may be it forms a common link, like the bridge, between Canada and United States. The Kingston paper had a large and formidable occasion to handle, and it dealt with it in a sensible and informative manner.

Cried "Wolf" Too Often

From Cornwall has come a sad illustration of the folly and danger of making a pretence of drowning.

A fifteen-year-old boy, swimming in the St. Lawrence there the other day, shouted to his companions for help. They responded to his calls but before they reached him, he swam ashore laughing. Returning to the water, the lad swam out ten yards and then sank. Thinking he was just repeating his previous "game" and not wishing to be taken in twice, they paid no attention to him. This time he was really in trouble but they did not realize it until too late to save him. The body was recovered fifteen minutes later but efforts at resuscitation then proved of no avail.

This tragedy, says the Kingston Whig-Standard, is a fresh warning against indulging in the cry of "help" just for fun when in the water. It may be fun once and it may be fun many times. But there may come a time—even for good and strong swimmers—when help will be needed and when, as with the boy who cried "wolf" too often, no help will be forthcoming. The lesson is one particularly for young swimmers and bathers; older ones have usually already learned it. But it is for the older folk, parents and persons in charge of swimming places, to impress upon their children and charges that they should never cry for help in jest when swimming or bathing.

Very Much The Same

One could hardly be blamed for taking it for granted that matters which would engage the attention of people and governments in India, Burma and Ceylon would be quite different from those with which we deal in our country. Through the British Empire Press Association there is forwarded to newspapers in various parts of the Empire news letters telling of the major activities in various countries.

We learn the Government of India has floated a loan; it was popular and no trouble was experienced in getting the money. Also there was reference to next year's obligations. So in that there is similarity with our own land.

It is also recorded that Lancashire cotton industries have lost their trade in India to the extent of 14 per cent. during one year. Japan and the Indian textile industry is taking the business, while 20 years ago Lancashire had all the business it could handle. It is a fact that in our land we hear about British textile industries which find they cannot get their share of the Canadian markets, and the reading from India is not touching a problem not experienced here.

We read too that standard wheat contracts are also being introduced between growers and the Central Marketing Staff—and we have something of the same sort here. Also there is mention made of an effort which seems to be meeting with success for having what they term "middle-class families" going on the land. How many such schemes we have tried is not certain at the moment, but reading of India trying to get people on the land does not introduce anything with which we are not familiar.

And here is another. A conference was held to see what could be done about checking mass migration of locusts, and plans were made for a large-scale investigation of the breeding grounds, for it is recognized that any control must be exercised here. And that sort of news suggested of course that we have worms of many kinds, and grasshoppers as well.

There has been a prohibition bill before the government, and the one point which seems in disagreement is the use of sacramental wine by the churches. The churches want prohibition but they want to retain the right to use wine of their own selection. And we have had that same problem in one form or another a good many times.

There was discussion in the last session of our parliament regarding rates of interest and other charges made by those dealing in small loans. In India they have been doing the same thing, only the money-lenders are known there as Pathans. The solution is that referees have been named and when a debt is paid or a loan made it can be done only in the presence of an official referee.

Strange as it may seem there is not a great deal of difference between the problems of government in India and Canada.

Turned a Good Phrase

Henry Ford celebrated his 75th birthday and there was a celebration of sorts for him in Detroit. A Canadian Press staff writer had opportunity to talk with him a short time, and that in itself was an accomplishment for there many people, writers and others, who have started out to see Henry Ford but who have never succeeded.

Mr. Ford believed he would do just about what he had done if he were going to live his life again. Of course that is an old topic for people to discuss on their birthdays, but Henry Ford has the happy faculty of saying old things in a better way. He was speaking of the value of gaining experience when he framed this phrase:

"I'm a great believer in the value of experience. Everything is experience. But experience is more than what happens to a man. What counts is what the man does with what happens to him."

And whether you admire Henry Ford or denounce him, we submit he said something there which any one can profit by taking home and keeping. Having experience is all right; we all have experience of one sort or another, but if that experience is not used then of what use is it? The answer to that is—none whatever.

They Are Great People

Happened to be looking through one of those "Who's Who" books and noting what some of the men had done whose names and pictures are included. For the most part they appear to have been busy people, doing useful things and tackling something and making a go of it. Saw too where one paper was running a series on "Leading People," and it is all very readable.

But there are some great people to whom we do not pay much attention and the reason is they do things about which so few people ever hear. At the moment we are thinking of a man and his wife and it would do no good to publish their names. They would not want it; they do not live in Peterborough.

These people are not well off; the husband is a hard-working mechanic and there is a family of three children. There is also a mortgage on the house where they live but for years it has been gradually reduced.

Four years ago the man's brother felt hard times getting the best of him in the West, and he also has a wife and three children. The only thing to do seemed to bring that family East and that was done, even to paying nearly all the transportation charges. The house was not large, but whereas it had housed five it had to extend itself to contain ten. The brother in the East kept on working but the brother from the West found it difficult to find anything except odd jobs. His wife heard of a place where she could go late afternoon and evening and do the sweeping and cleaning. There was some objection from members of both families, but she went. Cleaning out a waste basket she found some booklets on chicken incubators and took them home. The husband from the West finally went to the place where such equipment is made and asked if he might have work there long enough to pay for part of a small incubator. Three weeks later he got the place. While he was working there he received no wages in cash but his wife from her earnings sent him enough to keep him.

Today the family from the West have a plot of eleven acres of land on which they are all working. There were some old buildings on the place and these were utilized. They are not yet "making money" but they are making a living. The brother in the East had been regular in making payments on the mortgage on his home, and he was allowed by the holder of the mortgage company to suspend these because he wanted to use the money to help his brother and family get started.

We are certain as can be that none of these people will appear in "Who's Who," nor is it at all likely they will ever be known or referred to as "Leading People." Judge for yourself but we have an idea they are great people and that is why the story is being printed.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Our neighbor Lindsay cannot complain that Mr. Storm King overlooked it when making a tour of the district.

Probably there is truth enough in the claim that flattery is 90 per cent. soft soap and also in the added assertion that soft soap is about 90 per cent. lye.

There used to be a discussion as to whether the world was round or flat, but a good many folk have compromised on the belief that part of it is crooked.

When a man comes home at 2 in the morning and tells his wife he has been "beerfully fizzy" at the office she is quite justified in becoming suspicious.

There is one school of thought which says manufacturing should be done without profit, and there are manufacturers today who contend that is exactly what is taking place.

So often there are reports which tell of some person being "rushed to the hospital." Truth is the ambulance generally seems to be going at a very reasonable and careful rate.

Man who sat on a flagpole for 27 days said he feared several times he would be hit by lightning. If there was any such danger he'd have to admit he was up there asking for it.

Two Toronto men have been taken to hospital to have fish hooks cut out. That is probably right enough but we can find nothing in the Fish and Game Laws covering the operation.

J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., advises young people to get into political life without waiting for some one to shove them in. That's fine but the sad part is that afterward there will arise those who want to shove them out.

STRANGE

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When I was but a little lad, one thing there was which made me glad, I really had no plan; it thrilled me quite a lot I know, to think how I would come and go, when I became a man.

¶ They would not warn me any more, than I should come home after four, as soon as school was through; they would not tell me as I went, I knew exactly what they meant, for there were chores to do.

¶ And when the day was spent and gone, and I commenced to turn and yawn, I knew what would be said; they'd turn and look at me at nine, and tell and tell me how it was high time, that I had gone to bed.

¶ When I'm a man I used to say, I'd stay out either night or day, my time would be my own; I'd eat just what I wanted to, and none would warn me how to chew, or I must hurry home.

¶ But now that I'm an oldish gent, and feeling just a trifle bent, there's much I cannot eat; and I hop fast instead of slow, each time I hear the whistles blow, there's blisters on my feet.

¶ I find that I have little say, in what I'll do each passing day, I walk with weary men; odd notions now and then will strike, and make me feel that I should like—to be a boy again.

Diesel Was Lost In Strange Way

(Condensed from Paris-Soir, Paris)

THE ONLY inventor's name that figured in the Treaty of Versailles was that of Diesel, in a clause which prohibited the manufacture and use of Diesel engines by Germany for ten years.

Twenty-five years ago, on the eve of the Great War, Diesel disappeared mysteriously. The secret of his death has never been revealed.

The son of a working bookbinder of Augsburg who had come to France to perfect himself in his trade, Rudolf Diesel was born in Paris and spoke French before he knew a word of his father's language. When the Franco-German War broke out in 1870 the bookbinder and his family installed themselves in London, not to return to Paris until the end of the war. It was then that Diesel pere sent his son to his parents, who were still living at Augsburg, in order that he might learn German and also a trade. On the latter point the boy had already made up his mind; he wanted to be an engineer.

When his studies were concluded, Diesel returned to Paris. His first decisive discovery in the domain of oil motors dates from 1893.

Diesel received a letter from the celebrated German manufacturer, Krupp, who offered to place at his disposal, for the perfecting of his invention, a laboratory, material and workmen. Naturally the young engineer hastened to accept the flattering offer.

After a few months of trial and research, the first Diesel model emerged from the Krupp factory all ready to function. Its demonstration was entirely satisfactory to the experts and the all-powerful Krupp promised Diesel that he would secure the patent for him.

The obtaining of an industrial patent is perhaps more complicated in Germany than anywhere else, but when months had passed and the matter still remained in suspense, Diesel became impatient. Making inquiries, he discovered that the person who was causing most of the delay was no other than a member of the all-powerful Krupp trust. When he demanded an explanation he was discreetly informed that all who owed the success of their inventions to the generosity of Friedrich Krupp considered it quite natural that the fruit of their researches should be patented under the name of their benefactor, contenting themselves with a certain percentage of the profits....

The vast factories of the German "Iron King" began to produce the new motors on a large scale. It brought countless wealth to Krupp ....The inventor got nothing but the glory.

Diesel clenched his fists and began to plan his vengeance, the vengeance of a genius. He worked night and day and finally produced a new Diesel Motor, more powerful, more economical and cheaper than the one put on the market by Krupp. He was able to eliminate certain imperfections in the former model. His plan of vengeance was going to be successful.

But the new motor could not be patented until the patent of the former one had expired. Ten years...

Diesel waited. Work made him forget his worries, success consoled him.

In 1911 the ten years had expired. Diesel, in the presence of a company of experts sent by the Ministry of Marine, demonstrated his new model. The new Diesel motor could be used in locomotives and even on large steamers. Krupp was "sunk!"

The German Minister of War wanted to buy the new model for the manufacture of submarines.

But the arrangements dragged. Diesel then discovered that behind the slowness of the Admiralty was the all-powerful influence of his old enemy, Krupp, who feared dangerous competition.

That same day he wrote London. The English naturally hastened to accept his offer. A group of financiers was formed with a view to buying the rights for the exploitation of his patent.

Fourteen days after his last unlucky interview at the German Admiralty, Diesel arrived at Antwerp. That was on the 27th of September. On the 28th, at six o'clock in the evening, he embarked on board the Dresden for Harwich where a delegation from the British Diesel Company awaited him.

But Diesel never arrived in England. His baggage was found in his cabin, but the engineer himself had disappeared without leaving a trace.

To The Editor

AGE AT ENLISTMENT

Editor Examiner,

Sir: In tonight's paper I noticed an article on page 2 where a Mr. Holbrook of Peterborough had enlisted during the Great War at 13 years and 6 months of age.

I do not want to take any honors away from Mr. Holbrook, but think I have him beaten a little as far as age is concerned.

In 1915 at 12 years of age I enlisted with the 109th Toronto home service regiment.

In 1916 I enlisted with the 12th York Rangers Home Service Regiment as a bugler.

In Sept. 1916 I enlisted as a trumpeter in the C.A.B.C. for overseas service but was later kicked out as under age.

In Jan. 1917 I enlisted in the R.N.C.V.R., was in England within a month and on active service aboard a mine sweeper before I was 15 years of age and served on active service until the armistice was signed. So I think that you will agree that my service record is hard to beat as far as age is concerned.

Yours truly,
CHAS. E. QUICK.

• Beaver Spoiling the Fishing

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

BEFORE us as we write, there are several books, a temperature indicator, and several other things, but we are not seeing any of these things this morning. Our mind is miles and miles away. Our mind is on a trout stream in the north.

Funny thing about this trout stream. It is not a large stream of water, neither is it very wide. But when our luck has failed us in every other part of that country we invariably come back to this creek and secure all the speckled trout we care to take.

Nature has been most kind to this stream. It is bordered on both sides by alders for several miles. Remember the time we stepped into this water and waded every inch of it from a dense woods at the north to where it enters a dangerous black-bottomed lake. No one could wade that creek downstream today. The alders have spread over the surface of the water, long wooden fingers that would prevent man from wiping out every last trout in that stream.

Two or three times we have been on this stream this year and it has not failed us yet. The other day we were somewhat curious to know why the water level of the lakes below was down and knowing there was a less pretentious stream helping to feed those lakes we set out to investigate. And then we came across the work of the greatest engineer in the world, the Canadian beavers.

This beaver colony has created a lake and above it, flooded a narrow valley for over half a mile. And as the path to other lakes farther northwest crossed this valley, we decided that something should be done about it. And so we went down to the beaver dam and opened it up a bit. The beaver had dammed back so much water that in the two hours we spent on the dam the water level had not dropped more than half an inch.

But we knew darn well that the beaver in their house in the marsh knew what was going on, knew that some person was interfering with their newly constructed dam and that long before we had put on our nightie and had turned out the light in the tent for the night that they would be repairing any damage that we had made.

This week-end we go back again to the same place. The same companions will be with us. But this time our first job will be to pay a visit to the beaver dam and give those industrious animals some work to do. In damming up this creek they are preventing the trout from getting from one lake to another and are driving them out of the shallow lake below.

Yes, we are not seeing very much hereabouts this morning. Those beaver are not worrying us any, they must not be injured in any way—they are too human for that—but they must be kept in their place. Whiskey Marsh is up the path that crosses the valley they have flooded and our hip boots leak pretty badly back of the knees. And in Whiskey Marsh, according to one Jimmie MacGregor, there are trout that are really and truly wild and hard to take. And if there is anything left in the north country that is wild and hard to take we are on its trail.

• When You Drive Your Car

(By Dept. of Highways)

DON'T insist on your "right of way." Your life and your health are much more important.

Watch the car ahead and don't follow too closely.

Watch the car behind and signal your intention to stop or change direction.

Never pass another vehicle on a hill or curve or at any point where the view is obstructed.

Slow down at crossings, street intersections, schools, and when passing parked cars. A few seconds lost may save a lifetime of regret.

Observe road signs and signals. They have a definite purpose — to prevent accidents.

Be particularly careful when passing pedestrians or bicyclists. Get your foot on the brake, then sound the horn if it is absolutely necessary.

Never drive after drinking—for the same reason that you don't want the other driver to do so.

Never drive on a strange road as fast as you would on one that you know. On strange roads you are largely dependent upon road signs which may not be adequate.

Observe this rule: Drive as you would have others drive.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

...motor vehicle accidents cost the citizens of Ontario about $30,000,000 a year?

...each year about 560 persons are killed and over 10,000 injured—many of them permanently disabled or disfigured?

...ability to operate a car—to stop and start, shift gears smoothly or turn a corner properly—does not in itself constitute good driving?

...most accidents are caused either because the driver did not see or anticipate what was coming, or because he saw what was coming but too late to do anything about it?

...it takes the average driver about three-quarters of a second to get his foot off the accelerator and on to the brake, and that at 40 miles an hour the performance of this action takes up 44 feet, or more than a third of your total stopping distance?

...at 30 miles an hour you are travelling 44 feet a second and that your minimum stopping distance would be 73 feet?

...at 50 miles an hour you are travelling 74 feet a second and that it would take at least 160 feet to bring your car to a stop?

...people get into accidents, not because they want to, but because they don't try hard enough to keep out of accidents?

...it's the minor mistakes which cause most of the major accidents?

...the force of impact with a fixed object at 40 miles an hour is the same as if the car had fallen from the top of a four-story building?

...to drive past parked cars or in the presence of pedestrians at, say, 30 miles an hour, is dangerous driving?

...other drivers operate their cars for their pleasure and convenience and they expect the same courtesy from you that you expect from them?

MOTOR FATALITIES.

(Bureau of Statistics)

WITH all but three provinces reporting more deaths in 1937 from motor vehicle accidents in Canada than in 1936, the number of deaths from this cause reached the highest point in any year for which complete data are available. The number of deaths was 1,626 against 1,316 in 1936 and 1,224 in 1935. The death rate was 14.6 per 100,000 population as compared with 11.9 in 1936 and 11.2 in 1935.

Six provinces showed a greater number of deaths than in 1936, two the same number and one province a smaller number. The totals follow, with figures for 1936 in brackets: Prince Edward Island, 7 (7); Nova Scotia, 83 (60); New Brunswick, 67 (41); Quebec, 405 (371); Ontario, 772 (564); Manitoba, 66 (53); Saskatchewan, 47 (47); Alberta, 55 (72); British Columbia, 124 (101).

CONSUMER COSTS DOWN.

(Marketing)

AT THE MID-YEAR convention of the National Retail Dry Goods Association in Cincinnati this month it was shown that a list of twenty items purchased daily by the consumer at an average department store apparel and home furnishings, cost $450 in the 1920's, but the same goods could be bought in the 1930's for $300. The savings of $150 were accounted for in this way: $40 represented lower costs of raw material; $57.50 a reduction in the cost of manufacturing; and $52.50 a lowering of the cost of distribution.

The silver rides in an open truck, and from the window one may try for a thrill by looking down at about $400,000 worth at a time—not much more romantic to see than a load of coal, a neat pile of darkened metal bricks, each one like three or four sash weights melted together.

THRIVING ON ADVERSITY.

(Detroit News)

TECHNICALLY at least, the automobile industry thrives on adversity. A bad year sharpens the edge of competition. Engineer and designers are exhorted to surpass themselves to woo the favour of next year's customers. Imaginations work overtime and files are combed for the bright ideas of yesteryear, laid away then as not meriting present exploitation. It is legitimate to look forward to something pretty novel and exciting in the models to be unveiled at the shows this fall. The buying public, it may be hazarded, will find them sweet indeed.

For the first six months in 1938, there have been 18. Considering the physical fitness these men must have, there must be something wrong with the system and work conditions.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

COMFORT YE, comfort ye my people, saith your God....He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young....

Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard, that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary? there is no searching of his understanding.

He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength. Even the youths shall faint and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall: but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint.—Isa. xl, 1, 11, 28-31.

A GAMBLING GAME.

(Kitchener Record)

THE FACT that hogs are commanding a good price, up to a few days ago the highest since the close of the Great War, is good news for the farmer who is able to take advantage of the strength in the hog market. However, the scarcity of hogs is what sent the price up, so it can be taken for granted that not every farmer is in a position to "unload" while returns are lucrative. It goes to show that the inexorable law of supply and demand still plays an all-important part in price regulation, although quality has considerable bearing on it too.

Probably many farmers who scramble to get into the hog raising business when the prices are up will begin to see the wisdom of maintaining a steady production the year round so that when the hog market is strong they can reap the additional profit.

Farming, as we have said before, is a gambling game. It's like playing the stock market. You can expect to make money by buying at the high price and selling at the low. Although one chief difference is that you can hold the stock certificate, hoping for a boom, whereas if the farmer keeps a batch of hogs in the pen too long in the anticipation of getting a better price he is likely to be docked for selling hogs that are overweight. That's where he gets it in the neck.

CRIME'S PROFITS SMALL.

(Columbus Dispatch)

THAT "crime doesn't pay" appears to be in danger of becoming one of those sententious platitudes which lose all meaning through repetition. This would be a pity, for, as applied to the great majority of criminally disposed individuals, it is literally and actually true—An illuminating proof of this fact is furnished by the government bulletin which discloses that last year in the United States the average robber got only $89.36 on the "job" for which he was convicted, and the average burglar, $59.19, and the average larcenist, $29.27. Yet men — particularly those in their 'teens and twenties—gamble on sudden violent death or long terms of imprisonment for such paltry gain

MISPLACED SYMPATHY

Two fishermen, named Smith, living near each other, had met with misfortune, one having lost his wife and the other his boat. A lady visitor called by mistake on the man who lost his boat, thinking he was the widower. "Good morning, Mr. Smith," she said. "I am sorry to hear of your sad loss."

"Oh, it ain't much matter, mum, she wasn't up to much!" he replied.

"Dear me!" exclaimed the visitor, "you don't say so!"

"Ay, she were a rickety old crock. When I went out with her I was always in danger of my life. Indeed I offered her to my mate only last week, but he would not have her. I've had my eye on another for some time past."

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, is in love with Dr. Julian Paige, a serious-minded young physician who declares he will not permit himself to fall in love with Noel because of the contrasting worlds in which they live. Determined to show Julian she has stamina, Noel gives up a long trip with her aunt, turns over her income of $100,000 to her uncle who is in financial difficulties, buys her first outfit of inexpensive clothes and tells Julian she is going to find a job. After moving to a dingy rooming house, she finds an ad for a governess. About to start on her new adventure, she finds her purse has been stolen, leaving her with only $4. Applying for the governess post, Noel is given a cool reception and no job. Later, dropping in at Julian's office, she is irked by the antagonistic manner of Ruth Chester, his nurse.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 5

AFTER RUTH CHESTER shut the door of Julian's office in Noel's face, Noel walked across the street to the De Luxe, and had a solitary dinner of doughnuts and coffee. It was all she could afford, if she hoped to make her money last until she found a job.

The next morning when she awakened, her stomach was clamoring wildly for food. She knew that regardless of what it might cost, she would have to have a substantial meal before she could even hope to accomplish a thing.

She dressed in the suit, a fresh linen blouse, put on the comfortable oxfords, pulled the blue felt hat with its perky high crown down over her blond curls, and went to the same little cafe where she had breakfasted before. After eggs, bacon, toast and coffee, she again felt capable of meeting her problems.

Buying a newspaper, she went over once more to the little Front street park, being careful to keep her bag in her lap while she studied the advertisements.

There didn't seem to be a thing she could fill. She read the ads over several times, in the hope that she might have overlooked something. She couldn't help a little sigh when she thought of the expensive finishing schools she had attended. Why hadn't she been taught something useful such as stenography and typing? Then it wouldn't have been any trouble to find a job.

Suddenly Noel realized that a girl was sitting on the bench next to her, a shabby suitcase on the ground at her feet. She was brown-haired and brown-eyed. There were little brown freckles on her winsome face. Noel also saw after a second glace that there were unmistakable traces of tears around her eyes.

On a sudden impulse, Noel moved to the edge of the bench and asked, "Is anything wrong?"

The girl lifted her brown eyes and looked at Noel coolly. "Plenty," she said and then lapsed into silence.

After a moment, Noel said gently, "Perhaps it would help to tell somebody about it."

The girl looked at Noel again, as if sizing her up. She seemed to decide at last that Noel wanted to be friendly, so she said with a little shrug, "Oh, it's the same old story. I got fired last night. And I'm broke. The landlady put me out, and I was lucky to get away with my clothes."

While Noel was trying to decide what she could say to comfort her, the girl went on bitterly, "Can you believe it There are girls in the world who sleep in satin beds with maids to wait on 'em, and everything in the world they want, and then there are girls like me, who don't even know whether they're going to eat or not. Funny, isn't it?"

"It—doesn't seem fair," Noel admitted. "Where did you work?" she asked.

"Taxi dancer at Nick Luigi's club on Seventh street. It wasn't the kind of job I wanted," the girl went on, "but you were paid every night, and that gave you a chance during the day to look for the sort of job you did want. Only I never did find it."

Noel had only a vague idea of what a taxi dancer's duties were, but she didn't ask. Instead, she said, "Well I haven't a job either. But I'm sure I'll get one before long."

"Then why don't you go get the one at Nick's?" the girl suddenly exclaimed. "Blondes like you—" she began.

"Do you think I could?" Noel asked quickly.

"If you can dance, honey, it's in the bag," the girl said.

A few minutes later Noel knew this girl's simple story. Her name was Laurie Evans, she had come from a little country town, where she had been brought up in an orphanage, and had found a place as cashier in a restaurant. For over a year she had stayed there, and then the place had been sold, and the new owner put his wife in as cashier. Since then, she hadn't been able to find anything except the job at Luigi's.

"I'm going right over there now and see if I can get it," Noel said. "And if I do," she went on firmly, "you and I are going to go fifty-fifty. Now you promise to wait here until I come back and let you know."

Laurie looked at her, a flush on her little freckled face. "Would you honestly take me in? You don't know a thing about me."

"Of course I'm going to do that very thing," Noel said with a smile.

Admonishing Laurie again to wait right there, Noel set out at once for Nick Luigi's club. She found it without any trouble. There was a gilded peacock sign over the door, which was probably lighted by electricity at night. But inside it was very dismal looking, the floor covered with crumpled paper napkins and all kinds of debris, the chairs upended in the corners, and empty bottles everywhere.

Noel asked a man in a soiled white jacket who was ambling around wth a dust pan, where she could find Mr. Luigi.

Another minute and she was facing him, a dark man with pale eyes, either blue or gray, and a neat black mustache. He had a cigar in one corner of his mouth and he spoke in a surprisingly distinct voice, although hardly moving his lips.

"If you can dance, baby, the job's yours."

Noel could dance. That was one thing she had learned at the expensive finishing school.

She was given a tryout while a frowsky-haired man played a dance selection on a rather battered grand piano. Both men gave nods of approvalw hen Noel finished the pretty solo dance.

Nick Luigi took the cigar from his mouth and said in his queer, rather secretive voice. "You'll do kid. Don't know where you learned to dance like that, but you're the very sort of kid we're looking for."

So Ncel had a job for which she would be paid a flat sum of $2 every night. She and Laurie could have a good lunch now, and she would take the girl home with her to the room on Court street.

It was surprising how the prospect of a good meal cheered Noel up. Two dollars seemed like real money.

She hurried back to Front street park to tell Laurie the good news. They sat there a while and talked things over, then had lunch, after which Noel gave Laurie a dollar outof her little store, and the address on Court street.

Laurie, who had at first regarded Noel's offer of friendship with a slight suspicion, believed in her completely now. "I never dreamed of finding a friend like you," she said with tears in her eyes. "But I'll get a job some day and I'll pay you back."

Noel gave her a friendly touch on the shoulder. "We'll both get jobs sooner or later. Then everything will be fine.'

Noel knew already that she wasnt going to stay the Peacock Dance Hall any longer than she could find something else. The building was nice enough, in good repair, consisting of three stories with the dance place on the main floor. But it was Nick Luigi himself Noel distrusted. The way he had looked at her out of his pale eyes gave her a feeling of resentment. She didn't intend staying there a moment longer than she had to.

At 6 o'clock Noel went to the De Luxe. She decided she wouldn't venture again to Julian's office, remembering Ruth Chester's rebuff, and the fact that there had been something malicious about the way she had closed Julian's office door in her face.

Walking down Madison, when Noel had about reached the cafe, she saw Ruth Chester coming out of the revolving doors of the Medical Arts building—and following her was Julian. He started to walk on with Ruth. Then he saw Noel and quickly crossed the street. "Look here, young lady," he exclaimed, taking Noel's arm, "I've got something serious to say to you."

According to the lunar aspects, this may be a day of upheaval. It is not particularly favorable for employment, and it probably will result in a change of environment. It has something to do with feminine influence and had best be handled with strategy and intrigue rather than direct methods.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate change and upheaval that may lead to an advantage if handled with tact and diplomacy.

A feminine influence may come to the rescue.

A child born on this day may be unsettled and nervous. It may succeed away from its present environments and it may be crafty and shrewd.

Goodnight Story

"There!" said Ting-a-Ling to Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children. "That's the circus! Isn't it beautiful?"

"It's the loveliest circus I've ever seen," Hanid said.

"Let's go inside now," said Knarf. "Should we crawl under the flap, or go in the regular way?"

Ting-a-Ling stood for a moment, thinking. Finally he said: "When I was a boy I always climbed in under the flap. It's lots of fun that way. We'll go in under the flap."

"Hooray!"

"First, though," he added the next moment, "we'll get a ticket for Hanid so that she can go in the regular way."

With that he went up to the ticket office and bought a ticket for Hanid. He said to the man sitting at the entrance: "Just one ticket, please, for the little girl. Knarf and I are climbing in under the flap of the tent."

"That's not allowed in this circus," the man replied.

Hanid Goes in Alone.

But Ting-a-Ling just smiled at

"That's the circus!"

Hanid. "We'll meet you inside, my dear. Hurry along now or we'll be in before you."

So Hanid went inside th regular way while Ting-a-Ling and Knarf walked around to the other side of the tent. Finally, they found a place where the flap of the tent was a little loose, leaving a space just wide enough to crawl through.

Just then a very surprising thing happened. They both noticed a little rope lying on the ground. They couldn't see it very well, but they could feel it. "I think," said Ting-a-Ling, "that if we both take hold of this rope we can pull ourselves in very easily."

Dear me! They both took hold of the rope. And the next instant — you can have no idea of what happened the next instant!

Toronto Rider Is Injured In Cycle Crash

The condition of Jack Couch, injured motorcyclist, was reported as good this morning at Nicholls Hospital. Couch, a Toronto rider, had a bad spill yesterday at the motorcycle races in the Exhibition Ground and suffered concussion and cuts on the face. Couch spent a "fairly good" night, it was said today, and he appeared in no grave danger. The Toronto youth was expected to be discharged from the hospital shortly.

His skidding motorcycle threw him at the north-west turn in the track during a heat on Civic Holiday in the five-mile novice race for the Canadian dirt track championship. There was a loud gasp from the big crowd at the accident and many rushed to the scene. Couch was reported merely shaken up and with a cut lip, but later an examination showed slight concussion, as well as three cuts on the face. First-aid work was done promptly at the track by members of the St. John's Ambulance Corps, led by Divisional Supt. L. E. Tomkins, who transported the injured rider to the hospital.

R. Pulkinghorn Champion Juniper Regatta

Ross Pulkinghorn and Kay Acton won the men's and women's open championship at the Juniper Island regatta on Monday afternoon, beating a crack field by narrow margins. Enthusiastic acclaim was accorded Miss Acton when she accepted the championship trophy from the hands of her mother, Mrs. Ross Acton, who had donated the cup.

Brilliant sunshine broke through a dull day in early afternoon and all events were run off under near perfect conditions, choppy water being the only handicap. Spills were the order of the day and scarcely an event was raced but at least one canoe upset. In one race three of seven or eight canoes entered spilled before the finish line.

It was the largest regatta of the season and boats came from the myriad of islands on Stoney Lake to watch the events. A large field was entered and the races saw some of the closest competition found at any regatta this year.

Kay Acton was by all odds the outstanding woman competitor at the meet. She won the ladies' single canoe race; the ladies tandem with Ruth East; was on the winning team in the mixed four-in-canoe race. Pulkinghorn carried off first honors in the men's tandem with George Thompson; was first in the gunwale race; won the men's crab race; and was on the winning team in the mixed four-in-canoe race.

Hundreds of water craft circled around the wharf at Juniper to watch the races and the shore was crowded until near sundown. Prizes were presented by Mrs. J. M. Fairburn immediately following the conclusion of events and then the crowd disappeared as if by magic, streaking away by water to dozens of islands on Stoney Lake. Within half an hour after events had concluded, Juniper was a deserted island.

Judges at the meet were Lymon Crawford Brown, R. E. Taylor, and Bob Lyon. Bill Beatty and J. G. Spragge were official starters.

Prize winners were as follows:

Power boats under 4 h.p.—1, George Guillett; 2, Jack Laidlaw.

Marmora Social Is Lively Affair

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Aug. 2.—In order to raise funds to purchase more equipment for the Legion Brass Band and the Youth Movement Trumpet Band a lawn social on a pretentious scale was held on Marmora Agricultural Grounds on Friday evening under auspices of Marmora branch of the Canadian Legion.

The proceedings opened with a softball game between Marmora all stars and Eldorado, winners of their league. The homesters won by 19-14, coming from behind in the fifth.

Score by innings:

Eldorado	220 610 3—14
Marmora	161 164 x—19

Teams:

Eldorado—Peate, cf; Shaw, c; Wiley, 3b; Blakely, 2b; Martin, p, lf; Neal, 1b; Holmes, lf, p; Thompson, rf; Stewart, ss.

Marmora.—McInroy, c; Burridge, 2b; Graw, 3b; Osborne, lf; Phillips, cf; O'Brien, ss; Hart, rf; Fox, p; Hollingsworth, 1b; Reynolds, p.

Shortly after the conclusion of the game, Comrade T. E. Pritchard acted as chairman for an extended program, given in the following order:

Selection by the band; songs, Dan Shannon; band selection; song and tap dance, Nita Dorie; song, Sammy Gifford; songs, J. F. Bakeer; cornet solos, Jack Foy; selection, band; step dancing, B. Clare; duets, Irene and Harry White; violin numbers, Gordon Brown; instrumental duet, Bert Kouri and Eugene Reynolds; bones, Morley Stocker; cowboy song, Harry White; songs, Chairlie Cummings; tap dance, Nita Dorie; song, Tommy Mason.

In the large exhibition building a goodly section of the large crowd in attendance then enjoyed dancing with Tommy Mason's orchestra of Belleville, furnishing the music.

Booths and games received a good patronage, making the event most successful.

Alf Scadding, who was to have been present, in a letter which was read to the gathering, deeply regretted his inability to be present through recurring foot trouble.

This Meant Death For Fifty-three

Fifty-three persons were killed and over 100 were injured when a Colombian army airplane plunged in flames into the grandstand during the aviation review at the dedication of Bogota's new airfield. The plane narrowly missed the box occupied by President Lopez and President-elect Eduardo Santos. The above photograph was taken just as the plunging airplane hit the grandstand.

Vegetables Are Very Plentiful

Vegetables were plentiful and cheap on the local market Saturday with the advantage all in favor of buyers. Golden bantam corn on the cob opened at 25 cents a dozen, but later in the day Herb Doig offered a large supply at two-dozen for 25 cents. Carrots and beets were first quoted at 5 cents a bunch, or three bunches for 10 cents, but Mr. Doig disposed of quite a lot of both beets and carrots at 25 cents for a dozen bunches. Cabbages were five cents each, or three heads for ten cents, and Mr. Doig's price was 30 cents a dozen.

Some of the growers won't like it," he commented to the Examiner, "but I've got a lot of them, and there's no use carrying them over the holiday."

Cauliflower prices were 5 and 10 cents a head, according to size, and other two for 15 cents; cucumbers 5 and 10 cents, and green peppers two for 5 cents and three for 10 cents were other quotations.

Potatoes were abundant at 20 and 25 cents a peck; shelled peas 10 to 13 cents a quart, were scarce; and string beans were 5 cents a quart. A dollar bill would have sent any buyer home with a load of garden produce.

Bert Arnott's price of 40 cents a basket for tomatoes was the lowest on the market. Others were quoted at 50 cents.

Huckleberries dropped to a new low at 11 quarts for $1.00 or 10 cents a quart. This fruit was large and clean, and obviously a bargain. Red raspberries sold at 10 cents a box or three for 25 cents, full-sized fruit at a price that could have left scant profit for the gardeners. Cherries were 50 cents for six quart baskets.

Honey was steady at 55 cents for four pound tins. The quality is exceptionally good this season. Apples were more numerous than a week ago. Yellow transparents were 20 to 25 cents a basket, Duchess and Alexanders 25 cents, and Norman Moncrief had the only Red Astrakans at 30 cents a six quart basket.

Butter was steady at 25 cents a pound, eggs still firm at 27 and 28 cents and chickens at 22 and 23 cents.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowel movement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

MORE ABOUT—

Anticosti Being

the island and adjacent coasts for suitable terrain for air bases.

The ship and accompanying planes will then sail for the Magdalen Islands and make similar surveys there.

Action by the Minister of National Defense renders impossible the use of Anticosti by any non-British power.

The island is owned by the Consolidated Paper Corporation who bought it from Gaston Menier in 1926 for $6,500,000. During the war it was still owned by Menier, and his "Director-General," G. M. Zede, urged upon the Dominion Government that the island should be manned and armed to prevent its use by the German as a submarine base.

Deal Starts Action

Recent negotiations for the sale of Anticesti to a German syndicate brought the issue again to the forefront. The syndicate through a Dutch agent approached the corporation and took an option to purchase.

Last November the syndicate visited Montreal, and after a conference with officials of the corporation, visited the island.

The proposed sale came to public knowledge and was aired on the floor of Parliament and numerous protests reached the Government against permitting the Island to get into foreign ownership.

The Department of National Defense investigated. The proposed purchasers insisted that they were interested only in the pulpwood and other natural resources.

Premier Duplessis of Quebec stated that he would not permit any pulpwood to be exported.

The Dominion, however, has extaken no action with respect to the sale negotiations. Anticosti is part of the Province of Quebec which controls prperty and civil rights.

The Dominin, however, has exclusive jurisdiction with respect to the property rights and privileges of aliens in Canada. No members of the syndicate of Canadian, but are German financiers, engineers, foresters and accountants.

With respectto the defense measures thenational defense officers are carrying out, the Dominion has exclusive authority and jurisdiction.

Under Section 117 of the B.N.A. Act and SCection 7 of the Militia Act the Dominin has predominant authority on matters pertaining to the defense of Canada.

The ownership of the Island, nor the Provincial jurisdiction do not in any way affect the Dominion's right to take over and expropriate any territory needed for defense purposes.

The "venture" expedition may therefore select such areas as needed in the defense scheme, and the Dominion may take action to segregate them.

Hub Of Defense?

Anticosti Island may therefore become the hub of defense wheel, both for the R.C.A.F. and the Royal Canadian Navy. It is considered highly essential that the St. Lawrence be freed from any menace in the event of hostilities.

The island was originally the gift of Louis XIV to Henri Joliet, in 1680. It is 135 miles long and 30 miles wide, with an area of 8,557 square miles.

In 1763 it was annexed to Newfoundland and in 1774 reannexed to Canada. In 1874 the Anticosti Island Company was formed by members of the Forsyth family of Quebec.

There were several abortive attempts at colonization. In 1895 the island was sold to Henri Menier, the French chocolate king. He built up a chateau and set up a little kingdom. It was not very successful.

Menier died in 1913 and his brother, Gaston, carried on. The fall of the French franc in 1918 administered a severe setback.

"Director-General" Zede, during the war, was an officer of the French artillery. On his return in July, 1918, he became alarmed about the German submarine menace.

He drew up a plan of defense for the island, but men and munitions were more urgently needed on more direct battlefronts and nothing was done.

TOO OLD AT FIFTY?

There are far too many men and women in the forties and fifties who think they're "beyond" enjoying work or play. What a mistake! Just when you're old enough to know how to enjoy yourself, to give up because sluggishness and general unfitness make you feel "not up to it"!

Take a look at wealthier people. Do they give in to middle-age? Not likely! They try to keep themselves in the pink of condition until advanced old age; bodies young, minds alert.

How do they manage it? Many by taking the waters at famous Spas. But I can't afford to go to Spas, you'll say. You don't have to, now. Similar benefits of Spa waters can come to you! The combination of the elements of Sodium, Potassium and Lithium in Fynnon Salt gives you remedial effect similar to that which wealthy people go miles to get from Spa waters. "Salts of the Earth" break up the painfully pronged Uric Acid crystals—aid in removing poisons from your body—help stimulate the liver to do its job thoroughly again.

BANK ROBBERS BELIEVED TO HAVE CAMPED ON CHEMONG LAKE

Higher Standing Is Granted Children's Aid Society Government Grant Increased

First Time In History Of the Organization "C" Rating Is Given

Peterborough's Children's Aid Society has been raised from "D" to "C" category, and will receive an additional $500 grant each year from the government, the Minister of Public Welfare has notified Rev Dr. A. T. Barr, chairman. It is the first time in the history of the organization that its standing has been higher than the "D" rating.

"This is an indication that the policy of the board is being vindicated and that efficiency is bringing rewards," Dr. Barr said.

The Department of Welfare's full report to the society will not be considered until the society's annual meeting in September and the chairman did not reveal its contents in full. "There are still some improvements to be worked out," Dr. Barr said.

"It is with pleasure that we are able to state that your society has earned a promotion to "C" category," the report said in part. "Your society is to be congratulated on the choice made when choosing a new superintendent. With Miss Rachel Young's training and experience she should prove a decided asset."

Children's Aid societies throughout the province are grouped in categories from "A," carrying a grant of $2,500 a year, to "E" carrying a grant of only $100. Changes in the standing of a society are determined by reports submitted to the department by inspectors who visit the organization from time to time. Under former management the reports were unfavorable, but since the appointment of Miss Young early this year the society has been hoping for the increased grant.

Options Of Cool Cells In Two Liquor Cases

For having liquor in a place other than his residence, an open "crock" in his pack, Michael Cole was fined $100 plus $4.50 costs or three months in jail by Magistrate Langley.

Second offence by a young man who is on the booze black list brought him a fine of $50 with $4.50 costs or a hot month in a cool cell within the stone walls of the resort for offenders on the hill.

Charles Perry and his brother, Leslie, pleaded not guilty of assaulting Charles Swanson, foreman for the Johnston Construction Company who have the contract for transforming the Oregon trail into a highway, between Buckhorn and Burleigh Falls.

Leslie Perry said he wished to plead self-defence. "That means you want to plead not guilty," Magistrate Langley stated. Their lawyer, J. Arthur Fair, was in Toronto, and for that reason their case was enlarged until Friday. Swanson showed the Magistrate a gap where a tooth was missing. He said six witnesses in his behalf had come down from the road job in Harvey township.

A young man charged with theft of an automobile asked for an adjournment until Wednesday. Weekend drunk cases were summarily disposed of.

When Police Visited Cottage Party Of Four Had Left Police Searched Wide Area

Quintette Arrested Said To Have Pulled Richmond Bank Robbery

The arrest near Ottawa of Oscar Campbell and four other persons makes it possible for the Examiner to tell today the story of a thrilling man hunt in this district for four people suspected of participation in the armed holdup of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Richmond on July 12, a hunt that drew into this section of the province Inspector Mackay of the Criminal Investigation Bureau of the provincial police, Sergeant Labelle of the Ottawa division of the provincial police and other outside officers and enlisted the services of practically all the police in the neighborhood. The story has been kept out of print until now to assist the officers in their chase.

The excitement started on July 19 when a heavily rouged blonde woman entered the Lakefield branch of the Royal Bank and asked to have a large number of small bills converted into bills of larger denomination. The suspicions of the bank teller was aroused and when he called the manager the woman, remarking it did not matter, seized the money and departed hastily. Fortunately the number of the car in which she had arrived at the bank was taken and communicated to the police and at once suspicion that the money she had displayed was part of the loot taken at Richmond was set up. Nothing more was heard of the woman or the car until Friday when Constable Wallace Hendren received a tip that the car had been seen near Selwyn. Provincial Traffic officer Gordon Broughton, and Hendren hurried to Selwyn and discovered that the woman who had visited the bank was one of a party of four who had been occupying John Preston's cottage on Chemong Lake since July 10.

The Birds Had Flown

However, when they visited the cottage they found the quartette had left an hour previously. They discovered enough about the actions of the four to convince the authorities that they were on the trail of a suspicious gang. The found that the party had three cars, the Ford used by the woman when she drove to the Lakefield bank, a new Chevrolet with dealer's markers and a Hudson and that whenever the cars were in camp, something was hung over the numbers so that they could not be read. It was learned, too, that the men of the party were armed, the equipment including a rifle and a sawed-off shotgun.

There had been some promiscuous shooting around the camp for an outbuilding had been riddled with shotgun pellets and just before camp was abandoned one of the party had apparently deliberately shot a farmer's cow. A boat rented by the four was left on the beach.

The two officers tried to pick up the trail of the three cars but beyond ascertaining that they passed over the Oregon Trail from Buckhorn to Burleigh Falls, they could get no further trace of them. It was the opinion, however, that the cavalcade of wanted cars had struck north

The headquarters of the provincal police was notified and on Sunday Inspector Mackay, Sergeant Labelle of Ottawa, Sergeant Harry Thompson of Belleville and a number of other provincial constables from outside along with local members of the force visited the Preston cottage, inspecting it closely. They discovered a quantity of burned paper that was thought might have ben part of the bonds stolen at Richmond.

Scour North Country

Then the north country was scoured by the police but without success and the hunt has been kept up to some extent ever since although it was the opinion of the police that the wanted quartette had doubled back toward Ottawa, their stamping ground.

Two of the four in the party which spent ten days at Chemong Lake were arrested in Sunday's raid on a cottage on the Rideau River near Ottawa. They were Oscar Campbell, 41, who posed here as Ralph Forbes and who is charged with armed robbery and is also said to be wanted in connection with a murder in Outremont, Que., and Mary Donnelly, 28, who passed as Campbell's wife and is charged with conspiracy to stage an armed robbery. She was the woman who visited the Lakefield bank and whose actions eventually caused Campbell's capture.

It is believed that Campbell, the Donnelly woman and two other persons arrived here from the Ottawa district on the 10th of July. About that time a new Chevrolet car was stolen from the rear of J. K. Hughes garage and when the Richmond bank was robbed on the 12the vehicle used by the three armed robbers was a brand new Chevrolet. Later the party at Selwyn were reported as in possession of a new Chevrolet, with no license markers and it is thought that one of the five cars taken in Sunday's raid is the missing Hughes' machine.

$280,000 Voted Footbridge In 1917 Bylaw

A deputation from the north end of Ashburnham is expected to call upon the city council this evening with a demand for a footbridge at the Quaker Oats dam between London and Hazlett streets.

It is rumored that the neighbors across the river have been reviewing their bridge rights and assurances and some one remembered that the by-law of 1917 provided $280,000 for a bridge at London street as well as the Hunter street structure. The by-laws's intentions were broad enough, but the money fell short of the council's estimates. The Hunter street bridge cost nearly twice the amount voted, and so the London street bridge was quietly abandoned.

Whether any feature of the by-law of twenty years ago carried any assurance of promise that might affect to-day's negotiations may have to be decided by the council, but at any rate Ashburnham residents interpret it as promising a bridge at London street where the Quaker Oats Company has raised steel wire barriers.

When the council was taking a census of the traffic over the London stret dam, Ashburnham seemed to be entirely disinterested, and even the council was declaring that the result of the census warranted closing the dam to the public because the foot traffic was regarded as negligible.

However, when the steel gates went up and pedestrians were turned back from their accustomed path, the people of the north end of Ashburnham finally realized that the company had proceeded to erect the gates according to its repeated warnings to the council.

Unidentified Man Is Laid To Rest By Six Residents of Norwood Village

A nameless man lies buried today in Norwood cemetery, covered by flowers sent by two unidentified residents of the village.

Drowned in a pond in the village on Thursday, his body lay until Monday awaiting identification and then residents bore the casket containing his body to its grave beside their own people, after a funeral serice as complete as it would have been for one of their own. The pall bearers were among the town's most prominent citizens: Thomas N. Lumsden, A. A. Waddell, R. A. Dean, Dr. G. H. Carleton, Bert Lochead, and Gideon Brown. The funeral service was conducted from Tedford's Funeral Parlours by Rev. Mr. Robinson of the Norwood United church.

He also conducted a graveside service which almost a score of residents of the village attended. Two local ladies sent bouquets of flowers.

In spite of all efforts by police and Coroner Dr. H. G. Carleton, the identity of the young man was not learned before his funeral. A stiff left elbow, result of a surgical operation, is the only clue and may yet lead to his name, it is felt.
